VOL. 82. No. 121. PART ONE ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JANUARY 5, 1930. PAGES 1—12A ★★★★★ PRICE 10 CENTS

TITLED BROTHERS' $5,000,000 DEAL HELD UP BY JAIL

De Castros Can't Meet Immigration Office Demand to Post $500 Bond Apiece.

CUBAN CONSUL GOT THEIR PASSPORTS

Abreu, Unimpressed by "Special Envoys From Cuba" Who Had a Machine to Sell.

The fluctuating fortunes of Marquis Ciura de Castro and Count Jose Ciura de Castro slumped to a new low last night when the brothers were removed from Police Headquarters to the city jail because of their failure to post two $500 bonds required by the United States immigration authorities.

It was the greatest reverse the dapper Italian noblemen had suffered since their arrival in St. Louis a year and a half ago, full of plans to promote an invention with $1,000,000 worth of confidence and practically no cash.

They were arrested Friday night when Immigration Inspector Nash grew weary of ordering them to post bonds as surety that they would leave the United States March 11, when the extension of their visitors' passports expires. Nash announces that unless they produce bonds, he will hold them until the expiration date or until he receives the deportation warrant he has applied for.

Their Arrival Impressive.

The brothers arrived grandly in St. Louis in May, 1928. They registered at Hotel Chase, Marquis Rafael with his monocle and Count Jose with his huge coal-black Great Dane.

Then they called the Cuban Consul, A. G. Abreu, and announcing themselves as "special envoys in the diplomatic service of Cuba," commanded Abreu to come to their hotel at once.

"If you want to see me," Abreu told them, "you know where my office is. And furthermore, my Government has told me of no special diplomatic missions to St. Louis."

So the brothers de Castro called upon the Cuban Consul and presented their credentials. As inventors of the "Ciurascope," a device to locate automobile motor troubles by means of flashing lights, they had been privileged by the Cuban Government to attend an international aeronautical conference in Washington. They had come to St. Louis instead because they wanted to "get into close touch with the aviation industry."

"It seems to me," Abreu told them, "that you have just a business scheme you want to promote." And he declined their invitation to preside over a proposed banquet for newspaper representatives. He refused their request for introductions to newspaper editors. The brothers were not pleased.

Carried Cuban Flag on Auto.

Better to "get in touch with the aviation industry," they purchased an automobile and had the seal of the Republic of Cuba emblazoned on the doors. A large Cuban flag fluttered above the radiator. With their "credentials," they obtained official license plates from the Secretary of State.

Then Abreu, who had been communicating with the Cuban Ambassador at Washington, received word that the passports under which the young men entered, had been withdrawn. He called on Marquis Rafael and demanded that he relinquish the passports and the official license plates. The Marquis at first refused, but Abreu soon convinced him he had best comply. Rafael then personally removed the plates from the car and gave them to the consul and surrendered his and Jose's passports.

All of this occurred at 3741 Delmar boulevard in July, 1928. The Chase, it had developed, was only a temporary abode for the "special ambassadors." After a week they moved to a dingy hostelry in the 3500 block of Lucas avenue.

Dog Ate 11 Pounds of Meat a Day.

Unknown though they were, the young men gained introductions to members of a number of socially prominent families. The dog was an asset, as it attracted attention, but financially, he was a liability; he ate 11 pounds of meat a day.

Some time ago Rafael organized the National Motors Corporation, a concern he described as having Sentence was pronounced by Judge Jacob Hopkins, who denied Miller a new trial but granted him a 60-day stay to allow an appeal.

Several alleged participants in the conspiracy will go to trial Feb. 3.

TO GIVE 57,000 ACRES OF CUT-OVER LANDS TO STATE

Wisconsin Lumber Co. Values This Dunklin and Pemiscot County Property at $740,000.

TAXES BURDENSOME, IT IS EXPLAINED

Pledge to Buy Drainage Bonds and Carry Out Contracts With Settlers Accompanies Offer.

Title to approximately 57,000 acres of cut-over timber land in Pemiscot and Dunklin counties in Southeast Missouri, will be relinquished at once to the State as a gift of the Wisconsin Lumber Co., a subsidiary of the International Harvester Co. of Chicago.

This announcement was made yesterday by George A. Ranney, vice president and treasurer of the Harvester Co., who explained that the land had fulfilled its usefulness to the company when the timber was cut and now had come to constitute a burden through taxation.

At the offices of the lumber company at Deering, Mo., the assessed valuation of the land was given as $740,150, of which $375,600 worth lies in Pemiscot and $364,550 in Dunklin County.

Guaranteed by Company.

The International Harvester Co., which assumes all obligations, legal and moral, of its subsidiary in the transaction, emphasizes the point that it will permit no hardship to befall individuals or communities as a result of signing over the land to the State. In order to protect the interest of affected investors, the statement declared, the Harvester Co. will purchase at par and accrued interest all outstanding bonds of the Elk Chute Drainage District. These bonds, issued several years ago when the drainage district was organized with the lumber company's sanction as a land holder, are supported largely by taxes on the company's land and, according to Ranney, if not taken up would be rendered virtually worthless by transfer of the property to the State since that would mean the cessation of taxes.

The Harvester Co. also agrees to support for four years two public schools which at present rely on taxation of the land in question, to retain title to the land on which the town of Deering stands, and to carry out in full all contracts previously made with settlers for purchase of its lands.

Land Bought 30 Years Ago.

Pemiscot and Dunklin counties, together with part of New Madrid County, lie in the spur of Missouri which extends down the Mississippi River into the northeast corner of Arkansas. The land, acquired by the lumber company 30 years ago when the region was heavily wooded, is mostly in one tract. It lies in and around the town of Deering, 15 miles west of Caruthersville, and extends 12 miles south on both sides of the Pemiscot-Dunklin line to the Arkansas boundary. Much of the land is covered with second growth timber which is too young to be of value. Some of the land has been cleared and is adaptable to agriculture.

"For many years," Ranney's announcement states, "the company has endeavored to bring settlers upon the land to reclaim and cultivate it, and has incurred heavy expenses in this connection.

"Now, however, on account of nation-wide conditions affecting the demand for cut-over lands and their value, we do not feel warranted in continuing this development as a company enterprise and in paying the exceedingly heavy taxes on the lands. It has therefore been decided to let the title revert to the State.

Accepts Moral Obligation.

"While neither the International Harvester Co. nor the Wisconsin Lumber Co. (its subsidiary) is in any way responsible for the land depreciation, or legally liable for the drainage taxes which are a claim only against the assessed lands, the Harvester Co. recognizes a certain moral obligation to the bondholders who may have purchased the bonds in reliance not only upon the then existing land values but also in part upon the fact that the Harvester Co. through its subsidiary company was a substantial land owner and as such had acquiesced in the organization of the drainage district.

"To fully discharge all possible obligations and protect the bondholders, the International Harvester

New Yorker Keeps Story Sewed Up When Ex-President Would Release Part.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Alfred E. Smith's ideas for a front-page splurge have prevailed over Calvin Coolidge's. They and Julius Rosenwald had a conference yesterday on methods of disposing of the $6,000,000 estate which Conrad Huber left for philanthropic purposes. They decided to announce details Monday.

A reporter wanted something for this morning's papers.

"I don't think that would hurt the story," said Coolidge. "I think it would do it good."

CIVIL RIGHTS NOT LOST IN SPEAKEASY

Detroit Judge So Rules in Ordering Policy Paid on Man Killed in Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 4.—A speakeasy is not inherently a place of danger, and a person going to one does not lose civil rights he would forfeit by exposing himself to unnecessary hazards, Circuit Judge Vincent M. Brennan held in a written opinion today.

The opinion was given in an insurance case, in which payment was refused on a $1000 policy of a man shot to death in a holdup of a speakeasy. The Court took judicial notice that "prohibition in law is not prohibition in fact," and that liquor is served "not only in blind pigs and kindred establishments, but that it is also at times illegally possessed in almost every sort of place where human beings foregather in the large cities of this country, with the exception of religious edifices, courtrooms, cemeteries, school rooms, prisons, reformatories and W. C. T. U. headquarters."

The case was that of Mrs. Lulu Anders against the Title Guaranty & Casualty Co., which had contended that Mrs. Anders' husband exposed himself to unnecessary danger.

"It is true," the Court said, "that blind pigs occasionally are disturbed by gunmen; so are clergymen, policemen and Judges." The opinion listed debutante parties, banquets of Senators and private offices of brokers as some of the more elegant places where a similar tragedy might occur.

SHOTS FIRED AT PATROLMAN WHEN HE OVERTAKES AUTO

Uninjured, Policeman Kiessling Empties Revolver at Car as It Speeds Away.

The driver of a green coupe bearing Kentucky license plates fired two shots at Patrolman William Kiessling when the latter hailed him for questioning at 10 o'clock last night on Franklin avenue between Sixth and Seventh streets. One of the bullets pierced Kiessling's left sleeve, without touching the skin, and the other the tail of his coat.

Kiessling emptied his revolver at the coupe as it sped east on Franklin and turned south on Sixth treet.

Kiessling first noted the coupe as he walked his beat near Seventh street and Franklin avenue and, recalling that it answered the description of a car reported stolen, commandeered a passing machine and overtook it after a chase of several blocks.

The driver of the coupe got out as Kiessling did and asked: "What are you stopping us for?"

Kiessling replied: "I want to talk to you" and the man fired. His companion in the coupe, fingering an automatic, shouted: "Come on back, we don't want to get into any trouble."

Kiessling did not know whether his shots found a mark.

ALL DENTISTS ARE AT WORK

GENEVA, Jan. 4.—Musicians of all intellectual workers, are suffering most acutely from unemployment the world over, according to occupational experts of the International Labor Office. Next come the theatrical artists.

Development of mechanical music in all its forms and the absence of regulation in the exercise of the profession are given as chief causes of the musicians' distress. Dentists are the most fortunate of the white-collar folk. The report says that unemployment among them is virtually nonexistent throughout the world.

GUILT OF LIQUOR BUYER PUT UP TO SUPREME COURT

In Case Carried Up Justice Department Urges Purchaser Was Properly Convicted of Conspiracy.

OPPOSITE DECISIONS BY TWO U. S. JUDGES

One Fined New Yorker Who Phoned Orders for Whisky to Philadelphia, Other Cleared Him.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The Department of Justice through the Solicitor-General, Charles E. Hughes Jr., has taken a first step toward getting from the United States Supreme Court a decision on one limited phase of the moot question: Is the buyer of liquor equally guilty with the seller?

This the Department has done by petitioning the court for a writ of certiorari in a case lately decided in Pennsylvania—decided one way by the Federal District Court for the Eastern District of that State and the opposite way by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. The department seeks to have the judgment of the latter court reviewed and reversed.

In asking for a review, the department plainly states that the case does not involve the question whether or not the purchase of liquor, under the Volstead act, is a crime in itself. The case therefore does not go to the root of the issue raised by Senator Sheppard of Texas, who has introduced a bill to make the buyer of liquor equally culpable with the seller, or by those Federal Judges who apparently take the view that the Volstead act already is sufficient for this purpose.

Effect of the Decision.

Though this larger question is left for settlement in some subsequent proceeding, the case as submitted to the Supreme Court, if decided in accordance with the Government's contention, would greatly widen the scope of Volstead law prosecutions. Conversely, in the department's opinion, a decision against the Government would "have a very detrimental effect upon the enforcement of the prohibition laws."

"The question involved in this case," says the Department's brief, "is one of great public interest and importance."

The question is whether a person who orders liquor from a bootlegger and to whom the liquor is shipped by the bootlegger is guilty of conspiracy to transport intoxicating liquor in violation of the Volstead act. The Government holds that he is. It relies on two statutes: first, the Volstead act, which makes the transportation of liquor for beverage purposes a crime, and second, the conspiracy statute, which provides that "if two or more persons conspire to commit any offense against the United States and one or more of such parties do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy, each of the parties to such conspiracy shall be fined," etc.

The Government's contention is based on the word "transport" in the Volstead law. It does not rest on the act of purchase.

The Conspiracy Decision.

There were two original defendants in the case: Joel D. Kerper, a Philadelphia bootlegger (conceded to be a bootlegger in stipulations filed in the District Court), and Alfred E. Norris, a New York investment banker. Norris received several consignments of rye whisky by prepaid express from Kerper, to whom he gave his orders by telephone.

Kerper pleaded guilty and was sentenced to imprisonment for a year and three months. Norris maintained that the purchase of liquor was not a crime and, moreover, that there was not in his transactions with the bootlegger the degree of affirmative co-operation necessary to make him a conspirator.

Norris was sentenced to pay a fine of $200. The District Court agreed that the mere purchase of liquor was not an offense under the Volstead act, and it assumed that where nothing was involved but a simple sale, the purchaser could not be convicted of conspiring with the seller.

The court held, however, that Kerper was more than a passive buyer. It reached the conclusion: "(1) That a conviction may be

OIL-BURNING AUTO MAKES 188 MILES ON FIVE GALLONS

Diesel Four-Cylinder Engine Used in Motor Car for First Time.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 4.—Having consumed only five gallons of fuel, an automobile powered by a Diesel four-cylinder engine, arrived in Columbus tonight from Indianapolis. The 188-mile trip was made in five hours' driving time.

The experiment marks the first time an engine of this type has been placed in an automobile chassis and officials of the Cummins Engineering Co. of Columbus, Ind., sponsors of the project, expressed themselves as satisfied with the results.

The engine is operated by fuel oil which costs 8 cents a gallon. It is capable of moving the regular automobile chassis at the rate of between 55 and 60 miles an hour.

CORNER IN STOCKS IS FRAUD, NEW YORK JUDGES DECIDE

Under Ruling Bureau of Securities Has Reason to Begin Prosecution.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The Appellate division in Brooklyn yesterday affirmed a recent decision of Supreme Court Justice Humphrey, who held that a corner in the stock market constitutes a fraud under the Martin act and may be enjoined.

The effect of this decision is that, when evidence of an attempt to corner the market is obtained, the Bureau of Securities and other agencies will have an immediate case for an injunction and prosecution.

A state case against a number of defendants operating in the stock of the Schickerling Radio Tube Corporation led to the decision.

ALL SENATE FACTIONS FOR QUICK ACTION ON TARIFF

Leaders Hope for Decision on It Within Six Weeks — Congress Reconvenes Tomorrow.

DRY DEBATE IN HOUSE LATER IN MONTH

Likely to Arise Over Enforcement Appropriation —Lobby and Other Investigations to Go On.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Prohibition was crowding the troublesome tariff issue for attention today as the first of the members of Congress returned to the capital to resume work Monday in a session which promises to last well into the summer.

Apparently pleased by new moves of the Hoover administration to tighten up dry enforcement, the Senate Republican drys withheld their statements pending developments. Prospects for early debate on the dry law had not diminished, however.

Early in the session the administration's resolution for the creation of a joint congressional committee to study reorganization of the prohibition enforcement machinery will come up in the House. When this committee is appointed, the Hoover Law Enforcement Commission has promised a preliminary report of its investigation.

In the Senate, where the holiday recess has been disturbed by outbursts by Republican drys, leaders of all factions today demanded that the tariff bill have undisputed right of way beginning Monday.

Investigations to Go On.

Numerous legislative possibilities are in line for consideration in both branches and a series of committee hearings and investigations will be under way before the end of the week on both sides of the Capitol regardless of the tariff.

Reorganization of the Republican committees in the Senate is also imminent. Chairman McNary of the Committee on Committees has called a meeting for Tuesday to outline the party's new organization. Awaiting a report by this committee, Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, postponed until Wednesday or Thursday the party conferance he had called for Monday.

Another debate on Prohibition in Congress is expected to occur during consideration of the Treasury Department appropriation bill carrying funds for next year's enforcement, but this bill has been deferred and it is not expected to be reported to the House before the end of the month.

Whether an attempt will be made by the Drys to increase the $14,000,000 annual allotments for enforcement work hinges to some extent on the promised report of the Law Enforcement Commission and the amount recommended by the administration.

G. O. P. Independents Lay Plans.

In the Senate today, leaders of all the factions were in conference and word was given out that they intend to stick by the agreement entered into before the Christmas recess to give full right of way to the tariff. The western Republican Independents, who hold the balance of power between the Republicans and Democrats in the Senate, met with Senator Borah of Idaho to consider future work on the tariff. They have combined with the Democrats to confine the measure to agricultural products alone.

"We want the tariff bill passed and we want it passed as soon as possible," said Senator Borah, after the meeting of the western Independents. "It will be our purpose to keep the Senate constantly at work on this legislation to the exclusion of everything else until the tariff is passed."

Senator Borah, who has been outspoken during the recess in assailing the Hoover dry enforcement policies, indicated satisfaction with the new enforcement policies announced by the administration.

Senator Watson, speaking for the regular Republicans, also announced that he favored confining Senate discussions to a disposition of the tariff. Little hope was en-

NO EXTRA SESSION ON SURVEY REPORT CAULFIELD RULES

Governor Leaves $158,000,000 Program for Improving State Institutions to 1931 Legislature.

HE HOLDS THERE IS NO EMERGENCY

Cost, in View of Wasteful Record of Last $1,000,000 General Assembly, Figures in Decision.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 4.—Gov. Caulfield today rejected the suggestion that the Legislature be convened in extraordinary session for a consideration of the State Survey Commission's $158,000,000 program for increased physical plant and support for State eleemosynary, educational and penal institutions, and for the public school system. The program will go over until the regular 1931 Legislature.

The Governor's decision has been expected for several weeks, it having become known that he considered the program far too ambitious for submission under present economic conditions in the State.

While there is no question that in administration circles there was a belief that it would be advisable to submit the proposal to a special session, when no other matter would be before the Legislature, the Governor was faced with the very practical fact that the Legislature would be the same which demonstrated an incapacity at its last regular session to handle matters of far less importance and far less complicated. The Governor hesitated to convene the Legislature—which he would be powerless to adjourn—with its record of wasteful expenditures.

The Official Reason.

The decision that there would be no special session was based, officially, upon the position that there was no emergency within the meaning of the constitution, that funds would be available from regular State receipts to build an intermediate reformatory this year and next to relieve crowded conditions in the penal institutions, that there was no such emergency at the eleemosynary institutions. The Governor said in his statement he thought the year which would elapse before the Legislature would meet in regular session was not too short a time for public consideration of the report.

The Governor's statement follows:

"After much consideration and realizing fully the importance of the matter and my responsibility, I have decided not to convene the General Assembly in extraordinary session for the purpose of considering the recommendations of the Survey Commission.

"The Constitution gives the Governor the power to convene the General Assembly 'upon extraordinary occasions.' This does not contemplate calling it together merely because it may be more convenient, or because it may be considered that it is preferable to concentrate the attention of the Assembly on certain matters to the exclusion of others.

No Emergency.

"I doubt whether the unsatisfactory conditions which have grown through the years in our penal and eleemosynary housing, or the inequalities which have always existed in our educational facilities, or the need to cure them, however imperative, constitute an extraordinary occasion within the meaning of the Constitution.

"Although there is serious congestion of the State mental hospitals, and although the city of St. Louis has recently notified the State Eleemosynary Board that patients from the city of St. Louis will be committed to the State mental hospitals beginning March 9, 1930, the Board of Managers of the State eleemosynary institutions has advised me that it does not consider the crisis to be such a serious emergency as to require or justify the calling of a special session of the General Assembly to relieve this condition.

"Plans are being made to readjust the housing of patients at these institutions, so that the new commitments from the city of St. Louis may be taken care of until the problem can be solved in an orderly and definite way by the General Assembly in regular session. Extraordinary precautions are being taken against fire hazards.

Money for New Reformatory.

"Overcrowding of the penitentiary and other correctional institutions, while distressing and needing relief, may in my opinion await the comparatively brief period that will elapse before the convening the General Assembly in January, 1931. The condition will be made more tolerable, I hope, by the construction of the intermediate reformatory, which already has been authorized by the General Assembly and an appropriation of $750,000 provided therefor. From present indications it would seem that we may build this intermediate reformatory out of expectant revenue for 1930.

"The Survey Commission has rendered a very fine service to the State of Missouri. Its recommendations are worthy of careful study and consideration. The solution of the problems it presents, particularly the educational problem, must in the final analysis be found in an aroused and informed public opinion. The time that would elapse before a special session would be called is not sufficient, in my opinion, for the people to study the report which, with its supporting data consists of some 1900 typewritten pages, including many complicated tables, which must be carefully studied, at least by those charged with responsibility. The report has not even been printed, and will not be printed for several weeks.

Time Needed to Study Plan.

"One year is not too long a time to allow our people to recover from the feeling of depression which the recent collapse of the stock market has caused to spread from the farm to the city. I would wish to carefully study the situation and be impressed with the profound necessity of it before I would recommend to the Legislature to the increase in taxes contemplated by the Survey Commission's report.

"It is interesting in this connection to note that the State platform of the Missouri Democratic party adopted in September, 1928, held that the burden of taxes even then imposed by the State government was indefensible and pledged the party to reduction.

"That platform also commended 'the Democratic majority in the Missouri Senate for refusal to increase the burden of taxation.' Those may well be considered, by the present Senate majority at least, as mandates from their constituency.

"Moreover, within a few months after such a special session could be had the general State elections will be held for the election of the members of the General Assembly, State officers and Congressmen. The matters involved in the survey commission's report are too precious to risk their becoming the football of a political campaign. I believe that out of the recommendations of the Survey Commission a sane and moderate program may be constructed which will meet with the approval of both parties in their platform declarations. This will take more time than can possibly intervene before the holding of a special session.

The $1,000,000 Legislature.

"The last General Assembly, with the expenses of the revision commission included, cost the State more than $1,000,000. This was so, not withstanding the fact that the usual pay of the members was limited to 120 days. A special session, while it may be called by the Governor, may not be adjourned by him, and there is no limit upon the period of its existence. It is true that a special session should not cost nearly as much as a regular session, because there are not so may bills to be considered, nevertheless, its cost might be considerable. The fear of expense should not alone deter the Governor from calling a special session, yet it is a circumstance to be considered.

"There is no danger that the people will lose interest in the important matter covered by the survey report. I rather fear that their interest has not been sufficiently aroused. Sympathetic enthusiasm will grow, not wane, with sufficient time and opportunity for study and understanding. I would rather welcome deliberation than to run the risk of excessive haste."

Since the commission's report was submitted to the Governor a month ago, the only pressure which has been brought to bear for a special session has come from representatives of the State Teachers' Association, the State Teachers' Colleges and the State university. Nearly all the communications from other sources have opposed the special session idea.

The commission was appointed at the close of the last Legislature under an act passed at the request of the Governor. It devoted six months to a study of the needs of the institutions and the schools and produced a report setting out its findings that within a 12-year period more than $200,000,000 above present revenues would be needed to put the institutions and the schools on a high plane. It suggested ways of obtaining $158,000,000 of this amount by the increase of income and corporation franchise taxes.

Plane That Won $100,000 Safe Aircraft Competition

CURTISS TANAGER BIPLANE,

DECLARED the winner of the first prize of $100,000 in the International Safe Aircraft competition held by the Daniel Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aeronautics. Award of the prize will be made tomorrow. The British Handley-Page machine which offered the winner the stiffest competition, failed to meet all requirements. The Curtiss ship is a cabin plane with an air-cooled motor, wing slots, wing flaps and a floating aileron at the top of the lower wing. The British planemakers contend that the wing slot constitutes an infringement of a patent held by them and have entered suit here against the Curtiss company.

TREASURY DESIGNATES AIRPORTS OF ENTRY

Increase in International Plane Travel Compels Official Action.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—A great increase in international airplane travel caused the Treasury Department today to designate six ports of entry for international aircraft. Three were on the Canadian border and three the Mexican border.

Pembina, N. D., was designated as a port of entry for international aircraft while Portal, N. D., was selected as a temporary port of entry and Port Angeles, Wash., was designated as a temporary international port of entry.

Douglas, Ariz., was designated as a temporary port of entry, while Brownsville, Tex., which has been a temporary entry port, was raised to a permanent port, Treasury officials regarding it as one of the most important ports of entry for international aircraft.

Alhambra Field, the Western terminal of the Western Air Express, at Los Angeles, was designated as a temporary port of entry for international aircraft.

The selections were made by the Interdepartmental Committee on International Airports, of which Assistant Secretary Lowman is chairman.

The Douglas, Ariz., designation will remain as a temporary port until the air field there is completed, when it is probable, Lowman said, it will be raised to a permanent port.

300 MODELS ON DISPLAY AT NATIONAL AUTO SHOW

Long, Low Bodies Characterize New Designs—One Car With 16 Cylinders Shown.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The automobile of 1930, stream-lined, low-slung, rakishly painted, and equipped with all the newest gadgets for speed and luxury, made its bow to the public here today. With more than 300 new car and chassis models on display, the National Automobile Show opened in Grand Central Palace. It will close a week from tonight, pack up and move on to Chicago to open there Jan. 25.

Slim as a greyhound is the new aristocrat of the highway, long of body and low. Lowest of all are the new front wheel drive designs, around which great crowds of visitors hovered today. To sit in one of these cars is almost like sitting in an old-fashioned bob sled. The floor is hardly two feet above the ground.

And there has been developed a new kind of enamel that won't fade, with the result that it now is practicable to have one's car painted baby blue, or rose color, or jade green.

Lined up against backgrounds of gorgeous tapestry, were a town car painted pale tan and trimmed with brown and burnt orange, a sports touring car painted white with yellow trim, a jade green limousine, a sapphire blue coupe, and a roadster done in checkers outlined in tan or a brown background.

In closed cars, a new kind of lighting fixture has been introduced. It has a tiny parchment shade, and is pulled on and off by a little chain.

There are motors with four cylinders, six cylinders, eight cylinders and one model with 16 cylinders.

tertained, however, that the tariff could be finally acted upon by the Senate within six weeks.

Scramble for Committee Posts.

The appointment of Senator Sackett of Kentucky to be Ambassador to Berlin added a new problem to the reorganization of the Senate Republican machine. Sackett was a member of the powerful Finance Committee, as was also Senator Edge of New Jersey, who retired to become Ambassador to France. There is a scramble for positions on this committee.

Senator La Follette of Wisconsin was proposed for this committee by Western Independents but then the administration found that Senator Goff of West Virginia, would like the place. He outranks La Follette. Rather than create another vacancy on the committee at this time, there have been some indications that Senator Sackett may continue at his Senatorial post for a while.

Chairman Caraway, of the Senate Lobby Committee, announced that this group would resume hearings Tuesday. Mrs. Gladys Moon Jones, of the United States Sugar Association, and Junior Owens, representative of the American bottlers of carbonated beverages, have been called for questioning relative to their activities against the proposed increase in the sugar duty.

Rupert L. Purdon of the Department of Commerce also has been summoned. Senator Caraway said he wanted to determine who, if anyone, had directed Purdon to confer with the sugar representatives.

Robinson Going to London.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, whose service at the London Naval Conference as an American delegate will keep him absent from the Senate picture for many weeks, returned to Washington and expressed his views briefly on several pieces of legislation.

He expects the revised World Court proctocol to be considered at the present session after the tariff and appropriation bills, and other major legislation are out of the way. He did not know, however, when President Hoover would submit the protocol to the Senate. Robinson will deliver an address on the World Court in Philadelphia tomorrow.

MANIAC GUNMAN IS SOUGHT

Shoots Third Cleveland Young Woman in Two Weeks.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 4.—Hunting a maniac gunman, the entire police force of Cleveland continued tonight on 12-hour shifts, but although they arrested three suspects today, the gunman was thought to still be at large. The man who was sought shot his third victim in two weeks, last night. Invariably the gunman has chosen pretty young women for his victims. He approaches them at night, orders them at gun point to remain silent, commits robbery and then shoots them without apparent reason.

Last night's victim was Miss Janet Blood, a 16-year-old high school girl. Rushed to a hospital, she was able to give a description of her assailant. It tallies with those given by Beatrice Gallagher, 23, and Mrs. Mary Pshock, 20, of the man who wounded them in similar fashion. Miss Gallagher and Mrs. Pshock are recovering, but Miss Blood's condition is serious.

AVENGERS WAYLAY AND BEAT TWO U. S. COAST GUARDS

Attacks at New London, Conn., Ascribed to Killing of Three Liquor Runners on Black Duck.

By the Associated Press.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Jan. 4.—Two coast guardsmen were attacked and severely beaten shortly after midnight last night by a group of men who, officers think, were bent on avenging the killings of three liquor runners last Sunday.

Coxswain George A. Cadorett, attached to the destroyer Ericsson, reported the attack to officers of the Coast Guard immediately after the assault near the base. According to Cadorett one of the group asked:

"Were you on the 290?"

Cadorett said no, but that he was a coast guardsman.

"Well, that's good enough for us," one of them replied and they pitched in to administer a painful beating.

The CG-290 was the patrol boat which fired on the liquor-running craft Black Duck in Narragansett Bay, killing three men and wounding a fourth.

Second Attack Reported.

Shortly afterward a second guardsman whose name was not obtained telephoned New London police that he, too, had been attacked by the men, who were hiding in the railroad yards through which many of the guardsmen go as a short cut to the base.

Lieut. R. C. Jewell, executive officer, sent out a squad of guardsmen to hunt for the assailants after Cadorett made his report, but they had disappeared.

Capt. L. T. Chalker, chief of staff, said the attack was the result of widespread publicity, "in which the facts were distorted and set aside in an attempt to place the Coast Guard in disrepute."

With the beginning today of the general courtmartial of coastguardsmen charged with intoxication and theft of liquor from a seized rum runner it became known for the first time that 24 men were involved.

Twenty-three are accused of being intoxicated and three of these pleaded guilty to the charges today before the court was adjourned until Monday morning. One man only is specifically accused of stealing some of the cargo of whisky taken from the liquor boat Flor del Mar, captured a week ago and towed into this port.

"Several" Intoxicated.

Capt. L. T. Chalker, chief of staff, had announced previously that five men were concerned in the thefts of liquor, and "several" were charged with intoxication.

Eleven of the men are attached to the destroyer Ericsson on which six bottles of whisky were found yesterday after a surprise search of all boats had been ordered.

The Ericsson was tied at the stern of the Flor del Mar last Sunday night when guardsmen were ordered to make haste in unloading the rum boat as she was in danger of sinking. Her crew had fired her before escaping in small boats.

Officers on duty at the base that night were called before the court and it was brought out that many of the bags containing the contraband had been broken by an explosion aboard the rum runner, making it comparatively easy to steal the stuff.

The thefts were disclosed as the result of an investigation ordered last Monday following a drunken brawl in a rooming house in New London in which guardsmen and sailors attached to the submarine base here participated.

The maximum penalty for intoxication, it was said today, is 30 days' confinement in the brig, 10 of which may be on bread and water.

METEORITE KILLS 130 REINDEER IN SIBERIAN WILDS

Terrified Owners Drive Herds 200 Miles Away From "Devil's Lake."

By the Associated Press.

PETROPAVLOVSK - ON-KAMCHATKA, Siberia, Jan. 4.—A nomad tribe of native Koryaks, who arrived here to trade furs for clothing and ammunition, report that a few months ago, a gigantic meteorite struck the northern part of Penjinskoe district, in the vicinity of the River Pal, and killed 130 of their reindeer.

The meteorite went deep into the frozen ground, forming a small lake.

The fall of the meteorite terrified the Koryaks to such an extent that they drove their herds of reindeer over 200 miles of frozen tundra before venturing to pitch camp. Even now they cannot be tempted to approach the vicinity of the "Devil's Lake."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—William N. Doak, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and once a gubernatorial candidate in Virginia, was suggested to President Hoover today for the post of Secretary of Labor when James J. Davis quits, March 4.

A. F. Whitney, president of the Trainmen's Union, conferred with Mr. Hoover today, but declined to make a statement.

Doak was slated for the appointment at the start of the Hoover administration, but the opposition directed against him by other sections of labor caused Mr. Hoover to ask Secretary Davis to serve another year.

DOODLEBUG OIL FINDER BARRED FROM MAILS

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
301-305 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—A purported oil-finding "doodlebug" has been barred from the mails by a Postoffice Department fraud order.

Acting on the recommendation of Solicitor Horace J. Donnelly, Postmaster-General Brown yesterday instructed the Postmaster at Fort Worth, Tex., to return all correspondence and postal money orders addressed to the Hoover Scientific Development, which was exploiting a "petrolometer" capable, its operators said, of unerring detection of rich oil deposits.

The president of the Hoover Development was J. A. Hoover, who claimed that he had been an oil man for 25 years. Associated with him as an advertisement writer was Leo F. Reardon, who in 1924 was fined $4000 after indictment for oil stock selling schemes with Dr. Frederick A. Cook and Paul Vitek.

The literature prepared by Reardon and sent out over Hoover's signature promised fabulous returns. The "doodlebug," the literature said, assured success.

"Handmaiden of Progress."

"Science—that beauteous handmaiden of progress—is with us in this enterprise," Hoover wrote. "We have the testimony of the amazing petrolometer of Dr. Samuel Spitz, which tells us unmistakably that our leases are located squarely over new pools of oil; I ask you, is there anything surer in human life in the oil industry than that our four great tracts of acreage lie above four new pools of wealth-giving oil? Is there?

"Now then, let us see what it would mean to the shareholders of my development to tap these four scientifically proven structures and bring in four thundering wells. I have estimated that in this event our properties would be worth or immediately salable at from four to eight million dollars.

"On our capitalization of $200,000 in that event, shareholders of my development would come out as follows: Your investment of $1000 would then return you from $20,000 to $40,000; your investment of $500 would yield you from $10,000 to $20,000; your investment of $250 would bring you back from $5000 to $10,000; your investment of $100 would toss into your lap from $2000 to $4000; your investment of $50 would return to you from $1000 to $2000; your investment of $25 would yield from $500 to $1000.

"That, my friend, is how rich were made in few short mont by those fortunate enough to in on the development that op up new pools of oil."

Hoover, according to the testi mony taken by the Postoffice in spectors, often referred to his finding apparatus as a "doodle bug," the term used in the fields. In Solicitor Donnelly recommendation, Hoover quoted as having said that "he h seen all sorts of doodlebugs did not believe in them." T literature, however, praised th "petrolometer."

Dr. Spitz a Veterinarian.

"Dr. Spitz" is the inventor of the petrolometer, Hoover wrote prospects, "and it is the most pe fectly accurate instrument I hav ever seen for the discovery of pools beneath the surface of th earth. Through the influence some of my friends who knew h well, the eminent scientist ope up and told me the history of wonderful instrument; how he hi self invented it, working on it eight years; how he obtained pa ents in 25 countries. He explain to me the principle of the petr ometer; showed me how it unmi takably locates oil saturations the bowels of the earth by mea of the echo of sound vibration."

Postal inspectors found th "Dr. Spitz" had not brought in a well-known well with his instr ment, that it had not been paten ed, and that in fact, he had a vised Hoover and Reardon not drill well in a certain secti where they had leases.

"The evidence indicates," Do nelly wrote, "that Spitz may ha secured his title of doctor fr his having been a veterinarian."

The unidentified woman, who, he said, appeared at the Humane Society's clinic at 1618 Carr street, in an automobile, and told of a "sick dog behind the Mullanphy Hospital," was the only other person who saw the animal, to his knowledge.

Although the Humane Society's reward was offered at noon Friday when the officers and directors voted unanimous confidence in Sellar's integrity, no word from the woman has been received. President O'Reilly recognized the possibility that she may have kept silent because of an aversion to publicity or a fear that she might be doubted in some quarters along with Sellar, but pointed out that she may be out of the city and may not have heard of the reward.

National President on Way.

Sidney H. Coleman, president of the American Humane Association, the national organization of humane societies, who with other humane society officers in various cities has declared implicit confidence in Sellar's integrity, will arrive in St. Louis this evening from his home at Albany, N. Y., to lend his support as ranking officer of the organization to Sellar.

Coleman telegraphed Friday that he would come here but Sellar replied that it would not be necessary. Yesterday they talked over long-distance telephone and agreed that Coleman's presence in St. Louis would be helpful.

Dr. Kane Still Skeptical.

Dr. Robert Emmet Kane, a chief surgeon at Mullanphy Hospital and former president of the St. Louis Medical Society, remained steadfast in his expressed opinion that it was a "mythical dog" which Sellar reported.

"My sole and only interest in the matter," he said, "was to protect the name of the city and my hospital from being connected in papers all over the country with a terrible atrocity. I have no quarrel with the Humane Society."

Four veterinarians and dog hospital doctors agreed that a strychnine injection, such as Sellar said he used in killing the animal, would cause a painless and quick death, contradicting Dr. Kane's published comment that the use of strychnine would have caused a painful death.

Dr. Kane explained that his statement was based on his own experience in strychnine poisoning cases, on his medical reading and his talks with medical men.

"In any form, strychnine is the active principle, and deaths from strychnine are convulsive and as terrible as anybody would want to see," he declared. "I was surprised to read that a Humane Society uses strychnine to put animals out of existence."

Veterinarians Contradict Kane.

The veterinarians and Dr. Joseph Willett, City Bacteriologist, declared that strychnine is fatal to dogs within one or two minutes after injection and is commonly used by veterinarians in this and other cities for extermination of dogs and cats.

Dr. Harry S. Richards, veterinarian of Dr. Haigler's Dog and Cat Hospital, 7645 Delmar boulevard, said that on dogs and cats strychnine has about the same effect as prussic acid, the most virulent poison known. Dr. F. O. Killian, 7439 Olive Street road, declared that strychnine is one of the best means known for exterminating dogs.

Dr. John E. Klem, 4056A Arsenal street, who does clinical work for the Humane Society, said he was responsible for the Humane Society's use of strychnine in such emergencies and declared the only quicker means of extermination was a bullet.

Dr. Charles Ellis, 4159 Laclede avenue, said strychnine was as quick as any other poison known for killing a dog.

Since his statement was published, Dr. Kane has received many telephone calls, some congratulating him on his stand, others of a different tone. "Some were not actually threatening, just insulting," he said. "One person told me I was 'trying to protect some blockhead interne who let a dog out.'"

Reward Still Grows.

On the other hand, Sellar has received numerous letters and telegrams expressing sympathy and confidence. Many of the letters contained checks and cash, increasing the reward for the apprehension of the dog torturer, which now totals approximately $3000. One writer sent a $5 bill with the message that he "still believes there was a dog." Another declared the attack on Sellar was "typical of the vivisectionists." The small proportion of the reward which is in actual cash will be returned if the search is abandoned.

Sellar is 45 years old and lives at 829 Greeley avenue, Webster Groves, with his wife and two children. He has been secretary of the society here since August, 1923, having come from Buffalo, N. Y., where he held a similar post for four years. Born and educated in Philadelphia, he began work in the insurance business, later becoming efficiency engineer for a bridge company. During the war, he served overseas as a Y. M. C. A. secretary, and, on his return, took up Humane Society work.

A. G. HILMER DIES IN FLORIDA

Former St. Louisan Succumbs to Pneumonia in Jacksonville.

Albert G. Hilmer, a resident of St. Louis until five years ago, when he went to Florida as manager of the Florida Traction Co., died yesterday of pneumonia at his home in Jacksonville. He was 40 years old.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at Keokuk, Ia., the former home of his widow, Mrs. Ruby Dollery Hilmer. Also surviving are two children, Phoebe and Albert Jr.; his father, Gustave Hilmer, superintendent of the St. Louis Altenheim; his mother, two sisters, Mrs. W. A. Rohlfing of St. Louis, and Mrs. Anna Rindler of Davenport, Ia., and a brother, Henry Hilmer.

TITLED BROTHERS' $5,000,000 DEAL HELD UP BY JAIL

"assets of $100,000," which was to market the "Ciurascope." But the market for Ciurascopes was dull and the business that came to the compnay offices in the Arcade Building was disheartening to two young promoters whose assets were confidence rather than currency.

As a side line, the brothers sold bonds and dealt in real estate. Their affairs grew more precarious but their enthusiasm remained as boundless as it had been in the old days when they lived at the Chase.

The several checks they wrote were returned from their bank marked "insufficient funds." The brothers, however, staved off the creditors and devoted all of their time to closing a deal with Harry H. Sefried and Capt. Jean Francis de Villard, co-inventors of an airplane safety device that the inventors valued at $5,000,000.

Immigration Inspector Nash, who had warned the young men to post bond, was becoming more and more insistent. Their efforts to raise the bond were unsuccessful because the fee for the bonds would be $200, an impossible amount for the two confident promoters.

However, when publication was made just after Christmas of the finding of a small dog with its mouth sewed shut, Marquis Rafael Ciura de Castro was one of the first to offer $100 reward for information leading to the arrest of the mutilator. Count Rafael went even further. He promised to pay "all expenses of the investigation."

Thursday, the deal with the inventors was completed and a contract was signed. The brothers were entitled by it to two-thirds of the profits from the sale of the $5,000,000 invention. Friday Count Rafael, threatened again with prosecution on bad check charges, spent the day raising enough money to pay off all his debts. The total which he borrowed was about $100.

Has to Borrow a Nickel.

Friday night the brothers were arrested. Jose, taken into custody first, offered to telephone and arrange bond. Inspector Nash was willing. He didn't want to put the part owners of a $5,000,000 invention in jail without giving them chance to raise two $500 bonds.

"Here's a telephone booth," he said. "Go ahead and see what you can do."

Jose hesitated. He cleared his throat and then explained: "I am very very sorry, but could you let me have a nickel to telephone with?"

Nash could and did, but he had only one nickel he was willing to turn over to the young promoter, and that only on condition that Jose use it to call Rafael and summon him to police headquarters. When Rafael arrived, he was placed in the holdover with his brother.

And the inventors of the $5,000,000 aeronautic device now are trying to take even that asset from the brothers Ciura de Castro. Sefrid last night asked Nash to help him get back the plans and drawings he had turned over to Rafael.

WATCHMAN KILLED WHEN HIT BY AUTO AT RAIL CROSSING

Lester Ferguson Struck When About to Hang Lantern on Gate at Kingshighway and Wilson.

Lester Ferguson, 54-year-old crossing watchman for the Missouri Pacific Railroad at Kingshighway and Wilson avenue, was struck by an automobile and killed about 5:45 o'clock last night when going to hang a red lantern on one of the crossing arms.

William Canty, 55, a clerk of 2922 North Prairie avenue, drove the car that ran down the watchman. Canty said he was driving south on Kingshighway in heavy traffic and was about half way over the crossing when he felt something bump the side of his car.

"I did not know I had hit anybody until I stopped my machine and looked out," Canty said. "I saw a body lying in the road and I got out."

Ferguson was taken to City Hospital where he was pronounced dead. He had suffered a fractured skull. A red lantern had been placed on one of the crossing arms and Ferguson, apparently, was on his way to place the other. None of the witnesses was able to say whether the lantern Ferguson carried bore a light.

Canty was arrested on a charge of felonious wounding. An inquest will be held.

Co. hereby offers to purchase all of the outstanding bonds, aggregating $446,500, of the Elk Chute Drainage District of Missouri (Pemiscot and Dunklin counties) at par and accrued interest. This offer to purchase expires by limitation on May 2, 1930.

"In order to continue the present educational facilities in the town of Deering and at the grade school in the town of Vicksburg, and in order that the school officials may know what revenue they can rely upon, the company will pay the entire school tax levied on all its land in Consolidated School District No. 6 for the years 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1932.

"The company will retain title to such lands as may be necessary to the maintenance of the town of Deering and will continue paying taxes thereon for such time as this course may seem necessary to the existence of that community.

"Title will be retained to all lands in Dunklin and Pemiscot counties covered by contracts of sale between the Wisconsin Lumber Co. and settlers thereon, so that the company can fully carry out these contract obligations."

Governor and Shartel Say Offer Can Be Accepted.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 4.—Gov. Caulfield said tonight that he could not comment officially on the offer until it was formally filed with the board which passes on the purchase and acceptance of land for State purposes. Attorney-General Stratton Shartel and State Game and Fish Commissioner Delph Simons are the other members of the board.

However, Gov. Caulfield termed the offer "extraordinary," and both he and Shartel agreed that such a gift could be accepted. They emphasized their concern as to the effect the passing of title to the State might have in reducing the amount of taxable property in the counties affected and said this feature would come in for much discussion. Simons could not be reached.

It was suggested by sportsmen that the land might be turned over to the Federal Government for use as a migratory bird refuge. A system of such refuges is being established and it is planned to place two in Missouri.

FUEL RUNNING LOW, WILKINS HEADS FOR DECEPTION ISLAND

After Three Weeks on Edge of Ice-Pack, He Is Unable to Find Place to Store Plane.

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS, Commander of the Wilkins Antarctic Expedition.

This story is published exclusively in St. Louis in the Post-Dispatch. All news articles from members of the Wilkins party or from special correspondents assigned to it will appear only in the Post-Dispatch in this city.

(Copyright, 1930.)

ABOARD S. S. WILLIAM SCORESBY, Antarctica Jan. 2 (Delayed) (Via S. S. Melville and San Francisco wireless station KUP).—With all but a few tons of fuel gone, the Scoresby is beating its way back to Deception Island. We expect to arrive tomorrow night. Weather permitting, a plane will fly northward from Anvers Island, mapping the coast. Our three weeks here along the edge of the pack-ice has failed to disclose a level ice-floe large enough for a flight on skiis. The land-fast ice is unapproachable because of the pack-ice. Thus far the Ross Sea flight has been delayed, possibly indefinitely postponed.

Efforts are now being made to arrange another cruise with the Scoresby, possibly making several more flights from the edge of pack-ice westward of recently discovered new land. This means considerable delay as the Scoresby must first return and obtain more fuel.

GEN. LYON PHOTOGRAPH IS COMPARED TO STATUE

Picture in Possession of William Bleyer, Attorney; What Historians Said.

A photograph in the possession of William Bleyer, attorney with offices in the Rialto Building, throws some light on whether the Gen. Nathaniel Lyon statue at Grand and Pine boulevards looks like Gen. Lyon, an element recently injected into a controversy which has turned largely on whether the horse in the monument looks like a horse.

The picture, reproduced in the Rotogravure section of today's Post-Dispatch, was presented by Gen. Lyon to Bleyer's great-uncle, Hyacinthe Renard, shortly before the General was killed in the battle of Wilson's Creek, three months after he captured Camp Jackson at the site of the monument. Gen. Lyon was 43 years old. Along with the picture he gave a sword to Renard, who had been appointed a Lieutenant in the First Missouri National Guard by Gov. McNair, in 1821.

Bleyer relates that Gen. Lyon was a frequent visitor to Renard's home, Thirteenth south of Utah street, as the only home of Union sympathies near the Federal Arsenal. Neighbors flew the Stars and Bars for Confederate victories, while the Renards raised the Stars and Stripes whenever the Union armies won an engagement.

The photograph shows Gen. Lyon as short and somewhat more luxuriant of air and beard than in the monument. One historian described him as "less than medium height, slender and angular, with abundant sandy hair, reddish-brown beard, deepset blue eyes, rough and homely features, and weatherbeaten aspect," while another said he was "slender and proportionately well-built, with large forehead, clear deep blue eyes, face narrow, hair and beard sandy."

WILBUR SENDS "TALKIE" AS HIS SPEAKING SUBSTITUTE

Unable to Attend Students' Meeting in California, Makes Address From Screen.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Jan. 4.—Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior, was unable to be present in person so he addressed the fifth annual National Student Federation convention here today by means of a "talkie."

Secretary Wilbur had his address recorded in a talking motion picture and sent it from Washington. Wilbur is on leave of absence as president of the Stanford University.

In the course of his screen address he said: "I trust that you will deal conscientiously with the problems in front of you, but not take yourselves too seriously. If you begin to pass resolutions and instruct the universities or the Governments of the world how they should behave, you may find you have missed the real opportunity of making your federation a continuous cause for good."

Trolley to Washington's Home to Be Abandoned

Line to Mount Vernon in Use 37 Years to Be Made Part of Boulevard for Auto Travel.

By the Associated Press.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 4.—After 37 years of service in carrying pilgrims to the National Shrine of George Washington at Mount Vernon, the little electric railway between this city and the peaceful estate beside the Potomac is to be abandoned.

Abandonment has been made necessary, not because fewer pilgrims visit Mount Vernon, but that more may go there.

Part of the line's roadbed is to be used by the Government for the $4,500,000 George Washington Memorial boulevard between the National Capital and the home of the first President. The road is to be opened for the 200th anniversary of the birth of Washington in 1932.

Millions of persons have traveled on the cars of the little electric line and gleaned from accompanying guides intimate details of the life of George Washington as they passed over the ground he trod in earlier years.

On this line, too, many pilgrims, especially those from Northern and Western States, have made their first acquaintance with the "Jim Crow" laws of Southern States, as the Virginia statute requiring segregation of Negro passengers has been rigidly observed.

Negotiations for sale of the roadbed right-of-way to the Government have been going on some time, after permission for abandonment is obtained from the Virginia Public Service Commission, the rails will be scrapped. The line was purchased at auction some years ago for $750,000 and in recent times has been operated at a loss.

Mount Vernon still is served, except in mid-winter, by a river steamboat from Washington and automobile busses transport many persons to the shrine.

had of buyer and seller of liquor for conspiracy to transport liquor in a case where the agreement is that the delivery of the liquor sold is to be effected by transportation from the seller to the buyer, and (2) that an order by a purchaser to a bootlegger located at a distance, to deliver liquor, followed by transportation, delivery and payment, is sufficient evidence of such an agreement."

Reversed on Appeal.

On appeal by Norris, the judgment was reversed by the Court of Appeals by a two-to-one vote. The considerations which moved this court were as follows: That under the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act, the purchase of liquor is not an offense; that the indictment of the purchaser for conspiracy with the seller was an attempt to make the purchaser indirectly liable for an act which Congress had refused to make an offense; that the evidence did not show a sufficient degree of co-operation by Norris in the illegal transportation to make him a conspirator.

The judgment in Norris' favor is now sought to be overturned by the Department of Justice.

"The court," says the department's brief, "has narrowed the scope of the conspiracy statute so as to render it inapplicable to a large number of cases to which, we submit, it does apply. In this respect the decision affects not only conspiracies to violate the prohibition laws, but other conspiracies to commit offenses against the United States."

The department cites the finding of the Supreme Court in the case of United States vs. Katz, where the court, while doubting the validity of an indictment of a buyer and seller for conspiracy, held that this embarrassment could be avoided "if the buyer and seller were charged with conspiracy to commit a substantive offense having an ingredient in addition to the sale." This "ingredient" in the Norris case was the transportation of the liquor.

Plea to Supreme Court.

"We submit also," the brief concludes, "that the Circuit Court of Appeals erred in its holding that the facts failed to show such a degree of co-operation by Norris in the illegal transportation as to render him guilty as a conspirator to commit that offense. His repeated orders telephoned from New York to Philadelphia and his receipt of and payment for the consignments of liquor shipped to him pursuant thereto leave no room for doubt that the illegal transportations were the result of an agreement, mutual understanding or concert of action between him and Kerper.

"The effect of the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals seems to be that ordinary rules of criminal liability for conspiracy may not be invoked against a purchaser of liquor. We submit that such a notion finds no support in the law. Whether or not the national prohibition act makes the act of purchase a crime in itself (a question which is not involved in this case), it manifestly does not invest the purchaser with any special immunity from the consequences of doing those things which beyond question are made criminal.

"If the purchaser carries the liquor to his home, he is guilty of the crime of transportation, and while he keeps it he is guilty of the crime of possession. If a purchaser agrees and co-operates with the seller to have the liquor transported not to himself but to a friend, it seems clear that he is guilty of a conspiracy to transport. We submit that there is no reason why the fact that the agreed transportation is to himself makes him less guilty."

Alden B. Hurt Dies at 76.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 4.—Alden B. Hurt, former publisher of the Chattanooga News and political leader in Mississippi for many years, died unexpectedly at his home here today. He was 76 years old. Doctors attributed his death to a stroke of paralysis suffered several years ago. He served for 10 years as Judge of the United States Court of Claims.

DISPUTE OVER $17,500 REALTY JUDGMENT

Four Threaten to Sue Circuit Clerk When He Refuses Payment Because of Appeal.

Four claimants of a fund of $17,500 held by Circuit Clerk John Schmoll as stakeholder made demand on him yesterday for the money. In a written notice they declared that unless he yielded immediate possession they would sue him on his official bond for loss sustained, through their failure to be able to use the fund for investments. Schmoll, however, was unable to comply, being prevented by an order of court.

The money was received by the Clerk Dec. 28 from Samuel Goldstein in litigation alleging breach of contract. The contract was signed in 1926 by William Goldman and associates, who bought a site for a theater building in Wellston from Goldstein, the consideration being $27,500. The contract provided that if a building was not erected within a specified time the owner of the ground could reclaim the property by paying $17,500.

The theater was not built and Goldstein made demand for return of the property. He found that title had been transferred to a third party. Circuit Judge Pearcy recently decided in favor of Goldstein, directing that title be restored to him. Motions for a new trial were filed by various defendants but yesterday four of them gave notice that they would abide by the decision and demanded the money paid in by Goldstein.

These claimants are H. H. Laumeier, capitalist; Attorneys Randolph Laughlin and A. M. Frumberg, with Goldman. Laumeier, as their spokesman, demanded a check for the full amount from Schmoll, but the clerk was unable to comply because of the court order and the fact that any check issued for the fund must be countersigned by Judge Pearcy. Judge Pearcy held that the money should remain in court until such time as other parties to the action, including the present title holder and the Wellston Theater Corporation specified that they did not intend to appeal.

The formal demand made on Schmoll set forth it was the purpose of the claimants to use the money "to take advantage of certain exceptional opportunities now afforded by an unprecedented decline in stock prices quoted on the New York Stock Exchange and the New York Curb." The measure of damages for failure to comply, it was set forth, would be determined by the difference between present prices of stock and the price at the time when the fund was actually relinquished.

Vessel Tosses Violently in Bay of Biscay.

S. S. KENILWORTH CASTLE, Jan. 4.—After ploughing down the English Channel in the teeth of a fierce westerly gale throughout the night the steamer Kenilworth Castle, bearing the Prince of Wales to South Africa, passed Ushant this morning and met the full force of the gale as it swept across the Bay of Biscay.

The ship plunged and tossed violently on the great swells of the Bay, whose turmoil was lightened by brilliant sunshine. The Prince kept to his cabin and rested.

GOOD WILL IS SOLE PLEDGE ASKED OF GERMANY BY U. S.

Reparations Pact Expressly Declares Such Guarantee of Fulfillment of Terms Is Sufficient.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—It was divulged today that the German-American reparations agreement concluded Dec. 23 contains a clause whereby the American Government declares expressly it regards good will as the sole and sufficient guarantee for fulfillment by Germany of the obligations assumed under the agreement.

In German political circles this is interpreted as indicating the desire of the American Government to dissociate itself from a policy of sanctions.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The signature of the separate German-American debt settlement agreement in Berlin last Saturday without a sanctions claus was in accordance with the attitude the United States has taken toward Germany ever since the Senate failed to ratify the Versailles treaty, officials here say.

It is pointed out that the United States has long opposed the tendency to put the screws on Germany, considering that the imposition of sanctions for default in meeting war obligations has retarded post-war adjustments.

TALKIES ENTERTAIN GUESTS AT VICE PRESIDENT'S PARTY

Dinner Given for Sir Esme Howard With 65 Present; Mrs. Gann in Black Velvet.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Vice President Curtis entertained Cabinet members, Congressmen and diplomats tonight with a social innovation.

In a specially fitted and darkened corridor of the Mayflower Hotel, the Vice President invited his guests to sit quietly and listen to "the talkies." The party was given for Sir Esme Howard and Lady Howard, British Ambassador and his wife.

Dinner was served in the Chinese room, the long table being decorated like a tropical garden with clusters of foliage alternating with plaques of brilliant flowers. There were 65 guests.

The guests were received by the Vice President and his sister, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, the latter attired in black velvet and cream lace. The gown had a long train.

Tuesday Mrs. Gann will step into her most important role of vice presidential hostess when the Vice President entertains the President and Mrs. Hoover at a small dinner in his suite at the Mayflower Hotel.

The guests at the dinner for the British Ambassador and Lady Isabella included: The Ambassador of Chile and Madame Davila, the Minister of China and Madame Wu, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Hurley, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Adams, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Hyde, the Secretary of Interior and Mrs. Wilbur, Senator and Mrs. James E. Watson, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Samuel M. Shortridge, Senator and Mrs. Otis F. Glenn, Senator and Mrs. Roscoe C. Patterson, Senator and Mrs. Frederic C. Walcott, Representative Stephen G. Shoe Retailers' Convention Opens Tonight With Dinner

Governor and Mayor to Make Addresses at President Geuting's Banquet—Caulfield to Get 12 Pairs of Footwear.

HOST TO SHOE MEN

A. H. GEUTING.

Shoe merchants from all parts of the United States and even from Canada and Hawaii began arriving in St. Louis last night for the nineteenth annual convention of the National Shoe Retailers, to be held here the first four days of this week.

The program of the convention begins tonight with the president's dinner given by A. H. Geuting, president of the association, at which Gov. Caulfield and Mayor Miller will make addresses of welcome to exhibitors at the convention. At the dinner, which will be held in the Gold Room of Hotel Jefferson, 12 pairs of shoes, selected to offer a complete wardrobe for the well-shod man of 1930, will be presented to Gov. Caulfield.

The list includes:

For sport wear, a moccasin type two-tone golf shoe.

For flannel trousers, a white buckskin shoe trimmed with with black, and a white buckskin trimmed with tan.

For spectator sport wear, a brown sueed trimmed with tan.

For night wear on informal occasions, a light summer weight black oxford, and a wing-tip black custom oxford.

For day wear, a tan custom oxford, and a blue custom oxford.

For stormy weather, a tan, wing-tip brogue.

For evening wear, on formal occasions, a patent leather dance oxford.

A brown vici oxford, and a black vici high shoe.

All of the shoes are oxfords except the last-named pair. They are the gift of 12 retail shoe companies in New York.

Other speakers at the president's dinner include Walter B. Weisehburger, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Arthur E. Ebbs, chairman of the Convention Committee and vice president of the Swope Shoe Co.; Harold C. Keith, president of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers; Fraser M. Moffat, president of the Tanners' Council; O. D. McGrew, president of the National Shoe Wholesalers' Association; John A. Bush, president of the St. Louis Shoe Manufacturers and Wholesalers' Association; Frank J. Larkin, president of the National Shoe Travelers' Association; Everit B. Terhune, publisher of the Boot and Shoe Recorder of New York City; Meier Swope, Charles E. Williams and John C. McKeon, shoe manufacturers.

A dress rehearsal of the National Pageant of Footwear Fashions, the four performances of which is one of the outstanding features of the convention, will be held immediately after the dinner tonight. Fifty St. Louis girls and 12 children will act as models in the fashion show.

Principal style developments, according to officers of the convention, are in women's shoes, and come about as a result of changes in dress styles. A tendency toward narrower toes in dress shoes to conform with the streamlines of longer dresses is noted, and the offer of a new type of sandal to be worn with pajamas is one of the most recent fads. Two style exhibitions tomorrow and two on Tuesday are to be held in conjunction with the display of more than 400 lines of new spring shoes at Hotel Jefferson, Hotel Statler, the Mayfair and Lennox Hotel.

Dr. Klein on Program.

Despite the fact that most of the exhibitors at the convention are expected at the dinner tonight, the convention will not officially open until a noon luncheon at Hotel Jefferson tomorrow, which will start the discussion of business conditions and methods of retailing to continue through Thursday. A boxing match at the Coliseum and an annual banquet at Hotel Jefferson Wednesday night have been arranged as the principal social and amusement functions of the session.

Included in the list of speakers at the convention are Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce; Frank C. Rand, president of the International Shoe Co.; John G. Lonsdale, president of the American Bankers' Association, and a number of authorities on advertising and merchandising.

The convention will serve to re-establish confidence in the industry, and help to destroy hesitancy or pessimism in business at the present time, Geuting said yesterday. Geuting, as president of the association, was one of the industrial leaders called for conferences with President Hoover recently.

More Mothers each year treat COLDS without "DOSING"

When Vicks VapoRub was originated, mothers especially were quick to appreciate it because there is nothing to swallow, and, of course, nothing to upset children's delicate stomachs, as "dosing" is so apt to do.

Just rubbed on throat and chest, Vicks acts through the skin like a plaster; and, at the same time, its medicated vapors, released by the body heat, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages.

Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing," and Vicks is the standby for colds—adults' as well as children's—in over 60 countries.

To keep step with this ever-increasing demand, the famous Vick slogan has again been changed. There are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly" in the United States alone.

FRANCE WILLING TO ACCEPT FIXED NAVAL TONNAGE

This Attitude, It Is Learned, Is Country's Positive Contribution to London Conference.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—France is ready to make an agreement at the London naval conference, opening this month, to refrain from exceeding a stated tonnage of naval construction for a period of years, it was learned tonight in reliable quarters.

This will be the positive contribution of France to the plans for making the limitation conference a success. Although France probably will be unable to sign a definite naval treaty for reasons outlined in her recent naval memorandum, an engagement of the above nature will, it is thought, make easier a tripartite treaty between Great Britain, the United States and Japan, which would be virtually tantamount to a general treaty.

France will presumably press for a total tonnage of between 700,000 and 800,000 tons, the actual total being dependent on the condition of the political security of France and particularly upon elaboration of a Mediterranean pact of non-aggression and mutual guarantees. It was learned that there has been little or no progress toward this pact as yet.

Another important development tonight was decision not to attempt to obtain strengthening of the Kellogg-Briand pact for renunciation of war at the London conference by adding a clause for the conference of signatories when the pact is in danger of violation.

U. S. Delegation to Sail Thursday for Navy Conference.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Almost at the moment the heads of the two greatest naval powers exchanged New Year's greetings, Secretary of State Stimson tonight completed preliminary arrangements for American participation in the London parley for the limitation of sea armament.

The State Department made public messages exchanged between President Hoover and King George of England, heralding the new year as one offering a common Anglo-American purpose for the advancement of world peace. Meanwhile, the Secretary of State was terminating extensive preparations in connection with the important meeting in England this month.

Stimson sails Thursday as head of the American commission. A series of conferences between him and members of the American delegation in preparation for the parley are expected to be continued on board the steamship, George Washington.

So far as preparations in Washington were concerned, however, there remains only one important conference which will be held Tuesday at 8:15 a. m. when President Hoover receives the delegation at a breakfast at the White House. This will be the first time that the entire group will have met with the President. The delegates and advisers have conferred with the chief executive on numerous occasions and he has held frequent discussions during the last two months with Stimson.

Stimson Has Bad Cold.

The secretary remained at home today to undergo treatment for a bad cold. Dr. Joel T. Boone, physician to the President, had advised him to endeavor if possible to shake off as much as possible of the bothersome trouble before embarking for England.

Returning to Washington, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, one of the American delegates to the conference, said today he would spend a day in New York before sailing. He expressed a hope that an ultimate agreement would be worked out, but predicted "grave difficulties" in connection with some aspects of the negotiations. He expects the meeting to last a couple of months.

Among the duties which yet remain for Secretary Stimson and his colleagues before the opening of the parley are conferences which he is expected to have with heads of the other delegations. Arrangements have been made by cable for Stimson to meet Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy, who will head his nation's delegation at the conference. Their meeting will take place Jan. 13.

State Department officials tonight declined to disclose any additional plans contemplated for discussions between the secretary and other dignitaries attending the conference, but it is expected that he also will confer with Premier Tardieu of France, heading his country's commission; Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain, and former Premier Reijiro Wakatsuki of Japan, respectively, the heads of the British and Japanese commissions.

Stimson began active preparations for American participation in the parley shortly after the visit to the United States of Prime Minister MacDonald, who came to Washington to confer with President Hoover last October on Naval problems.

The first work to be actively taken up by the Secretary took place during the summer, however, when—under the direct supervision of President Hoover, negotiations were carried on with Great Britain for a settlement of as many as possible of their mutual naval problems which had brought about the failure of the Tri-Partite conference at Geneva in 1927.

President and King George Exchange Messages on Naval Parley.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—King George of England and President Hoover have marked the New Year with an exchange of greetings in which the hope of limitation of naval armaments was held out as one of the brightest prospects for the coming year.

The State Department today made public the text of cablegrams exchanged between the two. King George wired President Hoover as follows:

"At the commencement of the new year so full of promise for the advancement of world peace by naval disarmament, it affords me particular pleasure to offer to you my most cordial greetings together with my best wishes for your happiness and welfare and for the prosperity of the United States of America."

In reply the President said:

"I am happy to receive your majesty's message of new year wishes. The resolve to advance world peace by mutual good will and by the limitation of naval armaments, is the earnest purpose of the British and the American peoples and of their governments and it is my hope, as it will be the endeavor of the American Government, to see this great object attained during the year which has just commenced. I also desire to reciprocate all your majesty's good wishes for the new year."

BIDS ON $9,000,000 CITY BONDS TO BE RECEIVED JAN. 30

Distribution of Funds for 1930 Not Yet Determined, but Several Projects Are Listed.

Mayor Miller and Comptroller Nolte will receive bids for purchase of the $9,000,000 in bonds, which are to finance the 1930 improvement program, at City Hall on Jan. 30. The bonds will bear interest at 4½ per cent annually and the first group, amounting to $1,566,000, will mature on Feb. 1, 1935. The rest will mature annually on a scale of gradually increasing amounts, from $360,000 in 1936 to $666,000 in 1950.

Distribution of the $9,000,000 by bond issue items has not been determined. It is likely, however, that about $3,000,000 will be included for the West End and Southern section of the conversion of River des Peres into a sewer, also perhaps $2,000,000 for financing the widening of Gravois avenue, the North Twelfth boulevard extension or other street projects; the remaining $2,000,000 of the $2,600,000 for establishing Union Station Plaza and the remaining quarter of the $6,000,000 for establishing Memorial Plaza. It has not been planned to include construction of the Municipal Auditorium in this year's program.

Sale of these bonds will bring the total sales of the $87,372,500 bond issue voted on Feb. 9, 1923, to $64,000,000, including the $12,000,000 sold for the Missouri River waterworks. All water division finances are dependent on water revenue rather than the city's tax income.

Not counting the contemplated sale, the city has outstanding now $67,489,000 in bonds, including $12,150,000 in water bonds. Its sinking fund amounts to $12,999,058, including $2,871,755 set apart for retirement of water bonds. The city's statement of its worth—that is to say, the security of the bonds—shows the 1929 assessed valuation of $1,289,655,830, plus $187,808,291 in property owned by the city, a total of $1,477,464,121.

GERMANY IN 1929 CONTINUED GAIN ON DAWES PLAN

Preliminary Surveys to Report of Reparations Chief Indicate the Results Are Encouraging.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—As a preliminary to S. Parker Gilbert's annual report, due several days hence, the Agent-General's office today made public four reports, namely those of the Commissioners of the Reichsbank, Industrial Debentures, Controlled Revenues and Railways provided under the Dawes plan.

The Reichsbank commission's report says: "Once again it can be recorded that the Reichsbank situation in every respect is sound."

Pointing out that the dominant tendency in Germany's business situation during the last year was the extremely strained position on the capital market, the commissioner observes it was possible to meet new capital requirements only by still further increasing the short-term indebtedness already high.

At the beginning of this period "the trade balance, it is true, has gradually improved, but there is no question yet of equilibrium in the balance of payments."

In the commissioner's opinion, the German money market can be eased only if relieved of the pressure of public debts.

Escapes Stock Exchange Crisis.

Referring to the New York stock market unheaval, the report says:

"Germany had no noteworthy speculation in stock exchange securities during the last few months and, accordingly, escaped the stock exchange crisis. But, on the other hand, she had no liquid funds set free as in other countries as a result of liquidation of the crisis." Despite the pressure on the country's economic life, "it is gratifying to note that the producing capacity of Germany was generally unaffected."

The report adds, however, that it was apparent from the increase in the number of bankruptcies and compulsory settlements in general business that credit difficulties had wrought serious consequences.

As regards industries, covered by the report of the Commissioner for Industrial Debentures, a better situation was disclosed. In the 12 months under consideration there were 205 bankruptcies and 348 voluntary windups, involving, respectively, 7,307,500 and 15,000,635 gold marks, which was well below the previous year, when these amounts exceeded 10,000,000 marks and 30,000,000 marks, respectively.

Trade Reorganization Fair.

The commissioner states that industrial reorganization generally is in a fair way of overcoming the difficulties imposed by the new economic conditions. There has been a widespread increase in production and reductions in costs and working expenses. This process is not yet completed and remains one of the country's most important problems. Germany, however, steadily is continuing to develop her industrial relations with other producing countries, notably the United States, Great Britain and France.

Regarding the six key industries—coal, lignite, potash, cast iron, cast steel and rolled metals—the commissioner's report is generally favorable, with production curves rising and Germany holding her position on world markets.

Of coal, she still yields 25.9 per cent of European production. Of lignite, 77.8 per cent of the whole world production; potash and the metals also show figures exceeding the averages of recent years. In steel, the maximum daily production of 57,266 tons was reached last June, a mark which had not been exceeded since 1913.

In copper, Germany still heads European consuming nations. While raw cotton and leather imports have fallen, wool has risen, and the rubber consumption increased 19 per cent, as compared with the previous year, owing to the increased use of motor vehicles. Germany now has 1,185,499 cars on her roads and ranks third in the rubber-using countries.

Increase Shown in Revenue.

According to the Commissioner of Controlled Revenues, namely customs, tobacco, beer, alcohol and sugar, the yield during the fifth annuity year amounted to 2,870,244,000 marks, as compared with 2,852,491,000 in 1927-28.

"In general, the increase of revenue has been due to consolidation of the economic situation, steadily increasing consumption and increased rates of taxation," says the report.

Discussing the customs report, the Commissioner observed: "The future yield of customs rests on a firm base and can hardly fall below that registered in last year's except in case of an extraordinary development of home agricultural production, especially in cereals or of a pronounced weakening of the general economic situation."

The increase in the consumption of tobacco during the five annuity years, according to the report, has been general and remarkable. From 1924 to 1928 the consumption of cigars increased by 33 per cent, cigarettes by 44 per cent and cut tobacco 14 per cent. The per capita consumption now is 105 cigars, 509 cigarettes and 800 grams of cut tobacco.

The consumption of beer also advanced steadily, namely, from 37,753,000 hectolitres in 1924-25 to 54,621,000 in 1928-29.

As to the alcohol monopoly, the yield from this doubled in five years being $36,000,000 marks for 1928-29, during the fifth annuity year 2,838,900 hectolitres of pure spirits were consumed.

Rail Traffic More Favorable.

The Railway Commissioner's report points out that despite many difficulties, operation during the last five years lived up to expectations. The development of traffic and the financial results were more favorable in 1929 than in 1928, on the whole reflecting the development of Germany's economic activity with rising exports and declining imports.

Increased rates failed to affect traffic adversely. The total receipts for 1929 were estimated at 5,370,000,000 and expenditures 4,459,000,000. The surplus of 911,000,000 marks was just sufficient to meet the reparations burdens of the railway company, the preference dividend and the costs for extensions for 1929, in addition to the 80,000,000 marks for bringing the reserve funds up to 500,000,000 marks, as prescribed in the Dawes plan. The year 1930 will be a difficult year as new sources for balancing the budget must be sought. The only course open is again increasing rates. The report concludes:

"The results achieved by the country since 1924 are absolutely encouraging and permits similar conclusions for the future, provided a true economic policy is pursued which takes into consideration the necessity of furthering the country's trade and industry, as well as the needs of the staff on whose devotion the factory operation of the depends."

SMUTS FOR CONTINUED EFFORT TO PUT U. S. IN THE LEAGUE

Former Premier of South Africa Speaks at New York City Luncheon.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Jan Christian Smuts, former Premier of South Africa, today urged the continuation of efforts for the United States to join the League of Nations, prophesying that "the foundations of the earth will be shaken if world peace is not secured."

The General spoke at a luncheon given in his honor by the Committee on the Tenth Anniversary of the League of Nations. A small group of educators, international statesmen and others attended.

"As one from the outside, I want to thank you for the loyal work you have done for the League," Smuts declared. "That work will bear fruit, I'm sure. The office where the League of Nations Association meets is really the greatest place in this great city. Whether we win or lose in our efforts, we are on the side of the great invisible battalions who have worked for peace."

TYPE OF CONTROL OF CITY-COUNTY ROADS DEBATED

Highways Committee of Metropolitan Government Council Considers Its Problems.

Discussion of the complicated problem of how to establish, build and maintain major and local streets and highways in the metropolitan district being devised for St. Louis and St. Louis County was begun by the Highways Committee of the Council on Metropolitan Government, meeting at the City Club yesterday.

The committee elected as its chairman William O. Reeder, a lawyer and Mayor of Deer Creek, a suburb, and as Vice Chairman George M. Berry, an automobile dealer and member of the Executive Committee of the Automobile Club of Missouri. An Executive Committee of the Highways Committee is to be chosen. The immediate task will be to determine methods of procedure.

Prof. Thomas H. Reed, the expert directing the formation of the metropolitan scheme, presented figures on the expenditures of St. Louis, the county and the incorporated suburbs on maintenance and construction of thoroughfares. He also said:

"The highway problem is not simple. There are complications of law and finance. A distinction has to be made between major highways and minor streets. The county has been making excellent progress with roads, but not so much when compared with other counties containing great cities. (Other urban counties receive road taxes from the cities, but here city and county are detached.) The county cannot be expected to provide adequate financing for roads alone. Automobiles from the city have a large part in wearing out those roads.

Problems to Be Solved.

"We run into this problem: Ought the highway situation be centralized in one department to take care of all highways and streets in the city and county? There are serious objections, of course, to that; people in various parts of the county would feel they would be neglected and the money would all be spent downtown, and they would be alarmed at the possibility of increased taxes involved in such a plan. Some persons might feel the job was too big for a single administration.

"These questions arise: Should the whole highway problem be put in one department? If we settle this in the negative, as I think it will be settled, what degree of centralization shall we have? Shall we centralize administration and financing of through highways and leave other streets to be dealt with locally? If we do that, are we creating a dual system? We must remember that St. Louis would be included and its through streets would be under the central authority with local ones left to the city.

"Most of the mileage of county highways is in the unincorporated area. The problem of what to do with that area also arises. We might expand the boundaries of some municipalities and perhaps create one or two new ones, so as to incorporate all the built-up section, then we might incorporate all the remaining outlying section as a single unit. Such an outlying corporation would have a considerable assessed valuation and would contain most of the mileage of roads. It seems that some solution could be worked out so that we could have a rural unit caring for its own roads, with a tax no greater than at present, and with aid by the metropolitan government for through highways."

Another Suggestion.

While Reed said nothing about it, the possibility appears that a scheme might be arranged to have each municipality, including the suggested rural corporation, control its own local routes, with a system of centralized financial and administrative aid corresponding to the practice of Federal aid for construction of State highways. Reed, however, made no definite recommendation. It has been remarked frequently that it would be fair to charge the city and suburbs for county roads, which they use freely.

"We need a scheme for administering the highway system," Reed concluded, "which will be economical, won't involve duplication of overhead and will be satisfactory to the people. I am confident that, without materially increasing taxation, the community can work out a fine highway system."

Figures on Road Costs.

Reed quoted the following statistics:

St. Louis spent $1,155,652 on street maintenance in the last fiscal year and $8,196,268 for street construction, including $6,465,673 paid by property owners through special tax bills. The county, in 1928, spent $756,627 for highway maintenance, including $169,471 paid to the municipalities under the law, and $180,667 for construction work. The 13 larger incorporated suburbs spent $241,824 for street maintenance in 1928, including about $80,000 of the amount paid them by the county, a duplication in the figures made necessary by variations in bookkeeping.

The municipalities' maintenance expenditures varied from $82,661 in University City to $758 in Richmond Heights, and the second largest amount was $42,289 in Clayton. The only construction expenditures shown for the towns, aggregating but $19,364, were $12,731 in Glendale, $2883 in Shrewsbury, $2108 in University City, $1300 in Florissant and $341 in Webster Groves.

The county has spent or contracted for $2,010,000 of highway construction, including streets within the towns, under the $10,000,000 bond issue of 1928.

In addition to the $937,295 spent by the county on maintenance and construction in 1928 it paid $14,078 for interest on protested warrants, bringing the total to $951,373. In addition, there was a deficit in the road fund of $233,647 left from 1927. Road revenue in 1928 was $830,699, so that the deficit at the beginning of 1929 was $354,322. County Highway Engineer Jablonsky said yesterday that the deficit had been reduced to about $200,000 by the beginning of the current year.

Dr. Stocking on "Macbeth."

The Rev. Jay T. Stocking, pastor of Pilgrim Congregational Church, will lecture on "Macbeth, Its Application to Every-day Life," at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Music Hall.

Grab This Chance to Get a 60-Volume High School Course for Only $2.98, Full Payment!

NOW you can fill in those embarrassing gaps in your knowledge. Here, in 60 handy volumes which fit your pocket or handbag, you can get the essentials of the usual High School Education for only $2.98. This is positively all you pay—if you use the special order blank below before our remaining 10,000 sets are gone.

What do the words "A High School Education" mean? They mean a thorough grounding in those essentials of modern knowledge which enable a person to be the most efficient in the everyday activities of his work and of his contact with others. When it is required that a person have a High School Education, it is meant that such a person must be equipped with a substantial background of English, History, General Literature, some Languages, Commercial Subjects (Business and Economics), Mathematics, Science and the Arts. It is expected that such a person will have his intelligence alert and trained to enable him to learn new things readily, to know where to look for facts not already in his possession; in short, to be a man or a woman aware of those fundamentals which form the basis of every education and of all culture.

Probably you have often felt the lack of knowledge you really ought to have at your command. Perhaps you did not get the most out of your school days, or possibly you were obliged to leave school before you had completed your education. Or your High School training has slipped into the past, and you are "rusty" on many subjects. Whatever the reason for the lack, you feel that the void is there—and you want to fill in the gaps! This 60-volume HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATIONAL COURSE is just the thing for you—it is comprehensive, easily understandable, thoroughly reliable and authentic, and absolutely up to date.

Whether you wish to study High School Subjects for the first time, or whether you merely wish to review your High School Education, you will find these 60 books exactly what you need. Read the list of titles carefully as listed at the right—and remember, all you pay for all 60 of these splendid books is two dollars and ninety-eight cents!

A word about this astonishing low cost—the price of $2.98 for all 60 of these books is possible, has been possible, because of mass production. These books have been bought by more than 250,000 people. The popularity of these books is irrefutable indication that they are filling a widespread need. Indeed, the price is so low that many people get the set just to have the books handy for reference. At such a price no one can afford to be without these books. In usual library form they would cost perhaps $25; in the new 2-volume cloth edition they will cost $10—but you can get the same material, word for word, in 60 pocket-sized volumes, for only $2.98 postpaid! But remember—10,000 sets are all we have. You must not delay a moment! Grab this chance NOW!

Easy to Understand

TEXTBOOKS are often dry and musty. This Educational Course will be found refreshingly different from the usual educational volume. Every book has been written with the reader constantly in mind. Every page is clear and readily understandable by the average person. No attempt is spared to provide books which everyone can use to learn without the aid of an instructor.

Every book in this 60-volume set is self-teaching—that is the plan that underlies them all, to make no instructor necessary. Of course, the books are of no value unless you read them with the determination to learn. There is no royal road to knowledge just by letting your eyes run idly over the printed page! But if you have real ambition, then these are books to help you get ahead—these are books which may be of more genuine benefit to you than all four years of formal High School training.

The simplicity of these books is truly amazing. You will be gratified to find them entirely lucid in every way. No subject is kept difficult—all are presented to you so that you can get the most out of them. Just reading these books is educative to an extent that you cannot realize unless you try the experiment! Furthermore, every volume is interesting. The type is of a size to make reading easy. The authors have been interested in their subjects, and this makes it certain that those subjects are presented in a delightfully fascinating manner.

What makes some textbooks difficult for the ordinary reader is at essential facts have been left out—such facts to be supplied by he teacher. In this Educational Course every fact is inserted in he text. With attention and determination a thorough grasp can e had of the subjects represented in this course (see the complete st at the right). It is not necessary to ask questions—every queson has been foreseen and already answered by the writers who have ade this set a marvel of clearness and completeness.

The actual size of the type used in these books (except the reference dictionaries) is 8-point; this is approximately the size type used in your daily newspaper. It is easy to read. Many of the books have illustrations and diagrams to make the text clearer. The books are uniformly bound in stiff covers; they are substantial and neat in appearance. The paper is good white book paper. Each book contains, as a rule, about 15,000 words, or 64 pages.

Variety of Subjects

CONSIDER for a moment the wide scope of these sixty books—think just how comprehensive they are! There are 825,000 words in these sixty volumes. They include a wonderful variety of subjects, from history and economics and literature to mathematics, foreign languages and the arts. Even commercial subjects, such as geography and typewriting, are included. You get a substantial foundation in the arts, and an insight into the great world of science. Then there are the handy reference volumes, the alphabetical dictionaries, which give you concise information just when you need it and exactly as you want it.

Four foreign languages—the languages which most English-speaking people desire to learn—are given in this set. These foreign languages are self-teaching in these handy volumes. They may be readily grasped with the aid of these books.

Everything you need is here—this series is compact and complete in itself. There are two volumes of questions and answers (quizzes) with which you may test your knowledge from time to time. There is that excellent general treatise on "How to Study"—this work alone is really worth the entire price of the set in the valuable hints it gives and in the manner in which it enables the average person to study in such a way that he will get the most possible good out of his efforts.

You will find it invaluable to have at hand many of these books which you may not use at first. Though some of the subjects may seem to you apart from your present interests, they will sooner or later come in handy. Everyone, today, should have a representative library of reference to which he can turn in search of facts when he requires them. In our modern civilization, with the miracles of modern printing, knowledge is within everyone's reach. There is no longer any excuse for any individual to remain in ignorance. Lack of knowledge is not tolerated. Today you must be progressively alert—keep abreast of the times—and maintain a standard of education that is on a par with the knowledge of your fellows.

Five Cents Per Subject Until January 31, 1930

You get 60 books for $2.98 as long as these 10,000 remaining sets last! This is slightly less than five cents per book—can you imagine any book treating, in a text of 15,000 words (the total words in each of these books on the average), a subject like Grammar of Economics or U. S. History, that is not worth five cents? This High School Educational Course, in this 60-volume handy edition, is a bargain of bargains. There is nothing like it anywhere. It is unique in the field of popular education.

The authors of these sixty educational volumes were especially chosen to prepare these works so that the average person may readily assimilate their contents. In spite of the sensationally low cost of these books, they have been written by authorities in their various fields. Some of the writers who have helped to make this High School Educational Course possible are:

Professor Carroll Lane Fenton, of the University of Cincinnati; John Cowper Powys, famous lecturer and critic; Joseph McCabe, world famous scholar and author of 180 books; Lawrence A. Barrett, High School instructor of Mathematics; John S. Gambs, High School teacher; Maynard Shipley, President of the Science League of America; Lloyd E. Smith, former college English assistant; Hereward Carrington, New York Scientist; J. Geo. Frederick, commercial expert; Dr. Isaac Goldberg, well-known critic; Murray Sheehan, educator and novelist; Leo Markun, research student; Nelson Antrim Crawford, well-known writer; Clarence Darrow, famous lawyer, etc., etc.

Thus, it is certain that every one of these books is of outstanding excellence. As a reading course this set cannot be surpassed—for the price of $2.98 you get 825,000 words of text, nearly a million words! The general editorship has been under the direction of E. Haldeman-Julius, famous for his campaigns of popular education and providing good reading at a price within reach of everyone's pocketbook.

Amazing as it sounds it is quite true that $2.98 is full and final payment for all 60 of the books in this High School Educational Course. There are no strings attached to this offer—$2.98 is all you pay. Think how expensive a High School education usually is in comparison—here you get 60 books for no more than one average textbook costs in school. And you dispense with the instructor altogether, you become your own teacher, learning as you read.

We pay the postage to your address on this 60-volume set. The price of $2.98 includes all charges except the small C. O. D. fee (exactly seven cents), which goes to the U. S. postoffice. All packing and carriage charges are otherwise fully paid. You can avoid any possible delay or inconvenience (C. O. D. packages sometimes move slower than regular parcel post, and if you are not home when the package is first delivered it may cause you a little inconvenience) by remitting $2.98 with your order. Satisfied customers everywhere guarantee the value of this set of books. You are assured of satisfaction—when you see the books you will be convinced that they are worth the bargain price of $2.98.

However, send no money with the order unless you wish to. We shall be glad to send the books C. O. D. if you prefer. Just mail the blank and pay the postman on delivery. Prompt service guaranteed.

Ten Extra Volumes

During our campaign for self-education, with our 60-volume HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATIONAL COURSE, we are including 10 additional volumes with each set—the set originally contained only 50 volumes—at no extra cost to the public. This is an indication of our intention to give every purchaser of this course full value for the money he invests in these books. Now 60 volumes make up this complete course, as listed at the extreme right of this advertisement. Notice how thoroughly comprehensive they are, and what a surprising variety of subject matter they cover. Yet the price is only $2.98 for all sixty books—surely this is a bargain if there ever was one. Understand this clearly—$2.98 is all you pay; there are no monthly installments, no further payments whatever. When you pay $2.98 this set of books becomes yours, fully paid for. All you have to do is use the blank before our small supply of 10,000 sets is exhausted. We strongly urge you to act at once—otherwise, you may be disappointed. You have no time to lose. Mail the blank today.

28 REDS ARRESTED IN DEMONSTRATION AT WASHINGTON

All but Three Freed on Plea of Mexican Envoy Before Whose Embassy They Paraded.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Twenty-eight members of the Young Communist League today held their second demonstration in Washington within a month, gathering in front of the Mexican Embassy carrying denunciatory banners and prepared statements of their purpose. Promptly arrested, all except three of the demonstrators were later released.

Ambassador Tellez of Mexico took no cognizance of the demonstration during the half hour it lasted. Later, however, after the demonstrators had been placed in the cells of the nearest police precinct, he followed the example set by President Hoover after a recent similar demonstration at the White House and asked that they be released because of their extreme youth.

Members of the group who made the demonstration were recruited in Baltimore and Washington.

The gist of their protest as proclaimed in banners born by the paraders was aimed against the "imperialism" of President-elect Ortiz Rubio of Mexico, and President Hoover.

In a scuffle with police Joseph Rynkowsky of Baltimore suffered injuries which required hospital treatment. Two other demonstrators, giving their names as Simon Hurwitz and MacBurke of Baltimore, were charged with disorderly conduct. No charges were laid against the rest of the disturbers under leadership of Elizabeth Donnelly, head of the Young Communist League of Baltimore, and they were freed.

Ambassador Tellez was at work in his study when his wife sent word from her suite of the gathering in the street.

Taken to a police station in patrol wagons, the demonstrators cheered and sang the "Internationale." Among them were six women and two Negroes. They registered as students, laborers and tailors.

Four Los Angeles Policemen Hurt Quelling Communist Disturbances.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 4.—Sixteen rioting communists were under arrest today after they had attempted to break up a White Russian lecture by Victor Chernov. Four policemen were injured in the outbreak. Four of the 16 persons under arrest are women.

29 Arrested After Communists Rush Police in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Ten women and 19 men were arrested tonight in a disturbance on upper Fifth avenue, following an outdoor meeting by the communist party to protest against the imprisonment of radicals in Mexico and the imprisonment of textile strikers in Southern mill districts. After the meeting ended, the audience of several hundred began an impromptu parade up the avenue, singing and distributing pamphlets. A patrolman who ordered them to disperse was rushed by the crowd. Four other policemen were unable to quiet the disorder. Reserves were called out.

In the night court Magistrate Gotlieb discharged 23 of the Communistis and gave three men and three women the alternative of two days in jail or $10 fine, each. All chose to serve the jail sentence.

DENIES OUSTING CHURCH COUNCIL'S PUBLICITY MAN

Secretary MacFarland Also Says Maine Governor Was Not Asked to Quit Committee.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of Church of Christ in America, has denied published statements that the council would oust the Rev. Charles Stelzle for "unethical conduct as a publicity man."

The Associated Press, crediting the New York Herald-Tribune, carried these statements on Dec. 11. The report in question said that Mr. Stelzle was instrumental in organizing the Motion Picture Commission of the Federal Council for the purpose of influencing its action in favor of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributers of America, and that he had been dismissed, or was to be dismissed, as an officer of the Federal Council because of this issue.

Dr. MacFarland also denied that former Gov. Carl E. Milliken of Maine had been asked to resign from the Administrative Committee.

357 Births, 264 Deaths in Week.

Eighty-four persons died of organic heart disease, 24 of cancer, 18 of pneumonia, 16 of ailments of the arteries, 15 of Bright's disease, 11 of apoplexy, 10 of tuberculosis, seven of diseases of the circulatory system, a like number of cirrhosis of the liver and five of appendicitis. SNOWDEN URGENT FOR QUICK ACTION ON REPARATIONS

British Delegate to Second Session of Hague Conference Wants Minor Issues Cleaned Up.

By the Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Jan. 4.—Prompt action appeared to be the desire of the delegates at the end of the second day of the second session of the Hague reparations conference. The program mapped out will require about a week before questions can be put before the commissioners for decision.

Philip Snowden, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, made it clear in a talk today with Finance Minister Moldenhauer of Germany that he did not want to dally here with secondary issues remaining to be cleared up. He was described as in a most accommodating frame of mind, ready to be liberal, and anxious to avoid any difficulties before the London naval conference now only a fortnight away.

Austria Wants to Wipe Slate Clean

The smaller creditors of Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria fe.l in line with the suggestion of prompt action. Austria formally proposed as the best way to settle the Eastern reparations that everyone agree to wipe the slate clean of all claims on both sides.

The countries of the Little Entente raised no particular objection to this, but wanted to talk the matter over in private. If they decide to take a liberal view of Austria's case they do not want it to serve as a precedent when they discuss their claims against Hungary, which they propose to push. Hungary so far has refused compromise proposals.

Bulgaria, while still declaring it ought to have a complete moratorium, is understood to have made it known it will agree to pay 12,500,000 francs a year to reparations creditors if the Powers insist.

Italy's Dilemma.

One of the greatest complications connected with the Eastern reparations is that if Italy is finally unable to collect what it is due from Austria and Hungary it will be unable to hand over to the British the amount promised last August which made possible the agreement at the first Hague conference.

Private meetings between delegates of the various countries continued with Foreign Minister Curtius of Germany in conference with Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France. Franco-German relations were also discussed at luncheon between other delegates of the two countries. They considered in particular methods of replacing the sanctions provided for in the treaty of Versailles in the event of a default by the Reich in the payment of reparations.

The Germans declare they will not tolerate further existence of the right of the French under the treaty to reoccupy German territory. The French position in reply is that they are not anxious to occupy German territory and that they are willing to accept any satisfactory substitute. Thus far the only feasible substitute proposed is an arbitration board to be presided over by an American.

WOULD REMOVE 21ST ST. TRACK

Public Service Co. Applies to Commission for Permit.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 4.—The St. Louis Public Service Co. applied to the Missouri Public Service Commission today for authority to remove its double tracks from Twenty-first street, between Chouteau and Clark avenues, a distance of about a half mile.

The track has not been in use for several years, due to a rerouting of street railway lines after the Twenty-first street viaduct over railroad tracks of the Terminal Railroad Association was closed, because of its unsafe condition. The company, in asking permission to remove the tracks, does not propose to tear them up until such time as the Twenty-first street viaduct is reconstructed, or Twenty-first street is repaved.

STATE TO SPEND $67,415,000 ON PUBLIC BUILDING

Figures for 1930 Sent by Gov. Caulfield to Secretary of Commerce at Hoover's Request.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 4.—Gov. Caulfield today forwarded to R. P. Lamont, Secretary of the United States Department of Commerce, a report that $67,415,759 in public works would be constructed in Missouri during 1930, based on information received from State departments and from 269 cities and towns and 71 of the 114 counties of the State.

The information was compiled in response to a recent message from President Hoover to Governors of the various states requesting reports on the amount of public construction work planned for 1930, and urging that such work be expedited.

Requests for the information were sent by Gov. Caulfield to the county courts of each of the 114 counties, and to mayors of all cities, towns and villages in Missouri, but many of the cities and towns, including Kansas City, and 43 of the counties did not report.

The total includes $30,000,000 for construction of State highways, $12,362,000 for public buildings, $19,159,159 for county road construction, street paving and bridges and $5,894,000 for municipally owned public utilities. The report does not include any construction planned by private enterprise, or by privately owned public utilities.

St. Louis reported $12,750,000 in public construction planned. This included $2,000,000 for school buildings, and $4,050,000 for bridges and viaducts.

The St. Louis County report included $1,000,000 for school buildings, $3,470,000 for county road construction and $573,600 in construction work on the new county hospital.

Huckins Taken to Cedar Rapids, Ia

By the Associated Press.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., Jan. 4.—George S. Huckins, wanted in Cedar Rapids, Ia., on a warrant charging he obtained money under false pretenses in a 52 per cent interest scheme, departed with Sheriff Harry Manchester tonight for Cedar Rapids. Huckins also was accompanied by a trained nurse. He said he was suffering from high nervousness which he attributes to "mental anguish due to overwork on figures."

CYTRON CO. CREDITORS FILE TWO NEW SUITS

One Asks for Receiver for Huntington Arms, Other Seeks to Intervene.

Two new actions growing out of the receivership of the Cytron Mortgage Co. were filed in Circuit Court yesterday by creditors. One is a suit for a receiver for the Huntington Arms Apartment Hotel, 5560 Pershing avenue, filed by the Dewer Realty Co., holder of a $1250 promissory note. The other is a plea by Sam Melman Jr. and the Central Hardware Co. to intervene in the original receivership suit filed by James Byrne against the Cytron Co. and other defendants including the Estate Development Co.

The Dewer petition also asks for an injunction to prevent Leon J. Leonson, trustee for bondholders, from selling the Huntington Arms property. It is alleged that the Cytron Mortgage Co. controlled the rental income through ownership of second and third deeds of trust and that in executing the second deed the Cytron concern gave only $98,250 actual value for a $150,000 mortgage. The third deed, the petition set forth, covered a $52,853 bill for construction costs, some of the items it is contended for work done at "fictitious prices." The Dewer note was given Feb. 19, 1927, and $400 has been paid on it.

The intervening action was presented to Judge Pearcy by Attorneys Edward W. Foristel and Edward K. Schwartz, but on objection by Attorney A. B. Frey, representing the Cytron company, the Court made no order except to set the application for hearing on the law docket. Frey contended that the intervenors were not properly parties to the action. They state in their plea that they are creditors of the Cytron company.

Melman and the Central Hardware Co. alleged that the sale at foreclosure last week of the Greystone Apartments was brought about by the Estate Development Co., which signed a bond issue against the property and the Cytron company, in which the Cytron company took a loss of $125,000. The property was bought in by the Missouri State Life Insurance Co. for $400,000, subject to incumbrances. As creditors of the Cytron company, intervenors ask that the sale be set aside, asserting it was unnecessary.

The plea sets forth that M. H. Rodemeyer, receiver of the Cytron company by appointment of the Federal Court, is vice president of the Estate Development Co.

A group of six turned in 68's for a third-place tie. They were Dick Linares, Tucson, Ariz.; Johnny Farrell, Ste. Augustine, Fla.; Ed Stokes, Denver; Massie Miller, Norwick, Conn.; Henry Cuici, Bridgeport, Conn., and Joe Kirkwood, Philadelphia.

Eagle and Six Birdies.

Seaver bagged an eagle and half a dozen birdies in his sensational tour of the rolling fairways. The tourney's young star shot 31, four under par, on the way out, and got back in 35, two under. Only one hole, the sixteenth, saw him falter. It is a par four hole. He

MIKE BRADY LEADS MIAMI OPEN WITH 150

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 4.—Braving a high wind that swept the Miami Country Club course today, Mike Brady, veteran Mamaroneck, N. Y., professional sunk an eight-foot putt as dusk fell tonight to win first day honors in the annual $3000 Miami open golf tournament with a score of 150 for the 36 holes.

Brady was just one stroke ahead of Al Heron, Reading, Pa., and Willie Klein, Miami Beach and former Miami open champion, as the 155 registrants in the 72-hole tourney finished their driving and putting for the day.

He made his put under the difficulties of near darkness and a high wind that had played havoc all day with wood and iron shots, after he had been told that a second stroke would bring him into a tie.

Sarazen Shoots 155.

Gene Sarazen, defending champion, encountered bad going to finish tonight with a group that held 155 for their day's mark, and with seven other contestants between him and the three leaders.

Dopesters who had favored Gene today above the other entries were comfortable tonight in the recollec-

Dan Daly Says He "Took a Dive" In Bout With the Great Shires

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 4.—The Ohio State Journal tomorrow will ay that Dangerous Dan Daly, Arthur (The Great) Shires' opponent hen the baseball star entered the pugilistic world in Chicago early in December, in an interview today said that "he took a dive" in the Chicago bout. He refused to name the men issuing the instructions that he permit Shires to win.

Dangerous Dan Daly is Jim Gerry, a Columbus lad.

Following is Gerry's statement:

"A few days before the fight I received a wire from Cleveland, asking me if I wished to box in Chicago. I accepted without the slightest idea of whom I was going to fight. I arrived in Chicago on Sunday, the day before the fight. They treated me like a king. When I was worked out in a gymnasium on Sunday afternoon a large crowd assembled, including many newspaper reporters and photographers. I had, of course, been registered at the hotel as Dangerous Dan Daly and was told to forget, for a few days at least, my true name.

"Monday afternoon I was taken on a sightseeing trip and one of the places visited was the county jail. There were a lot of fellows in the hospital ward all bandaged up who might have been slugged after being taken for a ride. Well, when they told me just before the fight that I was to take a dive or else, I thought about those poor fellows in the workhouse and the fact that I had only $3 in my pockets. I was told that the crowd was larger than expected and that they would give me $150 and my expenses for my services instead of $100 as promised, provided I 'took a dive.' It was decided that I should go into the ring and mix like we were mad at each other and then stick out my chin for Mr. Shires to hit it. They told me to fall on my face so that the referee could not see my eyes. I must have done right for they patted me on the back after the fight and the next day paid me $150 and also bought me a lot of clothes.

"You can tell the world, however, that Jim Gerry, or Dangerous Dan Daly, whichever they care to call me, can whip the great Arthur Shires any place except Chicago. I'll even fight him there if they promise not to take me for a ride if I whip him."

Shires' Hearing Postponed.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Jan. 4.—The Michigan Boxing Commission, after a hearing this afternoon, postponed until Jan. 9 definite action on a request by Art Shires, Chicago baseball player-pugilist, for reinstatement following his recent suspension, as the result of charges that an attempt had been made to "fix" a bout here with "Battling" Criss of Rockwood, Mich.

ANDERSON'S JOB DECLARED VACANT; ALUMNI KEEP UP FIGHT

The following statement, in typewritten form, was presented to the Post-Dispatch last night through the publicity department of St. Louis University:

"The authorities of St. Louis University, through the Rev. J. J. O'Regan, S. J., personal athletic representative of the president of the university, today announced the following statement regarding the position of the head coach of football:

" 'The Athletic Board of St. Louis University tendered to Mr. Heartly W. Anderson, head football coach, a contract for the year of 1930. The terms of this contract in the judgment of the Athletic Board were fair and equitable. Mr. Anderson promptly refused the contract and announced that he had made other arrangements.

" 'The authorities of St. Louis University have been requested by friends of Mr. Anderson to review the case. After careful consideration of the facts, they do not feel justified in reopening the matter and at the present time the head coach position of the university has not been filled.'

"It also was announced by Father O'Regan that Mike Nyikos, assistant coach, has been made head basketball coach and Charles (Chile) Walsh, assistant coach, has been retained in his capacity as professor of physical education and assistant football coach.

"Coach Anderson refused the contract offered him on Dec. 20, 1929, and announced that he had made other arrangements."

Board Not in Session Since Authorizing Offer to Anderson.

Maurice V. Joyce, a member of the university athletic board, when informed of the statement last night, said that it was not the result of any action by the board, but rather a statement by the Rev. Charles H. Cloud, S. J., president of the university, and Father O'Regan.

"Lee Daly, chairman of the board, has been out of the city," Joyce explained, "and for that reason the board has not been able to hold any meeting since the one in December, when an offer to Coach Anderson was authorized. However, as soon as Mr. Daly returns he undoubtedly will call a meeting, when the matter probably will be taken up again."

Other alumni of St. Louis University, when informed of the statement, expressed confidence that Anderson still might be persuaded to remain as head coach of the Billikens.

A prominent alumnus who said he was speaking in the interest of other alumni and friends of the university, who had the best interests of the institution at heart, said that he was confident Anderson would be head coach in 1930.

"It is my sincere hope that no personal animosity will enter into this problem of ours," he said, "and for that reason and because I believe that I can lend considerable help in bringing about a peaceful settlement of the problem, I do not care to have my name brought into the discussion.

"However, I am certain that when the offer, authorized by the athletic board of St. Louis University at its December meeting, is tendered to Coach Anderson he will agree to remain as our head coach.

"I know positively that the athletic board at its December meeting authorized an offer which would have been perfectly satisfactory to Coach Anderson and which he would have accepted immediately. I also know positively that that authorized offer has never been received by Anderson."

BABY JOE GANS DEFEATS SPANIARD

The Ring's Biggest and Newest Title Hope

WRAY'S COLUMN

Seasoning the Fight Dish.

AFTER a dull winter, the heavyweight fight boys are looking up. The awakening of Tuffy Griffiths, the arrival of the elephantine Primo Carnera and the coming of Vittorio Campolo are indications that early spring and summer business will be good for the big time fight promoters.

Carnera and his possibilities are, at this moment, the focus of interest. The big fellow already is encountering the vexations that attend the arrival of almost any foreign fighter, with money - earning possibilities. Threats of deportation, the refusal of a permit to box in New York because of the lack of license, the probability of a tangle over managers, with three already on the horizon, and his lack of familiarity with American conditions will cause the Big Boy plenty of grief.

Giants Fall Easy and Hard.

WITH Sharkey refusing to face Griffiths at Miami, there is a chance that Carnera, if he shows enough in early bouts here, will get a chance against Sharkey or some of the leading candidates in the heavy division.

Physical giants have not fared well in the past against formidable contenders. There was "the Human Freight Car," Ed Dunkhorst. Ed weighed around 300; but 160-pound Bob Fitzsimmons knocked him loose from his couplings with a punch or two.

Herr Plaake of Holland, was another enormous man-mountain to try his hand at fighting in this country. But Kid McCoy flattened the Dutchman in two rounds, although outweighed more than 100 pounds.

Carnera an Athlete.

SELDOM, however, have the behemoths of the past presented the splendid physical developments of Carnera. For the most part all the ring giants of history were rather slovenly in body, round, sleek and even paunchy. Carnera, as shown by his picture in today's sport section, is really a remarkable specimen of athletic development. His pictures all show that he is in splendid condition, with that healthy leanness that goes with the peak of form. Weighing 287 pounds, he is nothing but bone and muscle.

The power for absorbing and giving punishment contained in that immense frame would appear to be limitless. If he can develop any boxing skill at all, he will be a terrible opponent to face, in the ring.

Sharkey Sidesteps.

SHARKEY has gone to Miami—but not to fight. Apparently he has passed up his Feb. 27 date, rather than face Griffiths—which will make Sharkey appear a sidestepper.

Sharkey says he does not think Griffiths is ready for a big fight and that he will not draw.

Jack should worry . . . The Garden corporation offered him $100,000 to fight Griffiths. If Griff is "easy," why does Sharkey toss this easy money to the winds?

It is probable that Sharkey does not care to risk being outpointed by Griffiths—as might happen — and thus lose the

LAYTON SCORES SECOND VICTORY IN CUE TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Otto Reiselt, the diminutive smiling billiard master from Philadelphia, shoved himself prominently into the national three-cushion championship picture today as he hung up his second victory of the current tourney with a sensational 50 to 46 win over Augie Kieckhefer, the Chicago southpaw, in 55 innings.

In the opening game of the afternoon Harry Schuler of Brooklyn met his second defeat, bowing to Gus Copulos of Detroit 50 to 34 in 45 innings of drab billiards.

Allan Hall, youthful St. Louis star, made his tournament debut with a 50 to 35 victory over Charles Jordon of Los Angeles in 59 innings.

Hall played a safe, sane game, having a high run of six. Jordon, while failing to make the sensational shots that gave Reiselt a battle on the opening night, went down to defeat with a great exhibition of shot making. Apparently hopelessly beaten, the Pacific Coast entry ran six in the fifty-sixth inning to make his score 35 and then staved off defeat for three more innings with perfectly executed safety plays.

With a brilliant unfinished high run of seven, Johnny Layton of St. Louis, the defending champion, defeated Tiff Denton of Kansas City, Mo., 50 to 45, in 57 innings of dull billiards. Neither player was able to get started, Denton's best run being five, while the best Layton could do until the final inning was four. It was Layton's second victory of the tournament.

By Dent McSkimming.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 4.—A half dozen good sprinters and five lesser lights met in the historic Pontchartrain handicap, feature event of this afternoon's race program at Fairgrounds track here, and out of the struggle came High Score victorious.

Rancocas Stable's Donnay, which has in the past cut a formidable figure in the very best company, was expected to provide most of the competition but he hadn't made a real fast move when the finish line was reached. Instead, it was the Three D Stable's Zacaweista that bore down on High Score in the stretch, failing by ever so little to catch him. High Score had an advantage of three lengths at the half mile ground but he lost everything but a length and a half at the finish. But that was abundant. Coots, of the George Collins entry, was third.

Thrills at Start and Finish.

Among the also rans was Uluniu, which as a 2-year-old was a sensation at Fairmount (St. Louis) and the Chicago tracks. He finished a bad last, disappointing many backers, for he was rather heavily played.

Only the start and the actual finish provided excitement. Coots and Double Heart broke quite as fast as High Score and the struggle which developed in the first 200 yards for the lead was thrilling. Then, by grace of nothing other than superior speed, High Score popped to the front, shook off the others and went on to establish a lead of three lengths as they turned out of the back stretch. Zacaweista, after overcoming some difficulties in the way of interference, came on to challenge in the stretch and was really going much faster than the leader in the last sixteenth, but the sprint was too long delayed.

Track Not Fast.

The Fairgrounds track is far from fast, although it appears generally dry. High Score's time, 1:13 2-5, might have been closer to the track record of 1:11 1-5 had the running surface been tighter. The wet spots in the track, at the six furlong turn and at the turn into the stretch, are the only blots on an otherwise perfect racing picture.

A crowd estimated at 6000 persons enjoyed the day's program, protected from the chill weather by the glass-inclosed grandstand.

Other features of the day's racing was another victory for Uncommon Gold and a few good prices.

Uncommon Gold, even money favorite, won the fifth race in a drive, over Mole Hill. Weilet was third. Uncommon Gold and Weilet raced together for half a mile, when Weilet dropped back. Uncommon Gold then drew away but in the final furlong was driving hard to beat Mole Hill half a length.

Garnish, winner of the third event, paid $18.60 for $2, and Chatterblack, which took the sixth, returned $20.40 for $2. Standard Bearer, in the seventh, was the longest priced winner, paying $21.90 in the mutuels.

PACKS TO OFFER $1000 A NIGHT RENT FOR ARENA

By W. J. McGoogan

Thomas N. Packs, wrestling and boxing promoter, who yesterday voluntarily voided a three-year contract as matchmaker of The Arena Sports Club, tomorrow will meet Ben Brinkman, president, and Edward W. Foristel, vice president of the Sports Club, to submit a proposition to rent The Arena for boxing and wrestling shows.

While all the details of Packs' intended proposal are not definite, as yet, it is understood that he plans to offer The Arena company a flat rental of $1000 for each show and an option of 10 per cent of the gate receipts. In addition, The Arena would retain its right to operatae all concessions, including the parking of automobiles at 25 cents each.

Packs would assume all financial risks incident to the holding of the programs and would be held responsible for the payment of all purses to boxers under his bond as a licensed boxing promoter, as he is at present.

Arena Company Favorable to Plan.

In accepting Packs' voided contract yesterday, Foristel stated that Arena officials had reached the conclusion that it would be better for them to withdraw from the active promotion of boxing bouts because of their limited knowledge of the mechanics of the business, and while he was not in position to state whether or not Packs' proposal to rent the building would be accepted, he indicated that the plan as he understood it was exactly what The Arena officials wanted.

He went further and said that he believed The Arena Sports Club would co-operate with Packs on future shows to the extent of indorsing those which were satisfactory to the Sports Club's Boxing Committee and would circularise its members to that effect.

The Arena Sports Club members paid $100 each for their memberships and they have a financial interest in the athletic programs conducted in the building, in addition to being given the first choice of seats which, of course, they pay for.

Members' Privileges Intact.

Foristel said that these privileges would not be affected in any way should Packs' proposal be accepted. He remarked that the possibility of members receiving a return on their investment would likely be enhanced, if boxing promotion were discontinued because

MILLERS MEET TABLERS IN FIRST-ROUND NATIONAL SOCCER CUP MATCH

Referee, Robert (Ribby) Murphy; linesmen, Al Peterson and Len Zarschel. Starting time, 2:30 o'clock. Place, Sportsman's Park. Time of periods—45 minutes.

By Herman Wecke

Although the Ben Millers are the present leaders in the St. Louis Soccer League, the team will be no overwhelming favorite to defeat the Tablers in the first round national challenge cup match scheduled to be decided at Sportsman's Park this afternoon, starting at 2:30 o'clock. Regular cup contest periods of 45 minutes will prevail, with Ribby Murphy as referee.

The winner of the match, along with the Hellrungs, will qualify to represent St. Louis in the second round of the competition. The Hellrungs trimmed the Madisons, 3 goals to 1, on Christmas day.

Johnny Marre will save two of his veteran performers—Harry Ratican and Al McHenry—for substitute purposes, inasmuch as cup game rules this season allow the substitution of two players on each side until 15 minutes before the game is completed. This is the first time in the history of the national competition that it has been permissible to substitute. However, this does not apply to players put out of the contest by the referee. A man who is ejected cannot be replaced and the team as has been the case in previous campaigns, must go short-handed.

The Tabler Forwards.

With Ratican and McHenry on the sidelines at the start at least, the Tabler front wall will be made up of five speedy athletes. McAuliffe and Brengle will be on the wings, with Moore, the league's leading goal scorer and Bocknicek a real ball hawk, at inside and Cronin at center. This makes a formidable front wall.

The Millers also will have a speedy quintet, reinforced by the return to the game of Joe Hennessy. Hennessy will play at inside right, leaving Larry Kickham, the young star of the league, at center. Mulroy, Nash and Curran will be the other Miller forwards.

At the center halfback position the Tablers will show Johnny Kane, a member of the Olympic squad here a few years ago, who has developed into one of the best defensive backs in the city. His offensive play, however, has suffered, mainly due to the system of three backs used by the Tablers. Claeys, another young star, will be at right half, while the Millers will show Diaz, a newcomer, at center half.

Two Real Fullbacks.

Two of the best young fullbacks brought up in some years will be in action with the Tablers. They are Carl Dorley, formerly of the Finans, and Mike McGirl from the Russells. Dorley is a real star and he had to beg for a chance. To get rid of him, Johnny Marre signed him to a contract. And now a manager would have to go pretty high to make a trade for the youngster, who also plays baseball, being better than a fair third baseman. However, that's the way some stars are found. McGirl is right behind Dorley in ability. Both youngsters can get the ball out of the danger zone. And how! The veterans Vaughn and Erbe, with Hamm, will be the Ben Miller defenders.

The Tablers' last game was on Dec. 22, when the club battled to a 5-5 decision against the Millers. The Millers since then took a 5 to 3 wallop on the chin from the Holleys of Detroit. On the season's play the two are even. Each club has won a match, while two have resulted in draws.

that was the most risky financial item on the club's program. Soccer, football, the proposed hockey club and other games are almost certain to pay The Arena Sports Club well, he said.

The contract under which Packs operated at The Arena included Gene Strauss and Jack O'Connor as his associates. Their connection with The Arena was terminated along with Packs', but Packs said they would be offered a share in any future enterprise with which he may connected at The Arena.

The meeting between Packs, Foristel and Brinkman was scheduled for yesterday but was postponed until tomorrow because Brinkman was called out of the city.

Kosky, Shea's Opponent Tuesday, Arrives, Works Out

Fay Kosky, Los Angeles featherweight, who will meet Eddie Shea, Chicago Hebrew, in the feature ten-round match on next Tuesday night's professional boxing program at the New Coliseum arena, arrived yesterday and took part in a workout at the National gymnasium. The match is listed as the topliner of five matches arranged by Tommy Sullivan, matchmaker for the Stockham American Legion Post.

THE COLISEUM CARD

Main event—Eddie Shea, Chicago, vs. Fay Kosky, Los Angeles, 10 rounds. Weight, 127 pounds. Referee—Harry Cook.

Semiwindup — Charley Lupica, Chicago, vs. Martie Fields, San Francisco, 10 rounds. Weight, 133 pounds.

Third preliminary — Freddie Starr, Jacksonville, Fla., vs. Nick Broglio, Herrin, Ill., six rounds. Weight, 137 pounds.

Second preliminary—Dick Castillo, St. Louis, vs. Pee Wee Terry, St. Louis, six rounds. Weight, 118.

Curtain-raiser—Bill Dixon, Kansas City, vs. Johnny Rocco, New York, four rounds. Weight, 150 pounds.

Kosky, who is a southpaw, is a well-built lad and makes a fine impression in the ring. He worked out for one hour, shadow boxing five rounds, jumping rope and working the pulleys.

He held Shea to a draw decision when they met several months ago in Chicago. The Californian also has beaten a number of well-known ringmen, among them being Ignacio Fernandez, Santiago Zorilla and Benny (Kid) Carter. He won over Fernandez three weeks before the Filipino knocked out Al Singer, New York sensation.

Lost Two Decisions.

In 131 matches, Kosky has dropped but two decisions, and one of the setbacks came at the hands of Andy Martin of Boston, whom he later defeated decisively in a return engagement. Martin owns decisions over Shea, Bud Taylor and Andre Routis. Kosky ran his winning streak to 107 matches before he suffered a setback.

Shea has made a fine impression in his matches here, for he stopped Phil O'Dowd in less than one round and administered lacings to Johnny (Peewee) Kaiser and Young Montreal in his three local scraps. Shea's 1929 record shows he has won 12 of his 18 fights by knockouts. Shea will arrive today and take on Charley Lupica, Chicago Italian, in a workout at the National Gymnasium.

Lupica and Martie Fields, Pacific Coast junior lightweight, who are slated to battle in the 10-round semi-windup, reported last night. Fields, who is a brother of Jackie Fields, holder of the world welterweight title, will serve as Kosky's sparring mate this afternoon.

Held Kosky to Draw.

Fields is credited with having met the best battlers in his division, but it is expected that Lupica will put up a strong fight. Lupica held Kosky to a draw last summer on the Pacific Coast, as well as gaining a decision over Ignacio Fernandez. Other battlers he has beaten are Jimmy Hackley of Indianapolis; Charles Gaston, Belgian champion, and Milton Manguna, who owns a victory over Johnny (Peewee) Kaiser.

Two six-round matches and a four-round curtain-raiser rounds out the card. The opening bout will be between Johnny Rocco, Utica (N. Y.) middleweight, and Billy Dixon of Kansas City.

In the bantamweight bout, Dick Castillo, South Side slugger, and Peewee Terry, former district bantamweight champion, will trade blows, while Freddie Starr, Jacksonville (Fla.) lightweight, will take on Nick Broglio of Herrin, Ill.

Matchmaker Sullivan announced that the Shea-Kosky match will be refereed by Harry Cook. Al Neist and Robert Parkinson will officiate in the other bout.

HELLRUNGS TO PLAY GILLESPIE IN INDOOR GAME

The Hellrung & Grimms of the St. Louis Soccer League will meet the Gillespie (Ill.) team in the feature attraction of an indoor soccer program at The Arena, Thursday Jan. 16 under the auspices of the Jackson Johnson Jr. Post No. 72 of the American Legion, it was announced yesterday.

In a preliminary game the Kolsters will play the Academys, if permission is granted by the Governing Board of Municipal football. Such permission has been requested by both teams which are members of the Municipal League.

Nine men will be used on each side in both games as 11-man teams seemed too big for the modified field at The Arena in the first contest which was held there last month.

A novelty contest is being arranged by Robert McMillan for the Legion Post in which two five-man soccer teams will play. It is planned to choose the five speediest men from the professional and amateur teams and pit them against each other in a game in which corner kicks, points and goals all count in the score. This game will be played in two halves of seven minutes each.

The general admission price to the show will be 50 cents with box seats at $1 each.

BOROTRA BEATS BILL TILDEN IN FRENCH FINAL

PARIS, France, Jan. 4.—Before the largest gathering that ever assembled for a covered court contest in France, William T. Tilden was defeated by Jean Borotra, the "Bounding Basque," losing in four sets, 6—4, 6—2, 4—6, 6—1.

The French ace has seldom appeared to better advantage and the American was able only rarely to take the lead from his rival.

Speed defeated Tilden, who seemed blinded at times by his opponent's dazzling stroking. The Bounding Basque, always at his best on wood courts, stormed the net at every opportunity, while Tilden elected to play a baseline game. The match was evenly contested, with Borotra tallying 114 points and Tilden 106.

Despite his defeat, Tilden seemed as able as a year ago, although he tired somewhat in the last set. His famous "cannon ball" working perfectly, Big Bill served 11 aces.

The crowd, which overflowed onto the court, bothered both players. Many of the spectators were sitting just behind the baseline and along the side lines and sometimes actually interfered with the players' strokes.

Tilden leaves tomorrow for the Riviera, where he is paired with his young countryman, Wilbur F. Coen Jr., in doubles.

IOWA TO MAKE THIRD BID FOR RE-ADMITTANCE

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Jan. 4.—The third attempt of the University of Iowa to regain re-admittance into the good graces of the Big Ten conference will have its inception here next Thursday when a special committee of Western Conference representatives comes to Iowa City.

While the committee will visit the Hawkeye campus primarily to investigate the status of 13 athletes suspended by Old Gold officials for participation in the now famous "trust fund," Iowa officials hope their visit will open the way to the early presentation of a new petition for the Hawkeyes' reinstatement.

Twice since the Big Ten faculty committee voted to sever athletic relations with the University of Iowa, effective Jan. 1, the Hawkeye athletic moguls have sought to have the action rescinded. Both attempts have failed.

The first was made shortly after the conference took action last May. At that time, Iowa sought a re-hearing of its case.

The second came a scant month ago, when Iowa presented a formal petition for reinstatement to the conference meeting at Chicago.

Since that time, the University athletic council has wielded the ineligibility ax with disastrous effect on various Old Gold teams. First Capt. Virgil David, of the basketball team was ruled ineligible for scholastic ineligibility. Later the Hawkeye council ruled 14 athletes ineligible because they had borrowed sums ranging from a few dollars to about $80 from a so-called "trust fund." The cases of 13 of these men will be presented to the investigating committee Thursday, the fourteenth having already completed his athletic career.

WRAY BROWN IS AGAIN NO. 1 IN VALLEY TENNIS

By Davison Obear

Eleven St. Louis tennis players were awarded places in the 1929 men's ranking of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association, according to the list announced by Karl H. Hodge of this city, chairman of the Ranking Committee. The official ranking of women and junior players will probably be ready by Jan. 15.

Wray D. Brown, Triple A and Ferris Tennis Club player, was placed first in the men's singles ranking as a result of his winning the Missouri Valley singles title at Independence, Kan., last July. Since 1922, Brown has been ranked No. 1 in the Missouri Valley six times. He gained this honor in 1922 and 1923, losing it to B. I. C. Norton in 1924 and 1925, regaining it in 1926 and holding it for the past four seasons.

The men's doubles honors were awarded to Wray Brown and Harris Coggeshall of Des Moines, the Missouri Valley champions. Brown and Coggeshall also won the doubles title in 1926 and 1927, while in 1928 Brown and Teddy Eggmann, local player, won the event.

Four St. Louisans in First Ten.

St. Louis has only four players in the first 10 singles ranking this year, as compared to the 1928 list. Charles Barnes, No. 4; Sidney Smith, No. 7, and Fred Josties, No. 8, last year, are not named, owing to insufficient data, while Teddy Eggmann, No. 6, was dropped to No. 11 in the list. Gustave H. Boehmer Jr., local junior champion, made rapid strides during the 1929 season, receiving second place in the men's singles, due to his defeat of Harris Coggeshall, Des Moines, in the Missouri Valley championship.

Karl P. Kammann, St. Louis, who was No. 9 last year, advanced to No. 4, while Karl H. Hodge, another local star, moved up from No. 12 to No. 10 in the singles list. Vernon Tietjen advanced from the third ten to No. 12 in the second team. Forrest Stuckman, Triple A player, was named No. 16 and William M. Martin Jr., former Yale star, was placed No. 18. In the third ten the St. Louis players are Everett Davis Jr. and Eugene Hawkins, both of whom competed in the Missouri Valley championship in addition to local events.

Difficulty in Ranking Teams.

In order to qualify for ranking in the men's singles a player was required to participate in two important events, either the Missouri Valley and a state or district event or in both a district and state tournament. The ranking committee, however, was obliged to deviate from this ruling in the men's doubles, as there was not a big number of teams competing in more than one event. The committee, therefore, selected teams making the best showing either in the Missouri Valley or one of the state tournaments.

The 1929 Missouri Valley winners, Brown and Coggeshall, were, of course, named first in the men's doubles. Karl Kammann and Karl Hodge, playing their first tournament as a team, made an excellent showing in the Missouri State championship at Kansas City, reaching the final round where they lost to the Texas team of Barr and Quick, who had previously won several important events. Hodge and Kammann made a better showing against Barr and Quick than any other team ranked.

The ranking follows:

Men's Singles, First Ten.

1. Wray D. Brown, St. Louis.
2. G. H. Boehmer Jr., St. Louis.
3. Harris M. Coggeshall, Des Moines.
4. Karl P. Kamman, St. Louis.
5. Frank Brody Jr., Des Moines. Moines.
6. Leslie DeWitt, Wichita, Kan.
7. Dave Freeborn, Tulsa, Ok.
8. Harold Thurman, Oklahoma City, Ok.

10. Karl H. Hodge, St. Louis.

Men's Singles, Second Ten.

11. Theodore Eggmann, St. Louis.
12. W. Vernon Tietjen, St. Louis.
13. William Flynn, Kansas City.
14. Joseph Van Ginkel, Des Moines.
15. Phillip Close, Kansas City.
16. Forrest Stuckman, St. Louis.
17. Charles Davis, Oklahoma City, Ok.
18. William Martin Jr., St. Louis.

BILLIKEN SQUAD DEPARTS TO PLAY TWO IOWA FIVES

By Glen McDonald

Coach Mike Nyikos of St. Louis University, accompanied by a squad of 10 basketball players, will leave St. Louis this evening for a two-day invasion of Iowa. During the trip the Billikens will meet two Missouri Valley Conference opponents. The locals will play the Grinnell team tomorrow at Grinnell, Ia., and the following night they will meet the Drake University quintet at Des Moines.

Coach Nyikos will take his regular five and a reserve for each position. The men to make the trip are Captain "Barney" Oldfield, Ham Strong, Frank Kennedy and Ford Brown, forwards; Lyle Drury and Lester Roberts, centers; Jack Joyce, Leslie Hunt, Ollie Anderson and Jack McPartland guards. Student Manager Bob Hannegan and Trainer Bob Bauman also will accompany the team.

Although the Billikens defeated both Drake and Grinnell in two games last year, Coach Nyikos expects hard games from each team. He fears Grinnell especially, as the Pioneers have a very small basketball court and virtually the same squad that played the Bills last year. Nine of last year's players—De Long, Miner, Russ, Ingrams, forwards; Humphrey, McDonald, centers; Macy, Fail and Douglas, guards, were sophomores last season and were seen in action against the Billikens. Coach John Truesdale of Grinnell lost only one man, Captain Coggeshall, by graduation. The improvement of Truesdale's sophomore team last year was shown in its play against the Bills. St. Louis won the first game at Grinnell by a 33-22 score, but the Pioneers lost, 22-21, in a game at the Billiken gym near the close of the cage season.

The Drake Bulldogs will have exactly the same team that faced the Billikens last year and lost a pair of games by scores of 27—14 and 29—16. King will play left forward, Van Koten has been changed from center to right forward, and Everett will play center. Monohan and Captain Barnes will play the guard positions.

The Billikens are all in good shape for the trip. Kennedy, reserve forward, who was slightly injured in the Arkansas game, reported in good condition following the Bills' workout yesterday morning at the St. Louis U. Gym. Coach Mike Nyikos will leave Joe Linzenich in charge of the freshman cage squad during his absence.

The resumption of classes on Monday at school will also mean the beginning of basketball work for the first year men. The Billiken coach wants to have his freshmen in good shape so that they will be able to give the varsity plenty of competition in preparation for the game with South Dakota University on Saturday night, and the first game with Washington University on Tuesday, Jan. 14.

Packs to Feature Lighter Mat Men

The first of a series of wrestling shows featuring matmen of lighter divisions will be held at the New Coliseum next Friday night, with Hugh Nichols of Cedar Rapids, Ia., recognized as light-heavyweight champion of the world, engaging Johnny Kilonis of Chicago, in the main event, a one fall bout to be contested to a finish.

Tom Packs, who has promoted heavyweight wrestling shows in St. Louis during the past eight years, is sponsoring the lighter events. Packs plans to hold the tourneys every two weeks and to have them alternate with the heavyweight shows which he has been conducting at fortnightly intervals.

Karl Wildermuth Equals 60-Meter Indoor Record

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Karl Wildermuth of Georgetown, intercollegiate 100 yards champion, won the 60-meter dash, first of the sprint series at the Columbus Council, K. of C. games, in the Twenty-third Regiment Armory, Brooklyn, tonight. Wildermuth flashed down the course in 7 1-5 seconds, equaling the indoor record, to beat out Jimmy Daley of Holy Cross, and George Morin, also of Holy Cross.

The 80-meter sprint also went to Wildermuth in 9 seconds flat.

Wildermuth scored a clean sweep in the Olympic sprint series when he also won at 100 meters. He also equalled the indoor record for the 100 meter distance, finishing in 10 4-5 seconds. James Daley of Holy Cross was second in the series and Robert Talbot of the Newark A. C. third. Talbot took second in the 100 meter dash with Daley third.

The victory gave Wildermuth permanent possession of the James J. Walker trophy. It was the third time he had won the series in as many years.

Bernie McCafferty, Holy Cross star, won his second leg on the Alfred E. Smith trophy when he captured the Columbus 500 yards invitation run in 1 minute 3 seconds.

Ray Conger, crack middle distance runner of the Illinois A. C., was beaten in the Mayor Walker half mile, by Fred Veit, burly star from New York University.

Conger, who has beaten many of the world's leading middle distance aces such as Paavo Nurmi, Lloyd Hahn, Edvin Wide and Dr. Otto Peltzer, finished third, behind Veit, the winner, and Charles Thompson, of the New York Central A. A. The time of 2 minutes, 3-5 seconds, was slow.

Conger, who entered the meet at the last minute, apparently was far short of his best form. The great stretch drive with which he has chalked up his most sensational victories was missing and Veit won without being particularly extended.

Gus Moore, of the University of Pittsburg, national cross country champion, won the two mile invitation race, lapping half the field. Joseph McCluskey of Fordham, freshman inter-collegiate cross country champion, was second and Gene Vincke of the Swedish-American A. C. New York, third. Moore's time was nine minutes, 26 4-5 seconds.

THREE BASKETBALL GAMES FEATURE C. B. C. "ATHLETIC NIGHT"

The Christian Brothers College basketball team featured the fourth annual athletic night of the institution by nosing out the Alumni, 22 to 15, last night. The Christian Brothers municipal league team won from the Bob Whites, an independent five, 15 to 11, while the St. Marks Girls defeated the St. Alphonsus Girls, 10 to 8.

The Alumni kept pace with the scholastic five, tying the score, 6 to 6, at the end of the first quarter, and 12 to 12, at the end of the half. The Brothers went into a 15 to 14 lead at the end of the third period and held the Alumni to one point while they scored seven in the final session.

McCoole and Ruane, who scored all six of the graduates' points in the opening quarter, starred for the Alumni. Paul Brauderick and Gould showed up best for the undergraduates.

As part of the program, Pewee Terry was paired against Vic Costello and Bill Herbst met Ed Terry in two three-round boxing exhibitions. Roughhouse Nelson and George Tragos met in a wrestling match for the benefit of the spectators.

FOUR CHAMPIONS CERTAIN TO BE CROWNED; GREAT INTEREST IN HEAVYWEIGHT DIVISION

Heavyweight — Max Schmeling, Jack Sharkey, and perhaps Tuffy Griffiths.

Light heavyweight — Maxie, Rosenbloom, Leo Lomski, Jimmy Slattery.

Middleweight—Ace Hudkins, Rene Devos, Harry Ebbets.

Welterweight—Jimmy McLarnin, Jackie Fields, Young Corbett.

Junior welter—Jimmy McLarnin or Mushy Callahan, Ruby Goldstein, Fred Fitzgerald.

Lightweight—Sammy Mandell, King Tut, Tony Canzoneri.

Junior lightweight — Benny Bass or Al Singer, Kid Chocolate.

Featherweight—Kid Chocolate (if he can do weight), Earl Mastro, Buddy Taylor, Bat Battalino.

Flyweight—Black Bill, Midget Wolgast, Frankie Genaro.

Among the interesting possibilities of the campaign is that FIVE Negro fighters may win titles in as many different divisions, provided promoters give them the opportunity.

Negroes May Win Five Titles.

In the heavyweight division if George Godfrey were admitted to candidacy there is little doubt that he would be an even money chance to beat any white fighter that could be named. This writer does not believe Godfrey is that good; but there is a strong following, especially in Philadelphia, that would support the burly black man.

Jack Thompson in the welter division is conceded to be an extremely dangerous Negro foe for Jackie Fields or for any of the other aspirants to honors in this division.

In the junior lightweight class we find the dusky Cuban, Eligio Sardinias, known as "Keed" Chocolate. The boy is dangerous in two classes, feather as well as the junior lightweight, and if the commission would let him, he might capture both titles, unless he has been greatly overrated in fight accounts. Chocolate seems to be the class of the featherweight division, but he would have tougher going in the junior lightweight outfit with Benny Bass and Al Singer to dispose of.

In the bantamweight division there is Panama Al Brown, a frail-looking Negro who can step with the best. At one time he was named champion by the commission, but was dethroned for failure to keep a date. Finally there is the flyweight division in which Black Bill has been making about the best showing as between Midget Wolgast, Huat, Genaro and the other rather indifferent fighters in this class.

Showings of Schmeling and Griffiths Add Color to Race for Tunney's Crown

Five Negro champions would certainly shock the world. Their advent to title honors as a group is highly improbable, but it seems certain that one or more of them will reach the championship peak.

Gene Tunney's retirement threw the heavyweight class into a tangle from which it has not yet emerged. But next summer a champion will e named—if not sooner. The race as become more interesting because of recent developments as follows:

The great showing of Max Schmeling.

The rise of Tuffy Griffiths.

The good showing of the Argentine giant, Campolo.

The coming of the biggest fighter to break into the cauliflower profession in many years—Primo Carnero, height 6 feet 8½ inches, weight 287 pounds.

The improvement of Otto von Porat and Phil Scott.

The apparent comeback of Paulino.

Naming a winner from among this bunch of unknown quantities is shooting in the dark. Max Schmeling has really accomplished more than the others by completely subduing Paulino and stopping Risko. He has shown more than Sharkey and the newcomer Griffiths in punching power and that is what will win in the long run, for a clever boxer like Schmeling. The Meat Trust fighters will have to be eliminated until they have shown more.

As to Lomski.

Leo Lomski's defeat last week by the slapstick artist, Maxie Rosenbloom, his second setback at the hands of this clown, was unfortunate, as it seems to place a real fighter in second place behind a man of doubtful fighting qualities. Rosenbloom is a boxer of the Willie Meehan type—hard to beat, yet unable to do any damage. His success at his style must be recognized, however, and at this time he appears to be rather certain of finishing the year as light heavyweight champion.

Nobody knows the truth about Mickey Walker. We do know that he is getting old in the ring and about due for his second slip. However, there are no Ketchels among the upcoming middleweights while Rene Devos, Anthony Drexel Biddle's $100,000 wonder, has not come through as well as was expected.

The rejuvenated and powerful Jimmy McLarnin is one of the most interesting fight figures before the public. If he continues his march upward, he is certain to reign either as junior welter or welterweight titleholder, or perhaps both. Fields has not proved to be a wonder in defending his title and may fall.

Unless Mandell has slipped badly, he will retain his crown; out Benny Bass, if the commission O K's his victory over Morgan, will have plenty trouble with his rivals for the junior title—Singer and Chocolate. Bass can hit like a trip hammer, which ought to give him the edge.

Bat Battalino slipped one over when he gained his crown. He defeated Andre Rotuis, a mere accident among the world's titleholders. He is shifty, but he will have to be more than that with Kid Chocolate, Earl Mastro, Buddy Taylor and Eddie Shea chasing him.

The bantam and featherweight divisions are still just guesses; but as stated, the two Negro fighters named have as good a chance to fill the title vacancies as any others.

The first real big development of the year will take place at the new arena at Miami, Fla., when Jack Sharkey meets someone, not yet revealed by Madison Square Garden. It will be either Tuffy Griffiths, or Campolo, or Phil Scott, in all probability, and the result will put the winner in line for a title final. Jack Sharkey is hooked up for three fights with the Madison Square Garden Corporation. That means they expect Jack to win right down the line and then face, in all probability, the German Jack Dempsey, now under suspension, for the title next summer.

School Hockey League Starts Season Tomorrow

The "Prep" Hockey League, which will open its present season tomorrow night at the Winter Garden with two games, has 12 matches on its schedule, the last games being played on March 24. Tomorrow night University City meets Normandy at 5:15, and McBride takes the ice against Clayton an hour later.

Both University City and McBride had teams in the league last year, but Normandy and Clayton are new. University City has Barnes, who is one of the best forwards of the league and also Dubinsky, who played center last year, and should prove a great factor in the flag race. The new Normandy team is built around the star goalie, Schroeder, who last year starred for McBride.

Clayton, the other new team, has a small team and likely will find it hard to cope with the veterans of the other school. McBride, who won the cup last year, has lost most of its stars, and Coach Brands will have to depend upon a number of green players to defend the championship.

Following is a schedule of the complete year:

Jan. 14, McBride vs. University; Normandy vs. Clayton.

Jan. 21, University City vs. Clayton; Normandy vs. McBride.

Jan. 27, Normandy vs. University City; Clayton vs. McBride.

Feb. 3, McBride vs. University City; Clayton vs. Normandy.

Feb. 11, University City vs. Clayton; McBride vs. Normandy.

Feb. 17, University City vs. Normandy; McBride vs. Clayton.

Feb. 24, McBride vs. University City; Normandy vs. Clayton.

March 24, University City vs. Clayton; McBride vs. Normandy.

chance at a real big "million dollar gate" with Max Schmeling next summer.

The heavyweight world has certainly reached a fine "low," when one second-rater, trying to get into the title class, refuses to fight another second-rater for a $100,000 guarantee, win, lose or draw.

Old Man Retribution may overtake Sharkey just for that.

Seceding From the A. A. U.

THE South Broadway and perhaps other clubs, are breaking away from the Western District A. A. U. because of the levy of 5 per cent tax on receipts, to aid in the A. A. U. maintenance. The A. A. U. found its revenue was insufficient for promoting sport activities, and obtained the national A. A. U's sanction to tax gate receipts 5 per cent.

The Post-Dispatch wired the national secretary on the subject and received the following reply:

"Western Association was authorized to levy 5 per cent tax by the national body in 1928. Therefore, it is within its rights in levying this tax. We all feel that profits on amateur sports should go back into the promotion of amateur sports.

DANIEL J. FERRIS,
Secretary, A. A. U.

The district officials were within their rights, but they will have difficulty making the tax stick. Unless our information is at fault no other district in the A. A. U. circuit charges a per cent of the receipts.

Athletic clubs, as well as the A. A. U., feel that THEY are entitled to the fruits of their own promotions, and if any money is to be put back into the sport, they want to do it themselves.

Another Elimination.

ANOTHER fight in the nature of an elimination will take place next Friday at New York. The "iron man," Paulino, will take on the Norse giant, Von Porat. There should be plenty of haymakers and "claret."

Paulino appeared strong against the lighter and younger Griffiths recently, and seemed to have suffered no ill effects from his bout with Schmeling.

As Paulino already has beaten Von Porat, there is not much reason to believe he cannot repeat.

Von Porat is said to be improved and to be able to beat Paulino now. When the writer saw him fight last summer he was slower than a push-cart and about as dangerous. Kayo Christner hit him then with everything but the gong for several rounds. If he is as easy for Paulino, there will be a big drop in Norse stocks.

Von Porat has fattened up a record, but it doesn't amount to much. He fought 10 times the last year and knocked out poor old Bat Levinsky (it took him five rounds), Tom Sayers, Jack Gagnon, Jack de Mave, Emmet Rocco, Kayo Christner and Charles Smith. He lost on a foul to Phil Scott and won from Tom Heeney, or what was left of Tom after Tunney finished him.

That cleans up some of the third-raters, but leaves the status of Von Porat still in doubt. Perhaps the Paulino fight will clean up that.

SHARKEY DEPARTS FOR MIAMI, BUT NOT TO BOX TUFFY GRIFFITHS

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 4.—Jack Sharkey, heavyweight boxer, left for Florida with his family last night after severing all relations with the Madison Square Garden Corporation following his refusal to agree to a bout with "Tuffy" Griffiths at Miami, Fla., next month. The action followed two long conferences with William F. Carey, Madison Square Garden head.

Sharkey, according to Johnny Buckley, his manager, has maintained Griffiths was not a suitable opponent.

Buckley said that Sharkey agreed to fight either Phil Scott or Vittorio Campolo at Miami, and with these refused him he declined to fight again until next June, when he expects Max Schmeling for an opponent in a milk fund bout in New York or Chicago.

Sharkey's contract with the Garden will expire on March 15.

MANAGERS SHOW CARNERA'S ITALIAN CITIZENSHIP PAPERS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—With gestures and official-looking papers, the "Board of Managers" of Primo Carnera, newest heavyweight novelty, made it clear today that the giant Italian is a full-fledged citizen of his native land, in good standing and without complications because of a residence of several years in France. The New York Daily News in a copyrighted story had said Carnera's status was under investigation by consular authorities on the ground that he forswore Italian citizenship for French.

Carnera and his managers exhibited documentary evidence to show that, while the boxer actually had applied at one time for French citizenship papers, these were renounced last Dec. 16. Two days later, the documents showed, he regained good standing as an Italian citizen and sailed for the United States Dec. 23 with an Italian passport visa.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 4.—Minneapolis and St. Louis played an over-time scoreless tie here tonight. Despite the lack of scoring the game was a thriller. Both clubs adhered to their usual tactics of open hockey and there were numerous instances when scores seemed imminent, but while the boys came close on several occasions, the alert goalies on each team saved their nets on every occasion. The game was fast but not overly rough.

Big Moose Jamieson suffered a gash on the head but he reappeared on the ice and finished the contest.

Minneapolis had an advantage in territorial plays. Kearney was called upon to make many more stops than Timmins. Both plugs worked hard and the task scoring was not due to defensive measures, it was simply a case of an excellent defense meeting a strenuous offense.

Jamieson Penalized.

Minneapolis had an advantage in territorial play from the start and on several occasions carried the rubber close in on goalie Kearney but in every instance the easy working Missouri minder was able to clear. The first break for the Millers came five minutes after the face-off when Big Moose Jamieson was ruled off the ice for tripping Dennenay. This looked like an opportunity and the Millers speeded up to cash in on it.

However, Redding violated the code in the same manner as Jamieson and as a result both teams worked short handed with neither enjoying an edge.

The second period was similar to the first in the type of hockey played and the strategy of teams.

Early in the middle period, Jamieson was ruled off for cross checking, and Billy Hill, Flyer wing, followed a few moments later. This double penalty gave the Millers another opportunity but they became too anxious to score.

The last minute of play in this period was marred by an unfortunate incident. Red Stuart and Boileau crashed into the boards together. The stick of one of the men struck one of the spectators in the head but did not serious damage.

Jamieson's Head Cut.

The third period was the most exciting of the game. Several times it appeared as though the scoreless contest would be settled but on every occasion the defense was equal to the task. Stuart and Dennenay replaced Gordon and Redding and the liveliest scrimmage of the evening started.

The Millers worked hard, carried the puck in on the St. Louis net, but the Flyers played brilliantly and succeeded in holding off the ambitious Millers. The going got so hot that Jamieson went on the ice to relieve Breen. Shortly afterwards, Bostrom bumped Big Jamieson so hard that the big St. Louis coach had trouble getting up and left the ice immediately.

Jamieson, who worked like a beaver and who turned in a fine game, had a bad night of it. A few minutes before the close of the third period he and Bostrom collided again. This time Jamieson's head was cut and he was taken to the dressing room.

In the second overtime period, Jamieson reappeared heavily bandaged and took his station on the defense line.

Crystal City and the Bachelor clubs were victorious in last night's games in the Greater St. Louis Girls' Basketball Association at the Armory, Crystal City downing the Headlight A. C., 27-9, and the Bachelors trimming the Schenbergs, 15-10. The two winners are scheduled to meet in a game that may decide the first half championship at the Armory Wednesday night.

The Bachelors always held the upper hand in their skirmish with the Schenbergs, although the latter club, as usual, was off form on its setup shots under the basket and missed at least a dozen perfect opportunities to score. At the half, the winners led, 8-3.

During the final half, both teams played hard, rough basketball and the big crowd cheered continually as several beautiful shots were caged. The Schenbergs drew a big hand as they took advantage of the Bachelors' fouling and dropped in six free throws, although they were held scoreless from the field.

Margaret Glaser was in the limelight for the winners, making several brilliant shots from far out on the floor. For the losers, Nell Curran and Winifred Kendrick starred.

The opening contest resulted in a runaway for Crystal City even though the "Red Devils" employed their entire roster at various stages of the game. Fern Politte, who until last night gave her team the league's individual scoring honor, made two sensational shots that brought resounding applause from the crowd. Miss Madison led in scoring, however, with six points.

Catherine Maguire, former Headlight guard and a representative of St. Louis in the Olympic games at Amsterdam, made her first appearance of the season at guard for the losers.

ROPER TO QUIT; WITTMER TO GET TIGER COACHING BERTH IN 1931

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 4.—Concluding 14 years of service as head coach of Princeton football, William W. Roper will retire after the 1930 season and will be succeeded by Albert H. Wittmer Jr., present line coach, who will enter upon a four-year contract, it was announced today.

Pressure of his business and political duties in Philadelphia where he is a member of the City Council in addition to dealing in insurance, was given by Roper as the principal reason for his decision.

Teaching sound football and emphasizing the psychological element, Roper has been turning out formidable football teams at Princeton since 1919 and also served successfully as head Coach in 1910 and 1911.

A capable end in the days of "Big Bill" Edwards and Arthur Poe, he was graduated at Princeton in 1902. He is 47 years old.

Princeton Six, Harvard One.

Against Yale and Harvard Roper's Tiger elevens have met with enviable success, winning six games and losing one against Harvard, and taking seven out of 13 from Yale. The 1929 Princeton team, however, was considerably below par, failing to win a major game, and Roper in mid-season frankly declared himself dissatisfied with its fighting qualities.

Al Wittmer, the young lawyer who has been selected to succeed him, is an elder brother of Eddie Wittmer, now a senior at Princeton, who was the backfield star of the team for the last three seasons and is captain of the basketball five.

In addition to his football duties, Al holds the position of head coach of basketball and it is expected he will continue in that capacity.

Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, Chairman of the Board of Athletic Control, said Wittmer's selection was for the football seasons of 1931, 1932, 1933 and 1934.

Prior to his graduation in 1922, Wittmer starred in football as fullback and center and also played basketball.

ST. JIM SETS THE PACE AND WINS MIRAMAR PURSE AT HAVAN

ROYAL SABLE SECOND IN FIELD OF SIX; CHARBUEL PAYS TEN TO ONE

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Jan. 4.—St. Jim, son of Jim Gaffney and St. Theresa, which races for Mrs. John Zoeller, proved an easy winner of the Miramar Yacht Club Purse, which was the outstanding racing attraction at Oriental Park this afternoon.

Ridden by G. Seabo, St. Jim dominated the running throughout and had no trouble showing the way to H. C. Hatch's Royal Sable, while Perfect Alibi, from the Carran Brothers' stable, was third.

A field of six started. St. Jim was backed into favoritism over the others. The start found the field in good alignment. St. Jim, after being outrun for a few strides, found clear passage along the inner rail and opened a safe lead, which he maintained throughout.

Royal Sable, which raced in second place for the biggest part of the journey, was put under pressure turning for home and, although he responded, could not catch the winner. Perfect Alibi swerved slightly toward the inside turning for home and was an easy but distant third.

The longest price of the day was recorded when Charbuel took the opening event and paid 10 to 1.

Webster Defeats Roosevelt, 19-16

Webster High School defeated Roosevelt, 19 to 16, in a nonleague basketball game on the Webster court, last night. Webster, which led all the way, was in danger only once after the opening play.

The winners started the scoring in the first quarter, when Capt. Gustafson was fouled by Alvis and sank the subsequent free throw. The county team counted seven points in this period and held the Rough Riders to two points, on Shirley Griffin's goal from scrimmage.

Webster led at the half, 13 to 4, the only score for the city five being made on Griffin's second field goal. The Rough Riders rallied in the third quarter and sank six foul goals, which brought the score up to 15 to 11 at the end of the period. In the final quarter Roosevelt was on the short end of a 15-to-14 count, but Webster counted four points and drew out of danger.

18-Year-Old Jockey Is America's Leading Rider

MELVIN KNIGHT.

Melvin Knight, Born in Idaho, Had Mount on 149 Winners in Past Year.

Melvin Knight, 18-year-old jockey, has been crowned riding king of America. He has ridden 149 winners, 132 seconds and 132 thirds. He had 872 mounts. His nearest rival is Lightning Jones, New Orleans boy.

Knight has ridden about 250 winners since he started riding three years ago. He says that he went on the turf for adventure. He started with Ed McCuan with whom he is still under contract. He believes the best race he ever rode was the Miami Jockey Club Handicap last year, which he won on Boris, and that the best thoroughbred he ever rode was Flag Bearer.

Knight is the champion jockey of America and has a fat bank roll, but every morning from 6 to 9 o'clock he exercises horses—and likes it. He was born in Idaho.

DAYTONA BEACH WILL HOLD SPEED TRIALS FROM MARCH 15 TO 30

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Jan. 4.—A decision to set the annual automobile speed trials here for March 15 to 30 instead of March 1 to 15 as originally planned has been reached by Val Haresnape, director. He said he had asked the contest board of the American Automobile Association to sanction the change.

TUTTI FRUTTI IS NAMED TO RUN IN $140,000 STAKE

AGUA CALIENTE, Jan. 4.—Tutti Frutti, winner of many outstanding races on the continent of the Southern Cross, has been named by Senior Enrique Gutierrez as South America's most noted entry in the $140,000 Agua Caliente Handicap to be decided here March 23. The race will be the high light of the 81 days' meeting that opened Dec. 28.

Entry of Tutti Frutti gives the race an international flavor. With one English horse almost certain to be pointed for the race, a Frenchman, and a Canadian or so, the Agua Caliente Handicap may become a gruelling sporting duel among equine representatives of those nations.

Tutti Frutti now is in Florida. Max Silvers, handling the horse in North America, says the horse, a son of the famous Salpicon and Damasca, would rank as a contender of the first water in the handicap, a mile and a quarter dash. Tutti Frutti raced at Havana last winter.

Carrying 128 pounds, Tutti Frutti in his first start as a 3-year-old won a 100,000 peso race over a mile and a quarter course. Then Senor Gutierrez bought him for 130,000 pesos, and the horse responded by winning 65,000 pesos in the Valparaiso Derby. After conquering Chile, Tutti Frutti at Bogota, Colombia whizzed the champion Colombian sprinter, Argelin.

Word received here is that the entire of South America turfdom is rooting for the South American champion to come home "on the bit."

POMPANO OPENS; "STOCKHOLDER" BET SYSTEM USED

By the Associated Press.

POMPANO, Fla., Jan. 4.—Sponsored by a group of residents, a 10-day horse racing meet was opened at the Pompano track today. Under a fourth reorganization of the plant, the corporation system of wagering was used by a fair-sized crowd.

The shortest price paid by any winner in the six races was $7 for a $2 stock ticket and the odds ranged up to $31.80 on a similar certificate.

Under the corporation system of stock certificates, used at the track today, the purchaser of a grand stand ticket is entitled to a certain amount of stock in the grand stand. If the holder of the grand stand certificate wishes to purchase stock in any particular horse running a race, the price of the stock wanted is listed on the blank form and after the race the proceeds from the stock are divided proportionately.

In the feature event of the card, Rio Confidence, from the J. J. Corcoran stable, was given a hard ride to win, and paid his backers or stockholders $19.20 to win.

The second day of the meeting is scheduled for Monday. The track has been reorganized under the auspices of the East Coast Jockey Club.

Today's running was the first horse racing at the track since the plant was closed in 1926 under threat of martial law to stop gambling.

Residents and business men of Pompano took over the meeting after the disappearance of John Bockley, head of the third promotional group to abandon its plans.

Tallahassee Publisher Asks Sheriff About Gambling.

By the Associated Press.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 4.—Fred O. Eberhardt, Tallahassee publisher, tonight sent the following night letter to Sheriff A. W. Turner of Broward County, at Fort Lauderdale, from here:

"Am advised by persons present that open gambling is being permitted by operators of the racetrack at Pompano. Do you intend to take any action to stop violations of the law relating to betting and gambling there? Please wire answer."

Threats of court action by Eberhardt recently caused cancellation of a meet at Keeney Park, near here.

He told the Associated Press tonight he planned to start injunction proceedings against operation of the Pompano racetrack early next week, unless Sheriff Turner sent him a reply that "gambling will be stopped at the track."

GLEN WILD, RACE HORSE, DIES OF PARALYSIS

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 4.—Glen Wild, Dr. C. Fred Adams' Maryland bred son of Meridian-Lazuli, considered one of the best 3-year-olds of last season's racing campaign, died today at Dr. Adams' farm at Catonsville. Paralysis after several days' illness caused the racer's death.

Glen Wild made his debut last season in the winning column by taking the North Shore Handicap at Arlington and came on to win the $25,000 Riggs Memorial Purse at Pimlico, his most important winning. Dr. Adams had been training the horse for the $140,000 Agua Caliente Handicap to be run in March.

SIX NATIONAL LEAGUE CLUBS SEEM CONTENDERS FOR 1930 FLAG RACE

ARDS, CUBS, BUCS, GIANTS, PHILLIES AND REDS FIGURE; A'S STAND OUT IN AMERICAN

By J. Roy Stockton

Unless railroad wrecks, cyclones or epidemics interfere, the 1930 nnant struggle in the National League is likely to be one of the st interesting and therefore most profitable in the history of the jor baseball organization. There have been some red hot camigns of rcent years, but baseball men generally agree that as they n the 1930 baseball horizon they see the turnstiles clicking as they ver clicked before.

Usually, even with midwinter op- ism as a tonic, not more than ree or four clubs enter into ad- nce calculations on a flag race. t when the base hits begin to sh against the fences in April re will be six powerful clubs in n Heydler's circuit, all of them e to have important things to y about where the championship nnant is going to wave.

Yes, it has been a long time since y league has opened a campaign th six clubs as evenly matched the Cubs, Pirates, Giants, Car- nals, Phillies and Reds of next ason promise to be.

MACK.

In the American League the ub owners have not so much rea- n to expect a cord-breaking ason. The Yan- es are badly in ed of replace- ents and will ke the field th a new man- er. The Cleve- nd Indians fin- hed a bad third st year and ere is no par- lar reason to pect them to do uch better in 30. Bill Kille- r needs much lp and a flock luck to hoist the Browns fourth- acer in 1929, into a contending sition in 1930.

Unless all signs are haywire the merican League is likely to see other runaway race, with the letics heading the procession a discouraging margin just as ey did last campaign and just as e powerful Yankees did in the ree previous races.

Cubs to Have Competition.

The National League race, how- er, appears to be made to order the box office money changers d unless accidents intervene, the ar is likely to see a new at- ndance record set for the circuit. st season was the second best in e league's history, despite the ct that the Cubs had the pennant wed up long before the end of e campaign.

Joe McCarthy's Cubs, with ornsby and his other sluggers, obably will be the popular choice hen the teams start in April, but veral clubs will have excellent ances to prevent the Cubs from peating.

f Gabby Street is right about l Hallahan, and the Cardinal terans, Haines and Sherdel, come ck to their best form, the Red rds are likely to be in the race l the way. They were heading e procession last year when the tching staff went to the demni- on bow wows and the boys' con- dence will not be impaired by e fact that the team finished urth. Sparky Adams will bol- the infield, even if he doesn't d a regular job, and Charley elbert, who played his first big ague ball in 1929, is sure to be much improved shortstop.

Giants Lack Second-Sacker.

The Pirates are sure to be con- enders again and if Jewell Ens, he new manager of the Bucs, can nd a satisfactory infield arrange- ent and if his pitching is good, arney Dreyfus may have to be ost at another world series at orbes Field.

John McGraw hasn't obtained a econd baseman yet and until he oes the Giants can't be considered ore than a first division probabil- y. You can't win pennants with- t a good second baseman, but e Giants have everything else d John J. may bob up with an fielder before the race starts.

Burt Shotton's Phillies and the eds of Daniel Philip Howley will the dark horses of the National ague race. The Phillies were e most improved team in either ague last year, and if Burt can d three or four pitchers of erit, the Phils can travel far and use much grief. Even if Shotton doesn't obtain additional pitching strength his slugging and his infield are sure to make the team a contender for a place in the first division.

Howley's Pitching O K.

Dan Howley has a big job on his hands at Cincinnati, but then the shoemaker from East Weymouth is accustomed to tough jobs after managing the Browns for three years. He already has added punch to the Reds by the claiming of Bob Meusel and Harry Heilmann. Then Howley may come up with a pretty fair pitching staff. If Pete Donohue can come back, it will mean much to Howley. Pete was a great pitcher in 1926, but he lost his confidence. He is still young, as pitchers' ages are reckoned, and the Cincinnati writers say his troubles are entirely mental and that if he gets over his inferiority complex, he will be a winner again.

If Donohue should come back, Howley would have a good staff, including Luque, May, Rixey and Red Lucas. In fact, if Howley had everything else he needed, the pitching department could hold up its head in any company.

Brooklyn and Boston will be the weak sisters of the National League. The Dodgers don't even know who is going to manage them and a club beset by so much internal strife if not likely to go anywhere. Bill McKechnie, who passed up a one-year contract with the Cards for a four-year chance to rebuild the Braves, undoubtedly will cut out all the dead wood and try to develop a team of youngsters. That means the Braves will be in the league, but that's about all, for this year. After a season or two, Bill, a great man with pitchers and young players, may come up with a stronger combination.

Mack "Sitting Pretty."

As previously stated, the Athletics of Connie Mack apparently have no cause for worry over the coming season. The Mackmen have pitching and batting power and their defense was good enough to make a runaway race of it last season. Connie knows he could improve on his infield, but he won't do any rash experimenting. He's sure to hold on to what he has until he finds something better and tests it thoroughly.

The Browns haven't any additional strength that would make the fans get out the drums and put on a parade. Pitcher Holshouser from Baltimore and Sammy Hale from Philadelphia may help, but they won't change a fourth-place team into a pennant winner.

The team again will be under a capable manager, but Bill Killefer will have to be a miracle man to put the St. Louis American League club in the 1930 world series.

GRANITE CITY FIVE TO PLAY BELLEVILLE TEAM

Three games, one feature, and the others interesting enough to warrant more than passing notice, will signal the Southwestern Illinois Basketball Conference's return to play Tuesday night.

Edwardsville will travel to Collinsville for one game, Alton to East St. Louis for another, and the big game of the program will be run off on Granite City's floor when that team and Belleville clash in the most important argument this season probably will offer.

East St. Louis, Edwardsville and Belleville all shot out in front with first-game victories, Dec. 20, while Granite City was idle. Tuesday, though, somebody is expected to descend from the leaders' pedestal. Granite City is rated the favorite over Belleville, although both squads are overloaded with veteran material.

American League "10-Year Men" Could Combine Into Great Team

OLD in service, perhaps, but still able to show many of the youngsters how major league baseball should be played. Yes, the American League Veterans' Association can be proud of its record during the campaign of 1929. The veteran pitchers, especially, can boast of their labors.

Here is a team of American Leaguers who have played 10 years or more in the big show with their years of service given:

Catchers—Schang, 17; Perkins, 12; Ruel, 11.
Pitchers—Faber, 16; Pennock, 16; Jones, 15; Quinn, 14; Ehmke, 12; Uhle, 11; Zachary, 11; Rommel, 10.
First base—Judge, 14.
Second base—E. Collins, 24.
Third base—Dykes, 11.
Shortstop—Gerber, 13.
Outfield—E. Rice, 13.
Outfield—Ruth, 15.
Outfield—Jamieson, 14.
Outfield—K. Williams, 11.

Zachary won 12 and lost none, Rommell 12 and two, Ehmke seven and two, Uhle 15 and 11, Quinn 11 and nine, Hoyt, 10 and nine, Faber 13 and 13. Jones nine and nine, being out much of the year because of an injury. Pennock nine and 10, the veteran southpaw being only hurling vet who did not break even, at least.

Judge batted .315; Dykes .325; Rice .323; Ruth .345; Williams .343 and Jamieson .291. The catchers and Gerber were below the .300 mark. For substitute infielders, Lu Blue, .293, Joe Sewell, .314 and McManus, .281, all nine-year vets, could be employed. Then, there's Bob Falk, a nine-year man with an average of .318 for the outfield.

BASKETS and BANKBOARDS

by FORREST C. "PHOG" ALLEN

A LOT of ginger has been injected into this great game of basketball by the Joint Rules Committee.

This significant work was effected by changes in this year's playing code which is bound to produce unprecedented speed and action.

Outstanding among the changes were minimizing the advantage of the tall center at tip-off, and elsewhere; the ruling against the front pivot, hip-crash block when the dribbler is in motion; the approval of the double referee system of officiating and the elimination of the possible five points after a foul when a field goal has been scored.

New Rule.

JUMPERS at center or elsewhere will be forbidden to touch the ball after it has been tapped one or more times, until it has touched the floor or one of the other eight players.

It was agreed that the spirit of the rule included the basket and bankboard as well as the floor and other eight players.

Heretofore, a tall center could tip the ball behind him and catch it, thus giving his opponents a lesser advantage in playing the ball than they now have.

ACCORDING to a general agreement the Rules Committee has put its approval upon the following pivot or running with the ball rule:

A player who is in motion when he receives the ball may not make a pivot on the front foot. He may take one step but must pivot on the rear foot only. This nullifies the so-called pivot and block play that has caused so much discussion. The pivoter, by blocking the guard out with his hips and shoulders and then passing the ball to a trailing teammate, contributes to a definite contact foul.

The chief argument against this play is that it is primarily designed as a "contact blocker." However, it is possible to make a front pivot and no foul. But the pivoter must use the same caution as does a dribbler. He must go clearly around this opponent without contact.

Double Referee System.

IN the double referee system of officiating, the umpire, whose duties heretofore were somewhat limited, is now given authority practically identical to that of the referee.

WHEN a player has been fouled in the act of shooting, the ball must go to center after the second free throw, if the field goal is made. If the field goal is missed, the old rule holds, viz., the ball is in play if the last free throw is missed.

Columbus Wins First Contest of Playground Series

The Columbus Playground soccer team defeated the Blow team, 1 to 0, in a well played game which marked the opening of the three-game championship series for the playground soccer title at Murphy Playground yesterday afternoon before a crowd of several hundred soccer enthusiasts.

At the opening the Columbus team, kicking against the wind, immediately began rushing the ball into Blow territory and at the five-minute mark the Columbus eleven put the only goal of the game into the Blow cage after a short scrimmage in front of the uprights.

It was Ueinski who shot the leather past N. Valdez as the Blow goalie left his post under the crossbar to clear a shot by Saputo which had caromed off the left foot of Fullback Hass and was destined for the far corner of the Blow goal. Just as Valdez reached for the sphere Ueinski tapped the ball over the lien to give his team victory in the opening game.

Outstanding i nthe play of the Blow eleven was the heroic work of Goalie Valdez, who but for his lone break which allowed the Columbus team to score, played a great game between the uprights and stopped every subsequent scoring attempt by warding off shots that required rare judgment and speedy footwork along the line between the uprights.

The second game of the three-game series will be played next Saturday afternoon at Murphy and is scheduled to start at 2 o'clock.

The lineups:

COLUMBUS (1).		BLOW (0).
H. Dreyus	Goal	N. Valdez
Mantia	R. F. B.	L. Vaquez
Bommarito	L. F. B.	Hass
Nolan	R. H. B.	J. Valdez
Guccione	Center	R. Sanders
Gemke	L. H. B.	C. Cerney
Saputo	O. R. F.	F. Vasquez
Ueinski	I. R. F.	J. Garcia
Fogarty	Center F.	F. Vasquez
Zagari	I. L. F.	O. Fernandez
Hendron	O. L. F.	H. A. Vasquez

Goals scored, Ueinski. Time of halves, 20 minutes. Referees, King and Donovan.

UNIVERSAL FLYERS TO USE PLANE FOR TRIP TO MACOMB FOR GAME

The flying basketball team of the St. Louis-Universal Flying School will fly to MacComb, Ill., Tuesday noon in a trimotored Ford to play the MacComb Teachers. It will be the first out-of-town game on Universal's schedule. The MacComb airport was inspected last week by Directer W. P. McFall and found it favorable for landing the giant plane.

Cochrane's Putout at First Heads McGraw's List of Great World's Series Plays

THIS is the first of a series of 10 articles by John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, in which the dean of National League pilots analyzes the 10 outstanding plays in the 1929 world series. These articles will appear each Sunday in the Post-Dispatch.

IF I WAS called upon to write a slogan as a fundamental guide to the ambitious ballplayer in any defensive position it would be "Follow the ball!" If I had to give an example I would say: "Watch Mickey Cochrane!"

The only possible way of making a great or unexpected play is to be where the ball is. No supporting player ever gained fame or won a ball game by standing still.

Thousands of fans at the recent world series saw Mickey Cochrane definitely establish himself as one of the really great catchers of all time, and it is regrettable that more young players, eager to improve, couldn't have seen and studied his technique. It was also a lesson to many big leaguers present.

Cochrane did many brilliant stunts, but in one outstanding play he clearly demonstrated the instinct or quality that is necessary to a champion—and that is to take initiative away from the opponent. It was in the last game at Philadelphia and the real artistry of the play was probably overlooked or forgotten in the dramatic events of that now famous last inning, when Mule Haas hit the home run and tied the score.

Cuyler Is Caught.

If you will remember, Kiki Cuyler was on first base, with Ehmke pitching, and took an unusually big lead for a steal of second, apparently. Ehmke saw the move and whipped the ball to Foxx, catching Cuyler off the bag. He ran toward second and then back, getting caught in a chase. Foxx ran Cuyler down toward second and then tossed the ball to Bishop.

Seeing what might happen, Cochrane, the catcher, tossed aside his mask, but, still weighted down with all the rest of his paraphernalia—chest protector, shin guards and all—dashed down to first base and ranged himself behind Jimmy Foxx. The crowd had their eyes centered on Cuyler, Bishop and Foxx. You can well imagine the gasp of surprise when Cuyler, suddenly turning, made a dash back to first, only to find Cochrane waiting with the ball. And, don't forget, Cochrane had challenged the fastest baserunner in the National League.

A Perfect Play.

The catcher had made the putout on a run-up play between first and second.

It was a perfect demonstration of what it means to follow the ball. But for that quick thinking and quick acting on the part of Cochrane, Cuyler might have got away. To me it was easily one of the great plays of the series.

It may or may not have affected the result, but right there is the real idea. A smart ballplayer never takes anything for granted. Be where the ball is and there is always a chance for a play. Cochrane does that all the time.

Marre and Miles To Battle Again

Steve Marre, Sherman Park middleweight, and Johnny Miles of the South Broadway A. C., will clash in a return match announced last night by Matchmaker Willie Miller as one of the special attractions on Thursday night's amateur boxing card at the South Broadway arena. Marre will compete unattached, due to the fact that the Sherman Park Community Center has not as yet joined the newly organized Mississippi Valley Amateur Association, under whose sanction and supervision the tourney will be conducted.

In their last encounter, three weeks ago, Marre scored a surprise victory over Miles, checking that fighter's string of seven successive triumphs and avenging a defeat he suffered at the hands of the South Side slugger in a bout last summer at the Missouri-Pacific A. C.

Woodrow Williams of the St. Louis A. C. and Pete Sarokas of the St. Louis Rowing Club, junior Western A. A. U. champion, are candidates for other special engagements on Thursday night's program. Tourney officials expect to pair Williams with Joe Lamay of the Business Men's A. C. for an interclub bantam feature, while either Carl Schaffer of the South Broadway club, or Jack Lybarger of the Missouri-Pacific A. C., will likely be pitted against Sarokas in the featherweight special.

Matchmaker Miller is also seeking a heavyweight opponent for Morris Sill, a new member of the South Broadway fistic team, who is prepping to make his ring debut on Thursday night's program.

The tourney has attracted 12 entries to date for the preliminary events.

SOLDIER FIELDS TO MEET LOU TERRY ON EAST SIDE PROGRAM

Soldier Fields of Indianapolis, claimant of the lightweight championship of Panama, has been signed as the opponent for Lou Terry, St. Louis junior lightweight, for the 10-round decision feature on the Ainad Temple Patrol's professional boxing program to be staged at the Ainad Temple on Thursday night, Jan. 16, in East St. Louis under the supervision of the Illinois State Athletic Commission.

Fields has had a total of 50 fights in four years and is 22 years old, Matchmaker C. F. Nelson has been informed. Fields claims a decisive point victory over Ehrman Clark, also of Indianapolis, who gave Henry Lenard of Chicago a hard fight at the New Coliseum here many months ago. Jimmy Hackley, Johnny O'Keefe, Nick Broglio, Joe Paglina and Jimmy Brown are the other prominent fighters Fields claims to have fought. Fields also says he has never been "kayoed."

Terry is now at the top of his career, having knocked out five, outpointed eight and lost to two in his 15 bouts in 1929. He put Batting Morris, Jimmy Brown, Jack Malone, Jimmy Hackley and Johnny Hopkins to sleep before the scheduled distance; won on points from Eddie Anderson, Harry "Kid" Brown, Jimmy Borde, Nick Broglio, Eddie Goldberg, Johnny Franks, Joe Coffman and Joe Paglina and lost to Eddie "Kid" Wolfe and Fay Kosky.

Ray Alfano, East St. Louis lightweight, has been signed for the other 10-round attraction, but Matchmaker Nelson has yet to sign his opponent. The remainder of the program is to be made up of two six-round prelims and a four-round curtain raiser.

SHIMON BEATS WESTHUS, KEEPS HIS CUE TITLE

Max Shimon of Milwaukee national amateur three-cushion billiard champion successfully defended his title in the challenge match with Bud Westhus of St. Louis, finishing the play at Peterson's last night with 150 points to the challenger's 116.

In the final 50-point block, Shimon made the required total in 50 innings, while Westhus was scoring 37.

Play began with Shimon continuing from an unfinished run of one in the 159th inning and he added one point before missing. Westhus drew applause from the spectators by running five in his opening effort, and added three in the next two innings. But from then on Shimon drew away steadily and Westhus was much out of the picture until his last three innings, when he clicked three, four and five in succession.

Shimon took all three blocks of the match, making his total of 150 in 203 innings. Yesterday afternoon he won by 50 to 36, after taking the opening block Friday night by a 50-43 count.

Score by innings of the final block:

Takes 81 Innings.

The second block was very slow, Shimon requiring 81 innings to compile his 50 points. His average was .600 against .455 for Westhus. Each had a high run of four.

There was a great deal of safety play by both but in the 111th inning after Westhus had made a safety shot, Shimon scored on a hard try.

Maplewood Wins Its Third County League Victory

Maplewood High gained its third league victory last night when it once more ran over the Kirkwood High basketball five on the Maplewood floor, 25-15. Maplewood had downed Kirkwood last week in the Webster tournament.

Coach Wahlbrink's boys started fast and at the end of the first half held a 16—3 lead. Brossard started the scoring by sinking a setup after about two and one-half minutes of play. Parks sank a free shot for Kirkwood to make the score 2—1 in favor of Maplewood. This was the nearest Kirkwood ever got to the Maplewood team. The Blue and White squad opened up the second quarter with long shots. Brossard, Rhyne and Reineke sank long ones for Maplewood, in addition to two setups by Ker and Reineke and a foul shot by Tice. Newcomb sank the only basket for Kirkwood to make the score 16—3, Maplewood.

After the intermission, Kirkwood quickly scored five points but this rally was short lived, as Maplewood retaliated with five points when Brossard tipped in two and sank a free throw. Parks then made good a free throw to make the score 21—10. In the final period, many fouls being called. After Brossard made good another basket, Miler, Ker, Brink, Huckleberry and Parks sank free throws.

Brossard was high scorer with 11 points.

PLAYS STAR BASKETBALL GAME AFTER HEARING OF MOTHER'S DEATH

By the Associated Press.

EVANSTON, Ill., Jan. 4.—Robert Lockhart, whose fine playing was the feature of Northwestern's 23 to 14 victory over Wisconsin tonight in the opening game of the Western Conference season, went through the contest burdened with sorrow over the death of his mother at Martinsville, Ind., today.

Lockhart, a sophomore, was notified of his mother's death this afternoon, but remained to play because his running mate, Bob McCarnes, was ill with influenza. Lockhart left soon after the game for Martinsville.

STATE TENPIN TOURNEY OPENS HERE, FEB. 22

After an interval of 15 years, the Missouri State tenpin tournament is to be revived. This year it will be held at the Wellston Recreation Alleys on Feb. 22. Entries close Feb. 10. Entry blanks and promotional paraphernalia will be issued in a few days by Dennis J. Sweeney, who will have charge of the event.

Nine medals are to be awarded to champions in the singles, doubles, five-man and all events.

The tournament will be bowled under an A. B. C. sanction and Abe Langtry, secretary of the American Bowling Congress, in a letter to Sweeney not only endorsed the tournament but offered some advice as to how it should be held. He called attention to the fact that other state tournaments throughout the country are great successes each year.

Sweeney first broached the subject to the St. Louis Tenpin Association last October and when that organization gave its approval, Sweeney went to Kansas City to test the sentiment there and found that Kansas City bowlers were anxious for such a tournament. Other cities which have expressed interest are Springfield, Joplin, Columbia and St. Joseph. Towns and cities in Illinois will be eligible to compete.

Booster teams, that is, teams which bowl more for the entertainment than with any serious thought of winning, will be given special prizes. The entry fee will be $2 per man for each event with a charge for bowling of $1 each.

The Wellston alleys are to be resurfaced for the occasion and only A. B. C. select pins will be used.

EAST SIDE MUNICIPAL LEAGUE RESUMES TODAY

With three of the nine scheduled games completed, the Edgemont eleven has a game margin over the Spanish-Americans, the latter having won the first-half honors.

ARGUES AGAINST DEMOCRATIC PLEA FOR SPLIT BALLOT

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 4. — The contention of Democratic leaders that the names of candidates for presidential electors should be placed on ballots separate from those bearing the names of candidates for State offices in Missouri, in presidential year elections, which is involved in a test case pending in the Missouri Supreme Court, is opposed in a brief filed today by Attorney-General Stratton Shartel, who intervened in the case.

The test case involves the question of whether section 4750 of the State law, enacted in 1919, which provides a separate ballot for presidential electors, was repealed by the blanket ballot law passed in 1921, which provides that the names of all candidates shall be printed on one ballot. The case will be argued before the Supreme Court on Jan. 30.

Democratic leaders succeeded in getting the question before the Supreme Court through an arrangement by which W. W. Graves Jr., a former Democratic member of the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners, was arrested last October on a technical charge of violating the election law in the furnishing of ballots for the 1928 election. Graves then filed an application in Supreme Court for a writ of habeas corpus to obtain his release from the charges. The application brought before the Court the issue of constitutionality of the sections involved in the dispute.

Move a Surprise.

This was a surprise move. Republican leaders previously had refused to join with the Democratic State committee in a suit to test the law, and it was thought a test case, brought in the usual manner, could not be decided until after the next presidential election.

Attorney-General Shartel, a Republican, requested and received permission from the Supreme Court to intervene, on the ground he had issued opinions determining the form of the printed ballot in the last election.

Democratic leaders desire separation of the presidential electors from candidates for other offices in presidential year elections, believing that this may save some of the Democratic candidates for State offices in the event of repetition of the Republican landslides in Missouri for Republican presidential candidates in recent elections. In these elections the landslides for Republican presidential candidates carried the Republican State tickets to election.

Repealed by Implication.

Shartel contended section 4750 applied only to ballots for women, who, in 1919, obtained the right to vote for presidential and vice presidential electors, on ballots separate from the ballots furnished to men voters, which carried the names of all candidates. Later women were given the full right of suffrage.

The blanket ballot law passed in 1921, repealed by implication the 1919 law, Shartel said, as it provided that the names of all candidates, including presidential electors, should be placed on one ballot. He cited court rulings that enactment of a statute which is inconsistent with a former statute, operates to repeal the former statute in so far as it is inconsisent.

While admitting that habeas corpus was a proper method to test constitutionality of a law, Shartel questioned the good faith of the method by which the Graves case was brought to the Court, charging it was by prearrangement and "connivance."

He contended the Court should not consider the application, but should dismiss it and let the case be tried in the lower courts and then be brought to the Supreme Court on appeal, if desired.

WELFARE CENTERS PLANNED IN OZARKS

St. Louis Women Planning Organization to Give Relief to the Impoverished.

Steps are being taken by a group of St. Louis women to form an organization known as Frontier Nursing in Missouri intended to sponsor the establishment of welfare centers in the Ozark Mountain region of this State to afford relief to impoverished residents. At a meeting Thursday at the home of Mrs. Robert McKittrick Jones, 6 Westmoreland place, it was decided to carry on temporary relief work until the association could be organized.

For the time being, meetings are to be held at 10 a. m. each Thursday at the Jones home. The women will assemble outfits of infants' clothing and other supplies for distribution in the poorer mountain districts.

Conditions, as described in an article in the Post-Dispatch last April, are considered particularly needful of remedy in Washington County and the adjoining sections where the mining of tiff, a stone widely used in the manufacture of several products, provides the residents with a livelihood. Tiff, mined from shallow, unsheltered pits scattered over the hillsides, often nets the miners $3 to $4 a week. Women and children in many cases, assist in the work, frequently suffering ill-health from exposure, lack of proper clothing and undernourishment.

The founding of the welfare centers in these districts, one member explained, follows the line of work of a similar organization, Frontier Nursing of Kentucky. The latter, in existence for the last 10 years, is supported by membership fees and numerous contributions. Clinics and hospitals are parts of some of the Kentucky centers.

"Roads that are frequently impassable to travel except by horseback make even the services of a midwife beyond the reach of many of these families," a member of the organization said. "Usually, a kindly disposed neighbor will officiate, neglecting the vital care urgently needed at such times. Households of numerous children are the general rule in the tiff-country.

"Tracoma, a disease of the eyes, is assuming alarming proportions in the mountains. It is tragic to see the number of men and women who are incapacitated because of this disease. In many localities the children's feet are swathed in rags rather than shoes and the chief diet is cornmeal. There is every reason to believe that these people will respond to the efforts of intelligent directors of social service; women who will teach the essentials in sanitary conditions.

Further particulars about the organization may be obtained from Mrs. James M. Franciscus, 10 Lenox place.

HEBER NATIONS' THIRD TRIAL OPENS TUESDAY

Judge Davis Overrules Motion to Transfer Hearing to Hannibal.

Heber Nations' third trial, on the charge of conspiracy to violate the Volstead act, will begin Tuesday in Federal Judge Davis' court. Judge Davis yesterday denied the motion of Nation's counsel, filed Thursday, for transfer of the case to Hannibal, seat of the northern division of the St. Louis court district. The purpose of the defense was to get a jury with no members from St. Louis and St. Louis County, which the defense lawyers declared to be strongholds of wet sentiment.

Judge Davis said that the 50 affidavits of residents of St. Louis, submitted in support of Nations' motion, did not conclusively show existence of prejudice which would keep him from having a fair trial here. The Government submitted 31 affidavits of persons who said they believed a fair trial was possible. The Court pointed out that jurors are selected from all over the court district, which includes 18 counties outside of St. Louis.

Other grounds for the court's ruling were that the statute which Nations invoked was not intended to help a defendant to choose the place of his trial; and that the time of filing the motion, five days before the date of trial, was too late.

Nations was convicted in his two trials, and was sentenced imprisonment each time, but convictions were reversed by Circuit Court of Appeals beca of errors in the records.

"Drunkenness Is a Disease and I Can Cure It"
—Leslie E. Keeley, M. D., LL. D.

THE EDITOR of a powerful Chicago Newspaper before his death, challenged this statement of Dr. Keeley that "Drunkenness is a disease and I can cure it." He defied Dr. Keeley to cure the men whom he would send to the Institute. The results were so convincing that, through his great newspaper, he was personally responsible for thousands of men and women taking The Keeley Treatment for Liquor.

PROMISES TO EXPEDITE FEDERAL BLDG. WORK

Government Calls Attention to Condemnation Suits in Reply to Suggestion.

Government officials will try to expedite construction of the new Federal building, at Twelfth and Market streets. This was promised to the Chamber of Commerce in a letter from Maj. Perry Heath, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. The chamber sent a letter to the Treasury Department, suggesting that the new building, to cost $3,350,000, should be made part of President Hoover's plan for speeding construction work as a means of preventing business depression.

Maj. Heath, in his reply, mentioned "the delays encountered in securing specific authorization and acquisition of Federal building sites, especially when it becomes necessary to institute condemnation proceedings." Until the Government acquires title, he said, no progress can be made toward preparation of plans.

"You may be assured," he added, "that as soon as these preliminary steps have been completed for the projects proposed at St. Louis, every effort will be made by this department to expedite letting of the contract for construction."

District Attorney Breuer said that the Government had acquired part of the block by purchase, and that as soon as condemnation suits are filed against other property owners, an order of possession would be asked, to enable the Government to take over the property at once. He said this could probably be accomplished early this year.

STUTZ BANKRUPTCY PETITION DISMISSED

Court Acts on Application of Company and Three Suing Creditors.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 4.—United States District Judge Robert C. Baltzell today dismissed a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against the Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, Inc. Three Indianapolis creditors filed the petition several days ago. Counsel for the petitioning creditors joined attorneys for the Stutz company in requesting that the action be dismissed in Federal Court.

E. S. Gorrell, president of the automobile organization, said he had been assured that a suit for the appointment of a receiver filed in a State court also will be dismissed immediately. An intervening suit, he said, also will be dismissed.

"We are assured that all the other suits which have been filed in the State courts also will be dismissed immediately," Gorrell said, "and the company, with the co-operation of all its creditors, which co-operation which has been assured, will proceed with its financial reorganization and expects to enjoy the best year's business in its history.

Gorrell several days ago declared the petitions had interrupted negotiations for a merger with another prominent automobile concern.

ILL BANKS WANT STOCKS LIQUIDATED?

an Position of Institutions Is Not Like That at Brokerage Houses—Will Customers Change Minds About Selling?

EW YORK, Jan. 4.—The Eve- Post in copyrighted weekly cial review says:

Definitely easier money is the al January expectation with return flow of currency that vious to Christmas is sent out holiday use. If anything the look in this respect is more rable than a year ago. Yet new year to date has brought very convincing evidence of g quotations such as were witnessed. A majority of ervative market judges seem have faith in stocks at present but a feeling exists rather ly that buyers need not hurry. il some more tangible signs of an upturn in business the mption is that the market remain within bounds. For reason trading this week has tained the lethargic character- s of December. Price move- ts have been narrow.

fidence Mixed With Doubt.

While brokers loans rose this k the fact is that loans still d on a general level lower rel- ly than at any time shown in records. This unmistakable and eeping deflation in brokers loans icates a rare technical strength the confidence it inspires is d with strings of doubt. Doubts the general situation are bred a feeling that the loan posi- of the banks is not so strong that at brokerage houses. The ks were more lenient with cus- ers during the recession than brokers but many of these nks will welcome an opportun- to liquidate loans when the ket permits. This known possi- y has been acting as a damper e market's enthusiasm. The inion exists that rallies in the ket for a time will be utilized the banks as opportunities to down loans.

Views May Change With Rise.

"Now there is no doubt that li- dation at the brokerage houses been more drastic than that at banks. But the previous ex- sion in loans had been more d there. At the time of the apse thousands of accounts e taken over by the banks. In general way the banks still ex- t to liquidate their loan posi- s at least partially as the mar- t presents that opportunity. Whether they will still entertain s view when the market op- rtunity comes and whether the rrowers will then be in the ood, are very different questions. man nature will have changed n 1930 the return of a buoy- t stock market inspires in bank ents a desire to sell stock. It ems even doubtful whether the nks themselves will push the atter as vigorously as they now ntemplate.

rgument in Customers' Favor.

"A study of the loan statistics ggests that the customer will some advantages over the ker in this argument. A 50 per nt cut in loans at the brokers d a decline in the trading vol- e have made the commercial uses hungry for business. How istent the banker may become a reduction in loans without ving his customer to take the count back to the brokers is not clear. If he becomes too in- tent the chance is that future onths will bring a reduction in mber bank loans on securities a simultaneous expansion in okers' loans. Much depends on deral Reserve policy so far as attitude of the banks is con- rned. It seems a fair conclusion t in its effort to revive business fidence during the next two or ee months the money authori- will maintain rather than ndon their easy money pro- m adopted after the stock mar- crash in the autumn.

UPWARD TREND TO STOCKS; TRADE LITTLE BRISKER

Rather Unimpressive Bullish Demonstrations in Various Sections of List at the Week-End Session.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Rather unimpressive bullish demonstration in various sections of the list gave an upward trend to the stock market today. Activity for the two-hour session was a little brisker than during the early hours of trading yesterday, but the market remained a strictly professional affair. Week-end profit taking was light and readily absorbed. Total sales aggregated 1,312,200 shares.

Vigorous efforts to rally the motor shares, co-incident with the opening of the New York automobile show, met with only moderate success. Late in the session, attention was turned to utility shares, where a number of upturns of 2 to 5 points were accomplished. Coppers also attracted some buying.

Week end trade and business reviews reported litle convincing evidence of a revival of activity. some picking up in steel mill activity and automobile manufacturing was reported, but indications were that the recovery would be gradual.

Statement by President.

Among the more encouraging news items of the day was the statement by President Hoover that the movement to expand construction and improvement work was making progress and indicated a larger volume of business for 1930 than was done in 1929. While indications as to the reception of new automobile models were as yet rather inconclusive, announcement that Ford Motor had booked $20,00,000 in orders the first day the new models were displayed was regarded as auguring well for sales of lower priced cars.

With Friday's money rates carrying over the week-end banking attention was turned to the leading foreign exchanges, which displayed a firmer tone, after the declines of the past two days. An early resumption of the upward movement in the exchange rates for leading European currencies was predicted, carrying the sterling and franc rates to levels which would result in a further outflow of gold. By next week, however, the January relaxation in credit should become pronounced.

2 to 5 Point Gains.

Pacific Lighting, Allied Chemical and Otis Elevator sold up about 2 to 5 points each, while American Chicle, American Waterworks, Auburn Auto, Nash and Hudson Motors, Hershey Chocolate, Lima Locomotive, Pierce-Arrow A, Westinghouse Electric and Standard Gas mounted about 2 to 4 points. U. S. Steel and General Motors closed fractionally higher. Fox Film A shot up nearly 3 points in short covering in response to reports that all sides in the controversy over the Fox situation are endeavoring to keep the matter out of the courts, but reacted and closed up only 1 point. International Combustion Engineering mounted about 4 points in what also appeared to be short covering. Brockway Motor, which dropped 3 points to a new low yesterday in anticipation of today's announcement of passing of the dividend, rallied a fraction with the announcement out of the way. A few stocks closed lower. Abitibi Paper dropped to a new low at 30, and Colorado Fuel slipped back 2 points in realizing on yesterday's advance.

Commodities again sagged. Wheat lost about 2 cents, in sympathy with declines at Liverpool and Buenos Aires. Corn sagged fractionally. Cotton futures closed off 45 to 70 cents a bale.

In the foreign exchanges, French franc cables again approached the outgoing gold point, rallying ⅛ to 3.93½ cents, while other European currencies were steady to firm. Latin-American rates, however, were again weak.

Invited to Meet Sugar Producers.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—All of the leading American refiners have been invited to meet here Tuesday with representatives of the sugar producers of Cuba to discuss conditions of the industry, it was learned today, but how many will attend could not be immediately determined, though several were said to have accepted.

WHEAT PRICE DOWN ON LOCAL MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Jan. 4.—Wheat futures ranged down today, closing 1¼c to 1⅝c lower. The day's news included report of British buying some Russian wheat, weak Liverpool market and slow export situation. Corn also closed down.

In the cash grain market soft wheat was steady to 1c lower. Premiums were higher. There was a fair selection offered and order buyers furnished a limited demand for good milling qualities, paying 5c and 5½c above the Chicago May figure for No. 2, the best premium on the crop thus far. Ordinary qualities, however, were slow. Sales of No. 2 were on a basis 4c to 5¼c above the Chicago May figure and No. 3 at 2c above. Hard wheat was down 1c to 2c. Good country run hard winters sold fairly well, but milling demand was not pressing and ordinary qualities were pushed at inside figures. Sales of No. 1 were on a basis 3½c below the Chicago May figure and No. 2 at 5¼c and 6c below. Corn was down ½c to 1c. Mills, industries and shippers furnished a fair demand. Oats were steady to ¼c lower. There was a good demand, with mills and shippers the buyers.

Wheat futures opened a cent to more lower, May ranging down more early. Winnipeg was off fractionally early. Liverpool closed 1⅜d to 1¾d lower. Corn here had fractional decline.

May wheat opened at $1.32. July wheat $1.31¾ and May corn 95¼c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 58,800 bushels, compared with 50,400 a week ago and 128,800 a year ago, included 30 cars local and 12 through; corn receipts, which were 84,000 bushels, compared with 67,200 a week ago and 165,200 a year ago, included 52 cars local and 8 through; oats receipts, which were 44,000 bushels, compared with 15,400 a week ago and 90,000 a year ago, included 19 cars local and 1 through. CHICAGO WHEAT DOWN ON RUSSIAN SALE TO BRITAIN

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Wheat prices went on the rocks today, and jolted downward here nearly 3c a bushel. Purchasing of Russian wheat for Great Britain today, following a similar purchase yesterday for Italy, acted as a decidedly disturbing influence because of possibly foreshadowing unexpected competition to be encountered by the United States and Canada in supplying trans-Atlantic needs. Considerable disposition was shown in various quarters, however, to regard the Russian exports as merely a ruse by European importers toward obtaining cheap wheat from North America.

With rallies in progress at the last, the Chicago wheat market closed nervous, 1½c to 2c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅛@⅜c to ½c down, oats ¼c to ¼@⅜c off, and provisions showing 5c to 10c decline.

British buying of Russian wheat today was reported as consisting of 75,000 bu. of low grade wheat at a premium of about 4½c a bushel over the price of United States No. 2 hard winter wheat. Greatly emphasizing the disconcerting effect of this development was a sharp setback in Liverpool wheat quotations before the market here opened. There were also said to be advices here saying that wheat offerings from Russia were due to exigencies of the financial situation.

Comparative scantiness of North American export business in wheat today, 600,000 to 700,000 bu., including a cargo of hard domestic wheat for Portugal, operated further as a bearish influence. On the other hand, Chicago wheat traders were quick to call attention to the fact that the U. S. Departmen of Agriculture was repored that here was bu little chance of Russia appearing on the world market this year either as seller or buyer of wheat in a large way.

Corn and oats were responsive to wheat weakness and to fine weather for corn movement. Country offerings of corn, though were light, and shipping demand heer for corn to go East was better.

Notwithstanding upturns in the value of hogs, provisions eased down as a result of packers' selling.

LOCAL STOCKS IMPROVE AFTER TURN OF YEAR

Trade, However, Extremely Light — Largest Part of Week's Aggregate Business Done on Two Days of Old Year.

The week on the St. Louis Stock Exchange was made up of two distinct periods, one comprising the two days preceding New Year's and the other those following it. During the first there was further selling for tax loss purposes when some new lows for the year were recorded, while in the first days of the new year prices improved under light demand. Aggregate business was only about three-fifths of that of the previous week and about 60 per cent of the total was transacted on the first two days. Very light trade marked the days following the turn of the year. The market apparently was awaiting developments on the "Big Board" in New York.

Rice-Stix was the most active stock of the week with a range of 2 points and closed 1⅝ above previous week. There were 2369 shares sold on Monday between 14 and 14⅝. Wagner Electric had a range of 1 point. National Candy improved after being lower. International Shoe closed higher, being down early.

Landis Machine opened the week at 70 and sold at 60 on Tuesday, representing a loss of 15 points. There was some sold at 59 on Thursday and a rebound to 64 took place Friday.

During the week 935 Nicholas Beazley sold between 4 and 4⅝. Laclede Steel was up a point at 42.

In the bond section, United Railways sold between 74¾ and 72, closing at 73, unchanged from last week.

FURTHER RECOVERY IN DULL CURB TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. — Stock prices made further recovery in today's curb market, but trading continued dull and changes generally, were of little importance. A few soft spots were scattered throughout the list, but there was no evidence of any concerted "bear" selling. Recent dullness of the market has led several traders to advance or prolong their winter vacations.

American Superpower, Cities Service and Electric Bond & Share, three of the most popular public utilities, again showed only fractional gains. Niagara & Hudson was turned over in fairly large volume, closing 1¼ points higher, and American, Gas & Electric retained all but about a point of its six-point gain. Allied Power, Lone Star Gas, Mohawk & Hudson first prefered and Sierra Pacific also recorded moderate gains, but American Light & Traction dropped three points on a few odd lot sales.

Opening of the New York Automobile Show apparently was used as an excuse for a revival of bullish activity in Ford of Canada A stock, which closed 1½ points higher. The "B" stock, which is closely held, closed 12½ points higher at 49½ after having touched 58. Stutz, which sold down to a new low at $1 a share on the announcement of a receivership application the other day, rallied to 2¼. Cord Corporation improved fractionally.

Investment Trust shares moved irregularly higher, Third National Investors standing out with a gain of 2⅝ points. Goldman Sachs and Insull Utilities Investors also recorded moderate gains but Lehman Corporation yielded fractionally on profit taking. Leading oils showed only narrow fractional changes, Continental of Maine dropping 1⅝ points on a few sales. Tubize Artificial Silk jumped 10½ points, National Baking preferred 9⅜, Axton Fishers 5 and Insurance Company of North America 4⅝, but the turnover in each case was small.

CLEARINGS, MONEY AND SILVER

The St Louis Clearing House Association reported clearings for Jan. 4, 1930, $27,400,000; corresponding day a year ago, $27,600,000; total to date, $111,400,000; corresponding period a year ago, $130,000,000. Report of debits for Jan. 3, 1930, were: Debits to individual accounts, $62,700,000; total to date, $130,800,000; debits to bank and bankers accounts, $15,700,000; total to date, $43,900,000; total debits to individual and bank and bankers accounts, $78,400,000; total to date, $174,700,000.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Bar silver, 45⅝c; Mexican dollars, 33½c.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Bar silver reached another new low record level, the local market today being quoted at 45⅝c, off 1c. The continued weakness of this metal recently is believed to reflect the liquidation of the holdings of a large speculative pool in China.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Treasury receipts for January 2 were $142,742,550; expenditures $147,245,550; balance $168,494,067.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Bar silver 20 15-16d per ounce. Money 2¾ per cent. Discount rates, short bills and three months 4¼@4 5-16 per cent.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Prices were firm on the Bourse today. Three per cent rentes 85 francs. Five per cent loan 107 francs 80 centimes. Exchange on London 123 francs 94¼ centimes. The dollar was quoted at 25 francs 41¼ centimes.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Raw sugar was a little easier today under increased offerings from store. The demand, however, was limited and the only sale reported was 14,000 bags of Cuban ex-store at 3.80c to a local refiner, a decline of 1-32c from the last previous sale.

Trading in raw futures was of small proportions, but the undertone was steadier and prices held firm, closing with net gains of 1 to 3 points. The upturn was due to covering and trade buying with offerings light.

Rumor that the Cuban export corporation would announce no more details as to sales seemed to restrict operations, and there was a disposition on the part of operators to hold off and await developments. Approximate sales were only 9500 tons. January closed $1.91c. March 1.97c. May 2.02c. July 2.07c. September 2.14c. December 2.21c.

Refined was quiet and unchanged at 5.10c to 5.15c for fine granulated, with some second hands available at 5.07½c.

BONDS IMPROVE IN SHORT DULL SESSION

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The bond market edged upward today in two hours of dull trading. All groups showed a slight advance in the very thin dealings, which totaled not much more than $4,000,000 principal amount, making the short session one of the lighest in a year.

At the close the averages for 30 bonds, representing all the domestic groupings, stood at 98.7, compared with 99.9, the 1929 high, and 96.3, the low mark. The gain during the past week was half a point, reflecting the firmness of the market after the turn of the year when money rates developed an easier undertone.

First grade rails stagnated, although holding to their upward course. Industrials, which staged a rally on Friday, extended their gains a trifle despite the heaviness of several low-priced loans. Utilities were rather mixed, but gains averaged a little larger than losses. United States Government Liberties and Treasuries scarcely stirred and closing prices were irregular. Foreign obligations retained the ground they had gained during the earlier sessions of the week. Most of the net changes in this section were only fractional.

St. Paul General 4s, Atchison Convertible 4s of 1909-55, Atlanta & Charlotte Air Line 5s, Southern Railway Consolidated 5s and two or three other rails extracted a rise of 1 to 2 points out of the thin market, but in the more active obligations a much narrower range of prices prevailed.

The weakest spot in the entire list yas the Cunba Cane Sugar 7s, which dropped 12 points. The company, which is in receivership, announced recently that it would not pay principal or interest due on these bonds Jan. 1. Today's decline carried the obligation to within 3 points of its low. Other foreign sugars were heavy.

Penn Dixie Cement 6s rallied 8½ points. Other outstanding changes by industrial bonds included a recession of 2⅜ in Walworth 6s and gains of 2 and 1½, respectively, in Lehigh Valley Coal 5s and Liggett & Myers Tobacco 5s.

With the exception of Chicago & Northwestern 4¾s, which have been actively traded since their appearance a month ago, the convertibles suffered from neglect. This rail held at 100 on the largest turnover of the session. American Telephone 4½s, the customary leaders of the share previlege debentures, were forced into second place, closing a shade lower. Atchison 4½s lost 1⅛. American I. G. Chemical 5½s rose a full point.

New York Coffee.

HOG PRICES ADVANCED IN TRADE LAST WEEK

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, Ill., Jan. 4 (United States Department of Agriculture)—The current week was practically devoid of features, save that short fed steers dominated the run. The almost unanimous opinion of local operators is that many short fed steers are being marketed at the present time because of the prevalence of soft corn in surrounding territory. Compared with the close of last week, steers sold 25c to 50c higher; good and choice vealers $1.50 lower; other slaughter classes steady; stocker and feeder steers and feeding cows and heifers strong. Tops for week: 1143-pound yearlings, $15; 1413-pound matured steers, $14; mixed yearlings, $13.75; 632-pound heifers, $13.25; cows, $9.60; sausage bulls, $8.75; vealers, $16.50. Heavy steers were represented by one load at $13.25, averaging 1549 pounds, two consignments at $11.60 and $14, scaling 1412 pounds, and five cars at $11.60 to $13.50, averaging 1304 to 1353 pounds. Medium weight steers averaging 1203 to 1293 pounds, ranged from $9.25 to $13.50, bulk $10.85 to $13, while that group scaling 1102 to 1199 pounds, ranged from $9.85 to $13.25, bulk $10.50 to $11.75. Lightweight steers ranged from $8.75 to $14, bulk $10 to $11.50, while bulk of all steers claimed $10 to $13. Most fat steers registered $12.25 to $13.25. Bulk of fat mixed yearlings and heifers cashed at $12 to $13; medium fleshed descriptions largely $10 to $12. Bulk of cows brought $7 to $8.50; most low cutters, $4.50 to $5. Good and choice vealers earned $16 Friday as compared to $17.50 at the close of last week.

Hog Market Higher.

Hog receipts this week approximated 56,600, as compared with 58,760 last week and 82,484 the first week of last year. Unfavorable road conditions were responsible for marketings falling below the total of the holiday week, but the sharp reduction compared with last year indicates that marketings this season will be subsantally less than that of a year ago. Prices dipped somewhat at the opening of the week, but light receipts and broad shipping outlet following New Year's day resulted in a higher trend during the latter half of the week and a net gain for the week of 15c to 25c on butcher and bacon hogs and 50c on pigs. Receipts on Saturday were estimated at 5000 head, half of which were billed through and direct, leaving but 2500 on sale. Shippers and small killers purchased the meager showing at strong to 10c higher figures, some weighty butchers up more. Top price was maintained at $10.10, extreme high for the week, with bulk of 160 to 225-pound weights realizing $10 to $10.10. A load of choce butchers scaling near 240 pounds scored $10, but bulk of 240 to 280 pound averages went at $9.75 to $9.90. Majority of 130 to 150 pound light lights cashed at $9.75 to $10, with a moderate number of 150s selling mixed with other hogs up to and including the top figure. A few strongweight slaughter pigs touched $9.85, but most 100 to 130 pound descriptions were turned at $9.25 to $9.75. Packing sows were unchanged today, bulk making $8.15, with a spread of $8.10 to $8.25 taking the majority during the last half of the week.

Fat Lamb Prices Down.

Sheep and lamb receipts this week totaled around 5700 as compared with 4363 last week and 6440 the first week of 1929. Increased receipts pushed fat lamb prices rapidly downward this week until at midweek losses totaled 75c from the close of last week. Curtailed marketings and a continued good outlet for the dressed product operated to check the downturn and at the finish 25c of the reduction had been regained, making a net loss for the period of 50c. Throwout lambs and all grades of sheep held steady. Top for the week was $13.75, paid on Monday by shippers and city butchers. The packer top was $13.25, paid on Friday, on which day a city butcher paid $13.35 for a part load. Bulk of lambs for the entire week earned $12.50 to $13 with the closing bulk $13 to $13.25. Several decks of clipped lambs sold around $12.25 to $12.50. One load of medium to good shorn yearlings cleared at $10. Throwout lambs sold on each session at $9, with some better seconds to butchers up to $10. Fat ewes were present only in odd lots and majority cashed at $4.50 to $5.50, the price varying according to weight, quality and condition.

COTTON CLOSES LOWER IN FINAL TRADE OF WEEK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Cotton was lower today under liquidation together with some Southern and local selling which appeared to be promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and was accompanied by reports that it was somewhat easier to buy spot cotton in the South, although there had been no change in the basis. March contracts sold off to 17.10, or 15 points net lower and within 7 points of the lowest price touched on the decline during the middle of December. March closed at 17.11 with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 11 to 14 points. Spot 17.15.

The opening was barely steady at a decline of 3 to 9 points in response to the lower Liverpool cables. Some trade buying and week-end covering was reported, but it was supplied on slight bulges and the market worked quite steadily lower under continued selling, which according to local brokers, appeared to be coming partly from the South.

There was also some local selling and a liquidation by recent buyers on the decline which extended to 16.95 for January, 17.34 for May and 17.58 for October in the late trading, or about 12 to 13 points net lower. Closing prices were within a point or two of the lowest.

Except for the easier showing of Liverpool, the day's news came in for no particular comment. The selling was attributed partly to the disappointment over the failure of the market to hold its rallies of late last month, or of bullish features to create a more general buying movement. The Southern selling here was a little more in evidence than recently which had a tendency to color the talk of rather freer spot offerings and doubtless increased the disposition to liquidate long contracts for over the week-end.

Liverpool cable said that there had been continental and Bombay selling in that market, absorbed by trade calling at the decline. They also noted an increased cloth inquiry from India and an improved demand for yarns.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 161,000 bales against 164,000 last year.

METAL MARKET REVIEW

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Improved sales to foreign consumers developed in the copper market late in the week. Domestic demand, however, remained quiet. The feeling that producers will maintain the present price of 18 cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut valley for the first quarter of the year is said to be growing, and may have stimulated interest from abroad.

Tin prices were fractionally lower, but the tone was viewed as very steady considering the large increase in the world's visible supply.

Practically no change occurred in the lead situation, with domestic markets remaining quiet, but firm.

There was reported a fair demand for zinc for early shipment. Ore was steady with prospects for a small output for the week.

There was a very steady tone to antimony covering all positions. December shipments from the Far East were believed to have been small.

A Regular $10 Value at

Three things make this an unprecedented value—the price—ten dollar value for seven fifty—the fact that the garment offered is the most timely—the most important garment of the season—and the special quality brocade in which this special garment is made.

The Nemo-flex Diafram Reducer Wonderlift, a combination which molds heavier figures to smart slim princess lines—the only garment you can get which really does that. The secret of its persuasive control lies in the hidden inner belt which controls abdomen, hips and back—and in the unique diafram reducer which smooths away that almost inevitable fleshiness over the diaphragm.

Won't you come in and try on this remarkable garment? It will convince you immediately of its value.

"Now he's always hungry,"

...says MISSOURI mother!

"HAROLD is absolutely the picture of health, now again," says Mrs. H. J. Happel, 4350 Gibson Ave., St. Louis. "A few weeks ago we had to force him to eat; now he's always hungry.

"I knew what to do when he became bilious, half-sick and listless, because we've always known about California Fig Syrup. Harold's coated tongue and unpleasant breath cleared up with the first few spoonfuls; and in just a few days his stomach and bowels were acting perfectly. He's gaining right along now."

California Fig Syrup has the full endorsement of the medical world. A pure vegetable product, loved by children. A gentle, but thorough cleanser of a youngster's system and a gentle energizer for sluggish bowels. A stimulator for lagging appetites and digestion; a help in building sturdy limbs and robust bodies.

The name California is important. No imitator can put that on his product.

And yet, in the midst of all these outward manifestations, we are faced with bigger war budgets than the world has ever known. How can we conciliate these two opposing tendencies? There is talk of peace, but there is a plentiful show of arms. The temple of international relations has a facade of brotherly love but inside it is a bristling armory.

After Arms Holiday, What?

The year 1930 begins with a formidable manifestation of the tendency to reduce armament. Nations feel the crushing burdens of the maintenance of great military establishments and want to come to some agreement so that one will not outdo the other and thus create a race in which the most zealous and warlike might outstrip its most dangerous rival. Nations see that it is better to ask "its probable enemy" to keep its arms within a certain ratio so that neither would have any overwhelming advantage if a conflict should burst. For reasons of economy and even of practical strategy, it would be wise to keep "the probable enemy" at the lowest, for then and then only can any nation with safety decide to limit its weapons. A nation's forces are determined by the size of its most dangerous rival or group of rivals.

We hear much of cruiser tonnage, gun power, trained reserves and parity, and when we come to an agreement on all these, where are we? We have a holiday in building and that is all. The sensation, deeply rooted, is that after the holiday is over building must begin again, for the deep roots lying at the bottom of the conflict have not been eliminated. Temple of Peace Has Facade Of Brotherly Love, but Bristles With Arms, Says Mussolini

Deep Roots Lying at Bottom of Conflicts Are not Eliminated no Matter How Many Pacts We Sign.

GOING out prospecting for what 1930 will bring us, we find that it ought to be just as rich in important events as was 1929. It is the first year of the second decade after the war which starts out, after having created a status quo, to maintain that status quo. War again seems a very improbable occurrence, but not yet and perhaps not for many decades to come, can war be regarded as impossible. There is even the sensation that though we should successfully pass through 1930 without an armed conflict, little guarantee will be permitted us that the succeeding years will pass without disturbance.

And this we can say after we have examined all the efforts which are being put forward to find a basis on which all nations can join in promoting peace. We have numerous pacts and instruments, such as agreements to outlaw war, international arbitration courts, schemes for disarmament. And yet, in the midst of all these outward manifestations, we are faced with bigger war budgets than the world has ever known. How can we conciliate these two opposing tendencies? There is talk of peace, but there is a plentiful show of arms. The temple of international relations has a facade of brotherly love but inside it is a bristling armory.

After Arms Holiday, What?

The year 1930 begins with a formidable manifestation of the tendency to reduce armament. Nations feel the crushing burdens of the maintenance of great military establishments and want to come to some agreement so that one will not outdo the other and thus create a race in which the most zealous and warlike might outstrip its most dangerous rival. Nations see that it is better to ask "its probable enemy" to keep its arms within a certain ratio so that neither would have any overwhelming advantage if a conflict should burst. For reasons of economy and even of practical strategy, it would be wise to keep "the probable enemy" at the lowest, for then and then only can any nation with safety decide to limit its weapons. A nation's forces are determined by the size of its most dangerous rival or group of rivals.

We hear much of cruiser tonnage, gun power, trained reserves and parity, and when we come to an agreement on all these, where are we? We have a holiday in building and that is all. The sensation, deeply rooted, is that after the holiday is over building must begin again, for the deep roots lying at the bottom of the conflict have not been eliminated. These stay no matter how many accords and pacts we seem to sign. We may all agree upon rules by which we will fight, the number of our ships, the size of our guns, but none of this has anything to do with the removal of the cause of war. As long as one nation has what another wants and earnestly aspires to obtain, there will always be danger. This is inevitable though 1930 will not see the explosion, we trust and hope.

National aims are jealously guarded, and every nation has national aims even when professing peaceful policies. The world is not divided according to the needs of each, some have more than they can possibly use and others strive in poverty to maintain their identity as nations. There is an unrest in the world and 1930 will unmistakably mark a new status quo in stabilization which the strong will use all their power to enforce and the weak will by their feeble protests endeavor to change.

U. S. as Arbiter.

The year 1930 will see the United States coming into the full bloom of its power as not only the great Colossus of the West, but as an arbiter between the Orient and the Occident. Practically invulnerable in peace or war, her policy will be one of the chief standards by which both the east and the west will set their course. From 1930 the United States can fix its true beginning as having reached the apex as a world power and as having attained an influence which for decades will decide the trend of history. Blessed with a dynamic people, a rich, compact territory, and a strenuous expansionist spirit, there is no restraining or hindering force to prevent the fulfillment of its destiny. While the older nations wrestle with impoverished lands or far-flung territories or lack of material resources, the United States is fresh, full and vigorous with wealth, territory and power.

The year 1930 may see the entrance of the United States into the World Court at The Hague. This eventuality can only but increase her prestige and influence and give her a preponderant voice in the arbitration council of nations. No nation will be lax in giving heed to her principles of world policy. The United States could not get along without the World Court, she perhaps could get along by only living to herself, but adherence to the World Court can have no other effect than to bring her even closer to and within the orbit of world dominion.

As I forecast for 1920, that the

London Navy Limitation Conference Presents Many Complex Problems

Attitude of France, Which Opposes Parity With Italy in All But Capital Ships, May Prove a Major Stumbling Block to Five-Power Agreement.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.

"PEACE," said President Hoover in his memorable Armistice day address, "is not a static thing. To maintain peace is as dynamic in its requirements as is the conduct of war. We cannot say 'Let there be peace' and go about other business."

And Ramsay MacDonald, the Prime Minister of Great Britain, inquired on his recent good-will visit to this country: "Isn't it time, my friends, that we should take some risks to secure peace?"

It is because the respective governments of the United States and Great Britain are headed at the same time by two earnest advocates of world peace, men who are willing to take risks in the cause of peace, that a conference on the limitation of naval armaments will be held at London beginning Jan. 21. The summoning of the conference was the direct outgrowth of the conversations begun between Prime Minister MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes in Britain and continued at Washington between the Prime Minister and the President. Great Britain issued the call, after the technical differences between the two nations over cruiser strength had been scaled down to the vanishing point, and with the approval of President Hoover issued it in such a way that the United States was joined as a partner in the invitation. The three other important naval Powers of the world, Japan, France and Italy, were invited and accepted.

Personnel of Delegation Indicates Importance.

President Hoover has named as the American delegates his Secretary of State, Henry L. Stimson; the Secretary of the Navy, Charles Francis Adams; the Ambassador to Great Britain, Charles G. Dawes; the Ambassador to Mexico, Dwight W. Morrow; the Ambassador to Belgium, Hugh S. Gibson; the Democratic leader of the Senate, Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, and the senior Senator from Pennsylvania, David A. Reed, a Republican. Secretary Stimson heads the group of seven. With a large staff the delegates, with the exception of those already abroad, will sail for London on the steamship George Washington next Thursday.

Both the number of the delegates and their high official rank suggest the importance which President Hoover attaches to the conference. He himself has planned to keep in the closest possible touch with the negotiations.

The conference will be the third on naval armaments since the World War. The first was that called by President Harding and held at Washington in 1921-22. In a dramatic gesture of renunciation, the United States, then fast on the way toward outstripping England in naval power, proposed a ruthless scrapping of battleships. The United States asked for a limitation in all classes of vessels—not only capital ships but cruisers, destroyers, submarines and other auxiliaries. France's refusal to consent to a submarine limitation, in consequence of which Great Britain declined to limit cruisers, kept the conference from any agreement on auxiliary vessels. France, it will be seen, played a decisive role, as she seems destined to do again in 1930.

Though the conference failed to measure up to the high standard of disarmament set by Secretary of State Hughes, it was still the most successful of the kind ever held. Out of it came a treaty placing a definite limitation on capital ships and airplane carriers and providing for the scrapping of 70 capital ships, built and building, with a total displacement of 1,644,839 tons. The United States made the heaviest sacrifice in capital ships, giving up 32, as against 22 by Great Britain and 16 by Japan. The saving to these three Powers as a result of the Washington treaty has been estimated at $2,000,000,000 and to the United States alone at $1,000,000,000.

Failure to Limit Auxiliary Vessels Unwise.

In the years since 1922 the weak spot in the Washington treaty—its failure to limit auxiliary vessels—has become increasingly evident. With capital ship building suspended under the treaty until 1931, the nations, especially Japan and Great Britain, turned their attention to cruisers. Soon the United States found itself in a position of decided cruiser inferiority to both those countries—a condition which brought about the eight-cruiser program of 1924 and the recent passage of the 15-cruiser bill. The race in capital ships had been temporarily ended, but in other respects the naval competition went merrily on.

It was in this situation that the second of the post-war naval conferences was held. President Coolidge called it; the place was Geneva and the time the summer of 1927. The same Powers which had subscribed to the Washington treaty were asked to come together with a view to extending the treaty's 5-5-3 capital ship ratio to other categories of vessels. France and Italy declined to send delegates. France held then, as she holds now, that land and naval disarmament are interdependent, and that decisions on disarmament should be reached under the aegis of the League of Nations.

Cause of 1927 Disagreement Between U. S. and Britain.

The Geneva conference, then, was among the United States, Great Britain and Japan. It was a complete failure. Japan's role was conciliatory, but the United States and Great Britain were unable to reconcile their differences. The demands of the two were based on conflicting defensive requirements as understood by their respective naval experts. Great Britain held out for a large number of small cruisers to guard her long sea lanes. The delegates of the United States, having in mind the scarcity of our overseas fueling stations (five as compared with Great Britain's 20) pointed to the special need of this country for large cruisers with a maximum cruising radius. They called attention also to the great superiority of Great Britain in merchant ships capable of being armed with six-inch guns.

The United States proposed a general tonnage limitation, within which each Power should build whatever kinds of cruisers it desired. Great Britain wanted to make two classes of cruisers—10,000-ton ships with 8-inch guns and 7500-ton ships with 6-inch guns.

Under the American plan, Great Britain could not have built all the small ships it wanted without becoming inferior to the United States in 10,000-ton ships. Under the British plan, the United States could have gained tonnage parity only by building a large number of small cruisers unsuited to its requirements.

On the rock of these differences the conference came to grief. There followed a period in which Anglo-American relations became

Art Museum's "Period Rooms" Reveal Home Building As It Was In Old England and France

Director Rogers Explains Significance of House Interiors Brought From the Old World for Permanent Display in St. Louis Institution.

THE new director of the St. Louis Art Museum, Meyric R. Rogers, has written for the Post-Dispatch an article telling of the contents and significance of the display of period rooms, four representing the England of earlier days, and one representing France, which will be opened to the public next Saturday. Photographs of four of these rooms are printed in the rotogravure section with this issue of the Post-Dispatch.

By MEYRIC R. ROGERS

THERE is perhaps no more fascinating human study than that which tells us how people lived in the past. Even the things they handled and used—fragmentary survivals — excite the imagination and curiosity and add thereby a multitude of interests to an object commonplace enough in itself. When, instead of a mere survival, we find an object of rare intrinsic beauty speaking to us of truths keenly felt and wrought out in wood or stone or iron by one who lived in this age of romance, we have a treasure indeed. No matter how small or fragmentary it may be, no matter how simple in material, it has the dignity of age in a miraculous union with the vigor of immortal youth.

We certainly have an intensification of this experience when we stand in a room of beautiful old paneling surrounded by objects that actually might have been placed in such a room by a fine gentleman of the time? Here we have not a single fragment but a complete book written by the most skillful craftsman of the age telling in a language as direct as speech, of their vision of life, of lessons of beauty that are as valid today as a hundred thousand yesterdays ago.

This is the reason for period rooms, not to furnish assemblages of rare and costly things as object lessons to wealthy collectors, nor a series of complicated curiosities to the general public, but to open a wide gateway to a land of lasting satisfaction for all who care enough to enter.

Up to the sixteenth century the culture of Western Europe was largely of an international character. This is very clearly shown in the arts and especially in those connected with domestic life which were limited to the treatment of a few simple necessities, such as the uncertain and semi-nomadic condition of medieval society warranted. The Renaissance spreading northward from Italy brought in its train a spirit of nationalism radically different from the purely political or military sectionalism that existed before.

The centralizing power of the church itself, formerly the source of all life outside the domain of fist or sword, had naturally kept the products of that life more or less uniform in character. This power politically broken, the forces of civilization tended to center around the various newly awakened national individualities which became ever more distinctive with the passing of time.

The sixteenth century, early or late, according to circumstances, was the fork at which the national cultures of England, France, Germany, the Netherlands and Spain diverged from the main track of medieval tradition to pursue their individual courses. It is not surprising, therefore, to find it also the actual starting point of the national arts of Europe. Between 1500 and 1600 each nation began to evolve modes of artistic expression peculiar to itself and in a remarkably short time the decorative arts in particular began to show a distinctive racial character easily marked by even those of us with slight experience.

Though this series of five rooms in the Museum cannot, therefore, be taken as completely representative of the developments of Western European taste during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, they do give us a very adequate vertical section of the evolution of ideas in design which have most affected American life. Our taste and tendencies, by force of tradition at least, are so largely English-born that it is impossible for us to really understand our own developments without first appreciating their source. The other great influence on the taste of our times has come from France—the France of the mid-eighteenth century—whose art then reached its most distinctive phase in all the years between the middle ages and our own day.

It, therefore, seems peculiarly fitting that the first installation of its kind in the Museum should be of four English rooms illustrating the four main stylistic divisions of English post Renaissance decorative art—the so-called ages of oak, walnut, mahogany and satinwood—and a French room representing the period of Louis XV which, on the whole, has been the second most influential factor in the formation of our modern taste.

The Prinknash Park Room.

PRINKNASH PARK is an ancient estate near Gloucester, formerly part of the demesne of the mitred abbots of what is now the cathedral of that city. After the suppression of the monasteries by Henry VIII the place passed through various hands, finally coming into the possession of Sir John Bridgeman, a successor

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Missouri Blue Law Violations.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE several editorials and letters that have appeared in your paper recently regarding the old blue law have been read with much interest by a large number of people in Montgomery County since we in this county also "have a good Sheriff who tries to do his duty under our laws"—borrowing a statement made by Prosecuting Attorney Palmer of Lincoln County in his letter of defense printed in your paper of Dec. 23.

The Prosecuting Attorney and Sheriff of both Montgomery and Lincoln counties have apparently become very ambitious recently to enforce the old blue law, but I believe if they will read this particular section they will discover that the law also forbids exposure to sale of "any goods, wares or merchandise."

The correct interpretation of this, in my opinion, is that the gasoline dealer, the grocer and the tobacco vender are all law violators, equally guilty, and should be jailed with the hunter. Will Mr. Palmer please give his ideas on this angle of the argument? The Prosecuting Attorney of our county says that the grocers, etc., are not governed by this law as they are selling necessities. As C. L. H. writes in your issue of Dec. 26 in regard to Mr. Palmer's letter: "These excuses are certainly out of order—and are not convincing."

That point has been raised in other places and the court found that groceries, gasoline, etc., were truly necessities but that the purchase of them on Sunday could never be construed as necessary.

I am only one of hundreds of men who work six days a week and if I go hunting it must be on Sunday and I maintain that when I have permission from a land owner to hunt on his land it should be nobody's business but ours.

I go hunting occasionally on Sunday, but so far I have always found places to hunt where I would not disturb any church services.

Pemiscot Pig Swimmers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ON the editorial page of your paper of Dec. 25 I noticed this article: "Can a Pig Swim?"

The writer was born and reared on a farm in Pemiscot County, Southeast Missouri, commonly referred to by non-resident people as "Swamp East Missouri."

The county is cut up by drainage ditches or canals a mile apart where bayous and lakes once did abound. The land was uncleared and unfenced and was used as a feeding ground for stock, including pigs.

The sow with her whole family would swim these drainage ditches with ease and return again at nightfall to the call of the horn "pigooee."

Porto Rico and Our Farm Surplus.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN your paper of Sunday, Dec. 29, is an article from Gov. Theodore Roosevelt of Porto Rico in which he says the children of the island are undernourished, hundreds of thousands of them existing on starvation diets. They need food in Porto Rico.

In this country we have just had a special session of Congress, called in an effort to do something for our farmers who are suffering because of overproduction of food crops. Too much food there.

Now, just why is it that the United States Government can't buy some of our surplus food and sell it to Porto Rico, extending long time credit? If Porto Rico ever paid the bill, which it probably would be able to do in a few years, we would be better off here for the transaction. If Porto Rico never paid the bill we would be no worse off because we have a surplus that is worrying us. CLAUDE CALLAN.

Our Slippery Streets.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN accompanying some Chicago people who were going by auto to Cape Girardeau, I received some very unfavorable comments about the poor condition in which they found our streets after the recent snow and ice had covered them.

In fact, after going down Seventh street and Broadway, they wanted to turn back, until one of the men at a filling station told us we need not fear in going out of the city limits, and that by the time we reached Lemay Ferry road we would find the roads cleaned off and dry. This was true, and, much to my surprise, after leaving Luxemburg, we found Lemay Ferry road and the balance of the road down to Cape Girardeau cleaned of ice and snow.

Certainly the criticism of these Chicago people is much deserved. I feel sure that our street-cleaning department certainly was very slow and very neglectful in leaving this dangerous condition of snow and ice to remain as long as it did. J. B. K.

IDEALISM AND REALITY

Those dreams of peace and disarmament in which President Hoover and Premier MacDonald have so pleasantly disported will be put to severe test when the London naval parley opens Jan. 21.

Our opinion that the Paris peace pact is of such stuff as dreams are made on and therefore can serve no better purpose than to point a moral is borne out by the attitude of France. The originator of the pact, France announces at the outset of the parley that she will be governed only by her own necessities. Nor is France unlike either the United States or Great Britain. Even while Messrs. Hoover and MacDonald sat astride the famous log at Rapidan agreeing upon the preliminaries of naval disarmament our Navy Department was laying down the keels of the five cruisers which Mr. Hoover said would not be built until the London conference was over, and reports from England are that while Mr. MacDonald has professed peace with an ardor that has met with acclaim everywhere the British Admiralty has in no wise desisted from its own program of naval construction.

These things do not mean that the aspirations of President Hoover and Premier MacDonald are wholly visionary. There is a great gulf between idealism and reality, a gulf which time abridges with a dilatoriness of which we can easily become impatient. Human progress, as James Harvey Robinson reminds us, is only glacier-like; it is never impetuous. Perhaps the best proof of this is that 75 years after our own cataclysmic Civil War, which pronounced the doom of human slavery in every important nation upon the earth, the League of Nations has discovered to its surprise that slavery still persists in seven hoary parts of the world as yet unpenetrated by that great ideal.

The League of Nations itself illustrates the tedious nature of human progress. History offers no parallel to it as a formal effort to create a responsible international society which could do to the gunman among nations what national society does to the gunman among individuals. That it has not fulfilled the aspiration which projected it, and probably never will do so within centuries of time, is only the lot of all idealism. Our own refusal to permit any super-government to take us into war against our will, as well as our refusal to permit the World Court to adjudicate any matter in which we claim an interest, is sufficiently indicative of the widespread reluctance of nations to lessen that vigilance which they feel to be essential to their preservation. The instinct which compels France to admit just before the London parley opens that the peace pact outlawing war is one thing and disarmament is something else is the instinct of us all.

It is greatly to the credit of men that knowing these things they still persist in the aspiration of peace. If it were not so, we would not have made our painful way out of the bloody welter of primitive times into that comparative peace and security which have become our good fortune in the twentieth century. The disarmament conference which Mr. Coolidge promoted two years ago was a dismal failure as a disarmament conference; but it was not a failure as a necessary political preliminary to a real disarmament conference. The situation which it reflected was unique in history. Great Britain, which had ruled the seas for centuries, faced her prospective successor in that proud estate. She knew that the United States could if it would wrest control of the seas from her by sheer weight of money. No such transfer of naval dominance from one Power to another had ever been accomplished except by supreme test of strength upon the sea. The British delegation at Geneva could not be assured of any better motive upon our part than England had when she met the great fleet of King Philip.

That accounted for the bluster of Admiral Bridgeman, as it accounted chiefly for the failure of the conference to reach agreement. The situation at London this month will be different. The Labor Government of England judges war very largely from the viewpoint of economics. So does the American Government of Mr. Hoover. To that point of view war is stripped of its vainglory and becomes an appalling waste, an incredible obstacle to the peaceful evolution of all things appertaining to the happiness and well-being of men. To it the World War was caused primarily by the efforts of Germany to outweigh the armaments of all the other Continentals on land and match those of England on the sea. That folly upset and imperiled for years to come the orderly processes of human progress. So, too, could naval rivalry between Great Britain and the United States do the same thing. It is a terrible peril, one severely testing the wisdom of the two great English-speaking Powers.

Every chance but one is against President Hoover and Premier MacDonald at the London parley. It is this one chance, the chance that the time has come when even so great a problem as international fear can at last be composed into that same sense of security which is felt within nations, that makes the conference worth holding.

"THE AM WHAT AM."

President Day of Union College is opposed to employing costly football coaches, would stop making money out of college contests by abolishing gate receipts, would do away at once with all professional coaching, all scouting, all subsidizing, all direction of every kind from the side lines. That is his plan for de-professionalizing college athletics. Dr. Day is 100 per cent amateur. Indeed it would be all right, perhaps, to call him "the am what am."

THE GAME STORAGE ISSUE.

The refusal of the Prosecuting Attorney of Greene County to file charges under the game storage law greatly increases the danger that such game birds as quail will become extinct in Missouri.

The State law which forbids storage of native wild game in any commercial establishment was designed to correct a practice that greatly menaced the wild game of Missouri. The restaurateur who had market hunters in the field, kept game in his iceboxes secured by licenses made out to his waiters, and sold game at his tables, was fast wiping out some of our most prized birds. The loopholes in the prior law were such that sportsmen prevailed upon the Legislature to pass a storage law that would have no loopholes in it. This is the law that the Prosecutor in Greene County refuses to enforce. Nor is he the first to do so. These cases have also been lost in the State courts of St. Louis.

To save the game of the State means sacrifice. It should not be asking too much of the people to compel them by law to co-operate in the destruction of game selling. Are the men, usually hunters, who fall afoul of this law quite sure when they set it at naught that this is what a sportsman would do?

THE MISSOURI PACIFIC'S PACIFIC COAST OUTLET.

It is of particular interest to St. Louis that the Interstate Commerce Commission's consolidation plan places the Missouri Pacific in a very strong position. It is the dominant road of System No. 18, in which are grouped some 75 smaller lines, including the Denver & Rio Grande Western and the Western Pacific. The latter roads form the Missouri Pacific's connection with the Pacific coast. In awarding them to the Missouri Pacific, the Commission confirms its decision, made several years ago, to give the Missouri Pacific transcontinental status. It did so by permitting it to buy a half interest in the Denver & Rio Grande Western, the other half of which is owned by the Western Pacific.

In a dissenting opinion Commissioner Eastman, although expressing no strong objection, was "inclined to think" that it might be to the advantage of the two Western roads to be combined as a system independent of the Missouri Pacific, "affording all of the lines which reach Denver from the East an outlet to the Pacific coast in competition with the Missouri Pacific." Commissioner Porter, in another dissenting opinion, favored giving the two Western roads to the Burlington because he is "persuaded that the Burlington System, by reason of its splendid physical condition, its conservative capital structure, its strong financial position, and its physical location, affords much the better parent for a new transcontinental line from Chicago to the Pacific."

Neither dissenting Commissioner, apparently, gave much thought to the sectional phase of the problem. The Missouri Pacific is the only St. Louis carrier with direct trunk-line connection to the coast. Chicago, upon which Commissioner Porter would confer added benefit, is already tremendously favored in this respect, being served by four or five Western transcontinental lines. It is very important not only for St. Louis, but for considerations of competition stressed in the transportation act, for at least one St. Louis carrier to have access to the coast. That evidently is the opinion of the majority of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and we believe Commissioners Eastman and Porter, too, would admit its weight.

Any extended debate on the position taken by the two dissenting Commissioners would be in the nature of a sham battle. The real fight will come when and if application is made to disturb the set-up of System No. 18. In such a fight, the Missouri Pacific would have all the advantage.

POLICE BEATINGS.

Police Judge Harry P. Rosecan has rendered a public service in denouncing the beating of Blanchard Hudson by Police Captain Wetzel of the Laclede District and four subordinate officers.

Judge Rosecan refused to believe that a 115-pound 19-year old youth charged with a peace disturbance had put up such a fight against five heavyweights of the Police Department as to justify the beating the boy got. As a result of his indignant protest at the brutal disfigurement of the boy, Chief of Police Gerk has ordered an investigation by one of his inspectors into this case and reports of others in the eighth district.

No civilized community can tolerate such a medieval practice as police beatings, and Judge Rosecan is entitled to the gratitude of the people of St. Louis for expressing what is felt about them.

CHICAGO'S "I WILT."

Chicago pleading poverty is out of character. Her reputed shortcomings are those of great and sudden riches—graft, racketeering, super-gangsterism, waste, profligacy. The country wondered how that town ever took up again with Thompson, but, on second thought, it was acknowledged that if any city could afford Big Bill, Chicago was it.

Apparently, though, Chicago feels poor. The City Council, terrified by debts said to amount to $270,000,000, has lopped $5,000,000 off the budget, and in consequence an army of employes is demobilizing. Police Commissioner Russell has dismissed 473 policemen. This reduction will not bring the department within the budgetary provisions, but it is as drastic a cut as that official dares order. Incidentally we are told that Chicago's full police complement of 4500 is inadequate, and pointed comparisons are made with the larger forces of Philadelphia and New York.

Meantime the Chief of the Fire Department, instructed to discharge 235 men, has belligerently refused to obey the command, defending his insubordination on the ground of public safety.

One guesses that this retrenchment mood will quickly pass and that Chicago will resume her pace of leaping gazelle-like from miracle to miracle. Yet it must be recorded that, for one discouraged minute, under the burden of Big Bill's big bills, Chicago's "I Will" faded into "I Wilt."

ROYALTY TURNS TRAFFIC COP.

Monarchs nowadays exercise their divinely conferred powers by opening Parliaments with messages prepared by Premiers, reviewing armies with Chiefs of Staff at their elbow, launching battleships as Admirals bow to the cheers and laying cornerstones under the critical eye of builders. Limited monarchies and dictatorships have made Kings much more ornamental than useful, while those who have encountered revolution are neither. Alfonso of Spain tried to make himself useful the other day by leaping from the royal auto in the Prado at Madrid to direct traffic out of a tangle. Coachmen and chauffeurs obeyed the King's signals beautifully. He was filled with a proud glow at serving his country at last, and concluded that for getting prompt action on commands, traffic cops were mightier than Kings. Suddenly he became aware of another volunteer giving signals down the block, and who should it be but his dictator, Primo de Rivera. That turned a delightful informal function into something very like a Cabinet meeting.

Alfonso still has ambitions to become an automobile mechanic. It would be just his luck to go to work in a garage and next day find on it a newly painted sign reading: "Now Under Management of P. de Rivera, Prop. Wrecking Is Our Specialty. We Fix Flats."

OUT TO GET SENATOR NORRIS.

Regional Planning for St. Louis Area

Wider range than municipal codes needed as cities grow into outlying region, says City Plan Commission engineer; swifter transportation adds to population radius; future St. Louis zone likely to cover 2000 square miles; highway and park projects already launched in district; need of enlarging civic vision toward needs to come.

Harland Bartholomew in St. Louis Chamber of Commerce News.

MOST American cities are now growing in accordance with more or less definitely detailed city plans. More than 600 municipalities have organized city plan commissions, and in excess of 750 have passed zoning ordinances. Within the next 10 years most of these cities will have adopted official city plans, thus reducing the large number of mistakes and economic wastefulness which invariably result from undirected, piece-meal development. Most large cities, for example St. Louis, do not have their municipal boundaries sufficiently far-flung to embrace all growth so that city planning work may control new development on the outskirts as well as reshape the existing structure of the city.

The rapid growth of American cities has outdistanced all attempts to keep such growth within the bounds of a single political entity. If they are to avoid the same mistakes that have characterized past municipal area growth, and, are frankly desirous of planning now for a more efficient and more satisfactory future city, they must give consideration to the development of the region as well as to the development of each individual city. Growth no longer respects municipal boundaries.

The automobile has increased the radius of population movement from five miles, under old forms of transportation, particularly the street car, to a radius of at least 15 or 20 miles. Various forms of rapid transit may increase the effective radius of population dispersal anywhere from 20 to 50 miles. Since there is no single municipal authority capable of exercising jurisdiction within so large an area, the mistakes, the lost opportunities and the economic wastefulness within this new "enlarged city"—the region—are most likely to far surpass those same mistakes and losses that have heretofore characterized growth within cities. In other words, regional planning has been undertaken for the same reasons and with the same objectives as has city planning.

A regional plan will require many studies, such as the growth of population density and distribution, both past and present, as well as an estimate of future population dispersal and density based upon topographical characteristics, transportation facilities and zoning regulations. All transportation facilities—street and highway transit as well as railroad — are basically regional rather than local in character. Water supply, sewerage and drainage facilities cannot be considered exclusively local in character. One of the most important phases of regional planning is that having to do with large parks, public reservations and parkways. While local authorities may continue to acquire and maintain small local parks, populations of millions require numerous large recreational facilities far beyond the vision or the means of any local municipality.

The St. Louis region needs to be clearly defined and studied with the same degree of thoroughness as has the city plan of St. Louis. If we assume that the St. Louis region is to have a radius of approximately 25 miles (not an unreasonable assumption in view of the extent of development already taken place), it will embrace an area of very nearly 2000 square miles. Of course, not all of this area will be developed, but it is nevertheless important that developments which do take place within this region shall have some degree of co-ordination and unification. The City of St. Louis contains 62 square miles. Other cities, such as University City, Clayton, Maplewood, Webster, Kirkwood and East St. Louis, which now have city plans, have a total combined area with St. Louis of approximately 125 square miles. This means that at the present time there is very little planning control except for certain specialized purposes within the remaining 1875 square miles. Much of the area within the St. Louis region is as yet unincorporated, and unless one or more regional planning authorities, with a certain degree of jurisdiction over new development, can be created, there will be inevitable mistakes, unnecessary waste and lost opportunities.

The most extensive specialized forms of planning within the St. Louis region are the highway plans already prepared or being prepared by St. Louis County, Mo., and St. Clair County, Ill., which latter work has been under the jurisdiction of the late David O. Thomas. Mr. Thomas' untimely death is a great loss to the St. Louis metropolitan district. He was a most active advocate of regional planning and one of the pioneers in this field of activity, both in the metropolitan district and in the State of Illinois, where he was responsible for considerable recent legislation upon the subject.

The East St. Louis Park District is another example of far-sighted planning work of regional character and importance within a limited section of the region. In fact, this is the only example of regional park work which has yet taken place within the St. Louis area. The newly created drainage districts in St. Louis County are also instances of regional authorities created in accordance with natural physical characteristics rather than by arbitrary political boundaries.

It is thus seen that the St. Louis region is becoming conscious of these various problems which are common to the region as a whole rather than confining its interest to matters of concern only to each local municipality. A regional plan for the St. Louis district as now proposed will enlarge our vision to a point where all types of physical improvements can be judged upon a scale commensurate with future development. It will be of great assistance to local planning agencies and will undoubtedly stimulate ways and means of dealing with all problems of fundamental importance in developing the future metropolis in accordance with appropriate standards of unity, orderliness, economy and most desirable living conditions.

EXCEPT THE CHILDREN.

From the Arkansas Gazette.

IN the modern household practically everything is operated by switches except the children.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.

PEOPLE are turned away almost every Sunday at the Friends' meeting house on Irving street at Thirteenth—where the Hoovers worship. The capacity of the church is only 250. Hardly more than 50 persons could be found there before, but now that it is the church of the President it is necessary to go early to get a seat.

Quick to recognize the fact that the President was the drawing card, the Quaker elders took steps immediately to remove all savor of commercialism. The custom of passing the collection plate was abolished. The customary long periods of silence broken only by someone rising to address his fellows also was discarded. It was feared that someone might seize the opportunity of annoying the chief executive.

IN other respects, however, the President's church differs little from any other Quaker house of worship. No program of service or liturgy is followed. There is no choir. A piano accompanies the simple hymns that are suggested by members of the congregation. The conventional "amen" is omitted. The President's personal friend, Dr. Augustus Taber Murray, who came to Washington from Leland Stanford University, acts as the minister.

Dr. Murray is the mild, cordial sort of person one associates with the college professor type. Deeply studious, he has translated the Odyssey and the Iliad, the Antigone of Sophocles and the Anabasis of Xenophon. For two years he taught in the American school at Athens, and during the war was Food Administrator for California.

While he is modern in thought, yet he sacrifices none of his fundamentalism. He is convinced that the church must keep pace with scientific thought, still he is quick to assail any sensational statement that attempts to ridicule the traditional doctrines of Christianity.

DR. MURRAY has said that many people are leaving the churches because "They are determined not to be bound by the traditions of their fathers. They are seeking to work out problems in their own way."

But he will assure you that there is no less interest in religion.

"Indeed, the very religious controversy of the present is an indication that men have not lost interest in spiritual things," he says. "The militant fundamentalists have done the church irreparable harm. They have undoubtedly turned many away from the church altogether and disgusted intelligent people."

He characterizes anti-evolution laws as "thoroughly pernicious." He believes they belong to another age and civilization than ours.

"Religions must not be at war with science," he says. "It must follow truth wherever it leads. Scientific progress has not hurt the cause of religion. . . . There will be less emphasis on the miraculous in religion as time goes on. . . . Christ Himself did not place an over-emphasis on the [illegible] recorded in the Gospels."

Problems That Beset London Navy Conference

badly strained. Sentiment for more warships grew in Congress.

Trouble-makers in both nations thumbed noses across the sea. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur presented to Congress a 74-ship program. President Coolidge, referring to the Geneva fiasco, said that "we know now that no agreement can be reached which will be inconsistent with a considerable building program on our part." In his Armistice day speech of 1928, President Coolidge, at the same time that he commended the Kellogg-Briand pact, declared bluntly that "world standards of defense require us to have more cruisers." And in February, 1929, Congress passed the bill for the construction of 15 large-type cruisers and one airplane carrier, at a total cost of $274,000,000, all to be started before July 1, 1931.

Within a few months came a change of atmosphere. Herbert Hoover, an ardent peace lover, became President of the United States; Ramsay MacDonald, equally ardent in the same cause, returned to power in June, 1929, at the head of a Labor Government, succeeding the Tory Government with which President Coolidge had dealt.

Very soon the new Prime Minister and the new American Ambassador were engaged in parleys to iron out the naval differences between the English-speaking nations and pave the way for a general conference.

President Hoover gave fresh impetus to the disarmament movement by inspiring the congressional exposure of William B. Shearer's effort, while a paid agent of American shipbuilders, to wreck the Geneva conference of 1927.

Then came, in quick succession, the intimate talks between Hoover and MacDonald at the White House and the Rapidan camp; the joint call for the London conference and the conciliatory speech of the President last Armistice day.

Thus the stage has been set for another act in the drama of which Charles E. Hughes spoke the history-making prologue in 1921.

Hard Going Ahead of This Conference.

Favorable though the auspices created by the new spirit in Anglo-American relations, it must not be understood that the conference has an easy road to success. A keen observer of international events wrote recently that any considerable success can only be reached by "something like a miracle," and the same opinion is shared by many in the legations and embassies of Washington.

There are, however, certain factors which hold high promise of useful accomplishment. The most important of these is the preliminary understanding arrived at between Great Britain and the United States. It was agreed by both sides after the Geneva break-up that the lack of adequate diplomatic preparation had much to do with the result. On this occasion, there has been extensive preparation by all the five Powers concerned.

A second promising factor is the acceptance of the conference invitation by Italy and France, both of which stayed out of the Geneva meeting, and a third is the nonmilitary character of the American delegation. All seven of our representatives are civilians. In his speech before the Pilgrims' Society of London last June, Ambassador Dawes said the Geneva conference failed because the solution of its problems was left in the hands of Admirals.

Some of Problems Parley Must Solve.

It is impossible here to do more than outline a few of the problems that confront the negotiators; to name them all and tell their intricate ramifications would require a volume. Merely to set forth some of the outstanding questions is to show the difficulties that must be surmounted before an agreement can be reached.

There is, first, the trouble over cruisers between Great Britain and the United States. This is the least of the conference problems; if it were the only one there would be no need for a meeting with the other Powers. That it has reached this happy stage is due to the fireside diplomacy of Hoover and MacDonald. There is no longer any question as to parity between the two nations in all forms of auxiliary craft; how this parity shall be attained in cruisers is the point remaining to be completely settled.

An agreement has been tentatively reached that Great Britain shall be allowed a greater number of cruisers and a greater total tonnage than the United States, but that the United States shall have an excess in 10,000-ton vessels.

In this formula there is recognition of the different needs of the two nations. The tentative proposals contemplate 50 cruisers for Great Britain, with a tonnage of 339,000, as against 36 for the United States with a tonnage of 315,000.

While there is still some doubt as to the actual demands of the United States, it appears that the United States desires to maintain six more large cruisers than Great Britain, or 21 as against 15, whereas Great Britain would limit our superiority to three. If the British formula should prevail, the United States would have 18 large cruisers. This reduction from 21 to 18 would release 30,000 tons which Great Britain is willing should be utilized by the United States in smaller cruisers. Thus it appears that the United States and Great Britain are separated on the cruiser question only by three ships—a gap which it should not be difficult for the negotiators to bridge.

Hard Going Ahead of This Conference.

Favorable though the auspices created by the new spirit in Anglo-American relations, it must not be understood that the conference has an easy road to success. A keen observer of international events wrote recently that any considerable success can only be reached by "something like a miracle," and the same opinion is shared by many in the legations and embassies of Washington.

There are, however, certain factors which hold high promise of useful accomplishment. The most important of these is the preliminary understanding arrived at between Great Britain and the United States. It was agreed by both sides after the Geneva break-up that the lack of adequate diplomatic preparation had much to do with the result. On this occasion, there has been extensive preparation by all the five Powers concerned.

A second promising factor is the acceptance of the conference invitation by Italy and France, both of which stayed out of the Geneva meeting, and a third is the non-military character of the American delegation. All seven of our representatives are civilians. In his speech before the Pilgrims' Society of London last June, Ambassador Dawes said the Geneva conference failed because the solution of its problems was left in the hands of Admirals.

Some of Problems Parley Must Solve.

It is impossible here to do more than outline a few of the problems that confront the negotiators; to name them all and tell their intricate ramifications would require a volume. Merely to set forth some of the outstanding questions is to show the difficulties that must be surmounted before an agreement can be reached.

There is, first, the trouble over cruisers between Great Britain and the United States. This is the least of the conference problems; if it were the only one there would be no need for a meeting with the other Powers. That it has reached this happy stage is due to the fireside diplomacy of Hoover and MacDonald. There is no longer any question as to parity between the two nations in all forms of auxiliary craft; how this parity shall be attained in cruisers is the point remaining to be completely settled.

An agreement has been tentatively reached that Great Britain shall be allowed a greater number of cruisers and a greater total tonnage than the United States, but that the United States shall have an excess in 10,000-ton vessels.

In this formula there is recognition of the different needs of the two nations. The tentative proposals contemplate 50 cruisers for Great Britain, with a tonnage of 339,000, as against 36 for the United States with a tonnage of 315,000.

While there is still some doubt as to the actual demands of the United States, it appears that the United States desires to maintain six more large cruisers than Great Britain, or 21 as against 15, whereas Great Britain would limit our superiority to three. If the British formula should prevail, the United States would have 18 large cruisers. This reduction from 21 to 18 would release 30,000 tons which Great Britain is willing should be utilized by the United States in smaller cruisers. Thus it appears that the United States and Great Britain are separated on the cruiser question only by three ships—a gap which it should not be difficult for the negotiators to bridge.

18 More U. S. Cruisers in Parity With Britain.

Under the proposed settlement there would be a stabilization of British cruiser strength at approximately its present figure, while the United States, in order to attain parity, would have to build 18 new cruisers. This would be a net increase of three cruisers and 14,500 tons over the present American strength in cruisers built, building or authorized. The acceptance of such a formula would end the cruiser race between the two countries; it would not, however, bring about the actual reduction of armaments which the President has proclaimed as his goal.

A second difficulty in the way of an agreement at London is the Japanese demand for a 70 per cent ratio in auxiliary ships. She wishes, in other words, to have the 5-5-3 ratio which binds her with respect to capital ships modified to a 10-10-7 ratio with respect to other classes of vessels.

To what extent her delegates will press their claim remains to be seen, but opinion in Washington generally is that the Japanese will place no irremovable obstacles in the way of an ultimate agreement.

Much greater are the difficulties created by the French attitude. France is plainly on guard against the prospect, as she sees it, of an Anglo-American entente. She is against being limited to mathematical ratios in the construction of auxiliary vessels. At the Washington conference, she agreed to parity with Italy in capital ships, but she is unwilling, on account of her colonial interests, to accept such parity in other categories.

France, unlike Great Britain and the United States, is against the abolition of the submarine. She believes, moreover, that any agreements reached at London should be conditional upon their acceptance by the Disarmament Commission of the League of Nations.

Italy's demands are somewhat obscure. She stands, however, for parity with France in all categories, and supports the French position with respect to submarines.

The conference holds many possibilities. It seems fairly certain that all the powers will agree to another suspension of capital ship building. Unless this is done, replacements under the Washington treaty will start in 1931. Pessimistic observers maintain that suspension is the only tangible achievement likely to be produced by the conference, and they point out that the same result could be accomplished by an exchange of notes.

Another possibility which has been suggested is a sort of "Mediterranean Locarno," whereby France and Italy would have naval parity in the Mediterranean but France would be allowed to maintain additional naval strength in Atlantic or Asiatic waters. Great Britain, under such an arrangement, would guarantee that France's additional fleet should not enter the Mediterranean. Recent expressions in the British press have indicated the unwillingness of the Labor Government to assume a responsibility of this kind.

Three-Power Pact Deemed Possibility.

The possibility is foreseen that the United States, Great Britain and Japan, failing to secure a general agreement, will enter into a pact on their own account, with a contingent clause providing that if an outside power increases its navy, the parties to the pact may increase theirs in proportion.

Some British naval authorities have suggested that the whole question of naval disarmament be covered by a "gentlemen's agreement" rather than by treaties.

Almost anything may happen at London. The best guess is that the result will lie somewhere between failure and the complete realization of the Hoover-MacDonald aims. Any considerable success would pave the way for further disarmament; failure would deal a terrific blow to the disarmament cause and the related cause of world peace.

Home Building As It Was in Past

ful lawyer and Chief Justice of Chester, early in the seventeenth century. This room was probably built by him and used as a sort of study or council chamber and has been traditionally known as the Justice's Room.

Although probably not actually constructed before 1625, the treatment of the paneling is typical of the Elizabethan style which the conservation of the west country craftsmen followed well up to 1650. The stone fireplace retains a Tudor arch over which is a typical wood mantelpiece with arcaded panels separated by terminal figures. The dragon motifs used in the upper range of panels and forming a sort of frieze is a very usual one in west country work and may be found also in the wainscot chair in front of the window. The door with its carved panels and flanking pilasters is a very fine example. It is unfortunate that necessities of communication make it necessary to keep it always open.

The table with heavy bulbous legs, the two side chairs and the fine joint stool are all authentic pieces of the period and might actually have found a place in the room in its original setting. These pieces, as well as the paneling, show the use of carved ornaments, but inlay of colored woods was another important method well illustrated here in the paneled back of the wainscot armchair.

This method of inlay, or intarsia, originated in Italy, probably from Oriental sources. A superb and almost unique example of this work in England is the writing cabinet, formerly in the collection of Sir George Donaldson, shown in this room. This piece was probably made about 1550 either by a foreign worker in England or by a native craftsman closely following a foreign model. The structure is walnut faced with rosewood, in which the delicate sprays of gilly flowers are inlaid in vari-colored woods. The materials used were rare exotics at this time coming into the market in small quantities with the opening of communication with the Indies. Such a piece as this must, therefore, have been an exceedingly prized possession appealing keenly to the Elizabethan love of the curiously beautiful.

A portrait by Moro and various pieces of armor and metal work, not all of English make, but of this time, have been introduced to give so far as possible the actual aspect of a room of the period.

The Wingerworth Hall Room.

JAMES SMITH of Warwick, the builder architect of Wingerworth Hall, Derbyshire, from which this oak room was removed, was one of many craftsmen designers of the day who through the force of traditional method and the indirect leadership of trained designers were able to produce work of astonishing quality. Derbyshire is in a section of England noted for its richness in fine examples of English domestic architecture. Therefore, Wingerworth Hall is in a locality where a high standard of crafsmanship must have been maintained. The rich and spacious effect created by the large bolection panels standing well in front of their enframing stiles and rails is a characteristic of the simple dignity of the Wren style. The broad treatment of the ceiling enhanced by bands of bold modeling is carried out in the same feeling and contrasts markedly with the earlier Jacobean manner.

Instead of a carved overmantel we have a landscape by Claude Lorraine (gift of William K. Bixby), such as might have been brought home from his Italian travels by a gentleman of the time. The walnut furniture clearly shows the influence of late seventeenth century French design in the use of the cabriole leg and the finely carved detail. The bookcase top secretary with mirror doors is a splendid example of late Queen Anne workmanship as also the mirror and console table of wood and gilded plaster (gesso) on the opposite wall. Attention should also be called to the vigorous lines of the wing chair covered with old green damask and the remarkable settee with its original petit point cover. The chandelier is a fine signed original of brass made, as most fixtures of this sort, in Holland.

The Charlton House Room.

THIS notable room of pine paneling with the greater part of its furnishings was presented to the museum by Joseph Pulitzer as a memorial to his first wife, Elinor Wickham Pulitzer. It would be difficult to imagine a more beautiful or gracious tribute. Though taken from a famous Jacobean mansion not far from Greenwich, Kent, this room was undoubtedly a later addition built probably about 1725 or shortly after in the manner then current. It bears the earmarks of the style of James Gibbs, the most eminent pupil of Christopher Wren and architect of the famous St. Martin in the Fields, Trafalgar Square, London.

On entering the room it is clearly apparent that a greater elegance and lightness of design differentiates it from the Wren type in spite of the rather massive bookcase and fireplace which are the main features of the room.

The soft, golden tone of the pine sids, of course, in this effect but the recessed paneling and mouldings, marked in part by fine carving rather than bold profile, are the real reasons for it. The bookcase on the end wall to the left on entering is an unusual feature in a room evidently intended for general living purposes rather than a library. It is a very vigorous piece of design showing distinctly French influence, especially in the treatment of the carved ornament which is of superb quality.

Originally, of course, access to the room was had only by the two doors at the west end but museum purposes have made it necessary to cut a blind door through the paneling beside the bookcase.

In furnishing, effort has been made to make the room representative of what would have normally been found in a mid-eighteenth century interior of the type. Examples of all the styles from Queen Anne to Chippendale have been used but in the main mahogany is the dominant material. Attention is called particularly to the two fine shell-back, parcel gilt, George II side chairs on the window wall and an armchair and settee in the style of William Kent, the latter covered in old Genoese velvet according to the fashion of the period.

The gilded mirror between the doors is one of a pair of representative early eighteenth century pattern, while below is a rare marquetry writing table of distinctly continental type dating from about 1700. The paneling lends itself well to the showing of eighteenth century portraits, Romney, Raeburn and Reynolds being here represented in examples from the Charles Parsons Collection.

A pair of rock crystal chandeliers of the period indicates one means of artificial lighting, though in actuality these were probably supplemented by sconces and candlesticks. It is unfortunate that on account of fire risks and necessities of general lighting, it is impossible to rely on these old methods.

Oriental porcelains and enamels have been used as incidental ornaments since these were much in vogue for the purpose during the eighteenth century when importations of such things from China were made in considerable quantity. The rugs used are from the James F. Ballard collection.

The Kempshot House Room.

THIS remarkable addition to the series was made possible by the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Warner S. McCall. It represents the last phase of the eighteenth century in England when paneling had given place to ornamental plaster or wall paper and old carving to fine scale low relief modeling in the Adam manner.

The wall paper, almost unique of its kind, has a strong personal and historical interest as well. It was ordered by George IV, then Prince of Wales, for Lady Fitzherbert, who used it in her residence, Kempshot House, Basingstoke, where it remained until removed and set up in its present location. According to tradition, it was designed and in part painted by Pergolesi, an Italian decorator who was frequently employed by Robert Adam to execute the delicate Pompelian arabesques so frequently called for in his decorative schemes.

The borders of the panels and some of the repeated ornament were evidently made by a block print process but a large part of the varied and numerous details were touched in by hand. Considering the fragility of the material and the accidents of time, the series is in remarkable condition.

The Italian marble mantel, a splendid example of the Adam style, also came from the same house, but since the original door trims were not available, four others of the same period from an old house in Lincolnshire were acquired to complete the ensemble. The ornament on the doors, instead of being carved wood, is of composition applied to the wood ground in the regular method of the time. Ceiling and cornice were reproduced from original Adam designs adjusted to fit the necessities of installation.

Mahogany was considered too heavy and dark in tone to harmonize with the light pastel-like color then in vogue. Satinwood which lent itself to painted decoration and to the slender forms of the Hepplewhite and Sheraton styles came into favor. Several pieces of this material and in these styles have been used in the furnishing of this room. A glass chandelier with gilt brass ornaments, pieces of Wedgewood and other decorative adjuncts of the period complete the scheme.

On the other side of the entrance leading into the gallery of English furniture has been placed a fine hooded outside doorway in pine taken from a house in Bristol. Comparison with the woodwork in the Charlton Room will show it to be of about the same quality and date. This architectural detail is interesting apart from its beauty in that it is of a type common in English Georgian but seldom found in the derivative style of this country where the rigorous climate demanded a closed-in porch wherever possible.

The Pomponne Salon.

UPON stepping into the next room one is instantly struck with the radical difference in feeling and character between it and the preceding interiors. It is a difference greater than that of style, a change in point of view—of race. The treatment of the paneling and of the windows has a quality of line foreign to the mass and texture quality of the English rooms and in consequence a distinction of quite another kind.

This room was removed from what remained of the Hotel de Pomponne at the corner of the Rue d'Antin and the Rue des Petits Champs, Paris, and dates from the early years of the eighteenth century when the Louis XV style was maturing out of the tentative stages of the Regency. The design is a purely decorative conception devoid of any reliance upon classic forms for its structure save the conventional division into dado, upper wall and cornice.

Stability is given by a balance of vertical and horizontal lines relieved from monotony by curvilinear treatment of panel head and mirror frame which are enriched with carving in the solid wood of most exquisite delicacy. The heavy elaboration of the Regency style has been passed and the occasional over-exuberance of the Louis XV ornament carefully avoided. Though the designer is unknown, its architectural restraint recalls strongly the work of the younger Blondal.

The overdoor paintings set into the paneling formed part of the original scheme and are said to be the work of Charles Antoine Coypel. Originally the woodwork was probably painted, though many such rooms were left in the natural wood from the beginning. A few fine pieces of mid-eighteenth century French furniture have been used suitable to a small antechamber or salon. A superb console table carved with "singerie" motifs was found to fit into its proper position opposite the fireplace. Fire dogs, and sconces of ormolu, several armchairs, one covered with the original Beauvais tapestry as is also the settee, a fine rock crystal chandelier and a few pieces of oriental porcelain complete the room much as it might have been found in the time of Madame de Pompadour.

It is hoped that at some future date the Museum will be able to continue the exposition of the decorative arts in this way, completing that of France and passing forward and backward in time to other countries, our own included.

The City Art Museum feels very grateful to all those who have cooperated in the work of preparing these rooms for the enjoyment and profit of the people of St. Louis and especially to those whose public-spirited support made these five rooms possible. In this respect special acknowledgment is due to Mr. Louis La Beaume, vice president of the Board of Control, under whose immediate direction the rooms were obtained after months of search and negotiation. The work of installation was carried out also under his immediate supervision, to which he has given unstintedly of his time and energy.

LINDBERGH VETOES PROPOSAL FOR PUBLIC MEMORIAL TO HIM

"I Suppose That Ends the Matter," Says Mayor Miller After Receiving Telegram.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh yesterday sent the following telegram from Clovis, N. M., to Mayor Miller:

"In confirmation of our telephone conversation, I deeply appreciate the honor of your suggestion but I sincerely request that no movement be started toward the erection of a memorial to me."

"I suppose that ends the matter," commented Mayor Miller. The Mayor had proposed a popular movement for subscriptions toward a monument to Col. Lindbergh. The Colonel, passing through St. Louis with his wife on a trans-continental inspection trip told the Mayor Jan. 1 in a telephone conversation:

"I prefer to be known as the boy who flew the mail."

BYRD AND CAPT. M'KINLEY TO BE INVITED TO ST. LOUIS

Letters Being Carried to New Zealand by Wife of Expedition's Photographer.

Invitations to Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Commander, and Capt. Ashley McKinley, St. Louis, official photographer of the Byrd South Polar Expedition, to visit St. Louis on their return to the United States, are to be delivered to them personally by Mrs. McKinley on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. McKinley, who has been staying with friends in St. Louis during her husband's absence, left last week for New Zealand to rejoin the Captain, who accompanied Byrd on his flight over the South Pole.

She carried with her two letters, which the Chamber asked her to deliver to Admiral Byrd and Capt. McKinley.

PRIVATELY PRINTED BOOKS FROM GERMANY ON EXHIBIT

Hand-cut Type and Paper Used in Collection—Tradition Perpetuated.

A collection of 133 books privately printed in Germany was placed on exhibition yesterday at the City Art Museum. All of the books were printed with specially designed hand-cut type, and paper, binding and composition were selected with the idea of treating each book as an artistic unity.

The books are the product of a movement begun in Bremen 20 years ago to perpetuate the medieval of printing as an art. Exhibited with them are the originals of illustrations for "Book Trails," a series of books for children.

65 Years of Animal Life In Shop of Taxidermist

J. Kirk Keller Has Birthday Party Surrounded By His Mounted Specimens at 30A South Fourth Street.

Seventy-one years ago an event occurred that was destined to shape the course of the whole life of J. Kirk Keller, a 14-year-old boy who lived in his father's log house on a 1000-acre farm in Monroe County Mich.

The event was the arrival of a Government taxidermist. His presence was welcomed by the few homesteaders in Erie Township, for it meant a new face and new stories to beguile the lonely days of snowbound winters. But to Kirk Keller it meant the introduction to a profession that has been his life work.

On New Years' day, "J. Kirk Keller, taxidermist," as his neat sign reads at 30A South Fourth street, celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday, seated at a table lit by candles he made himself and surrounded by mounted birds and beasts representing some of the handicraft of 65 years, more than 40 of them in St. Louis.

Keller, although he wears glasses "for real close work" still practices his profession, which he says is vanishing because of stringent game laws and a lack of popular desire for mounted trophies. He completed recently preparing a pelican for a customer in Kirkwood and is working now on a pair of quail, shot in St. Louis County.

7000 in a Year.

Five years ago he and his assistants prepared six or seven thousand specimens in the course of a year but though the number has dwindled now to a few hundred his enthusiasm is as keen as it was on the day when he mounted his first bird, exclaiming to the Government taxidermist who sat near him in the light of a tallow candle, "see, I can do that, too."

Interrupted only by the Civil War, when he went to Toledo, O., and enlisted as a drummer boy in the Twenty-seventh Ohio Volunteers, Keller practiced his profession. He went to Chicago but came to St. Louis after his shop was destroyed in the famous fire of 1873.

Keller has had customers from England, France, Germany, Belgium and Canada, as well as all over this country, attracted by reports of his work which are repeated among the fraternity of those versed in the lore of nature. Animals have been sent him from all over the world.

Lions, tigers, deers, gazelle, moose, buffalo heads, catamounts, wild cats, bears and virtually every variety of domestic fish and fowl have been prepared by his skillful hands.

"There's nothing short of an elephant that I haven't mounted at one time or another," Keller said, "and I hope to keep right on working until my days on this earth are done."

Work Revives Interest in Life.

It was thought last year, when he was struck by an automobile that the old taxidermist's days were near their end, but when friends brought specimens to his bedside and told him that they should be mounted his interest revived and he took a new lease on life.

His largest single order was filled about five years ago, when he mounted 5000 specimens for a museum at Sharon, Pa. Unusual or "freak" specimens that he has prepared include eight-legged sheep, and two-headed calves.

Perhaps 500 specimens, some of them orders that were never called for, hang from the walls of his second-story shop and living quarters. In one corner is a pair of white Barbelt puppies; in another a white Arctic gull stares unwinkingly at a pair of coiled snakes from South America.

In one case is a big eagle, one wing outstretched.

"There's a reason for that wing being that way," Keller said, "for when I was a boy I shot an eagle, wounding it. I ran up and the bird hit me with its wing, knocking me to my knees. I was pretty badly scared but managed to smother it with my coat. I've never forgotten the way that wing looked and the first chance I got I mounted an eagle to represent the way that bird looked to me.

"Many eagles used to fly over my father's place. I've seen them carry young shoats away. The first real game I shot was an eagle."

Self-Taught Taxidermist.

Keller learned to shoot from Indians who lived nearby; but he learned the art of taxidermy himself, helped only by the books the Government scientist sent him when he returned to Washington.

"If I were to tell the details of my work I would give away a professional secret," Keller said, "but it is well to note that the actual mounting of the subject is the easiest part. It is the preservation that counts."

Keller, who has his own method of treating his specimens, exhibited a wild cat, shot more than 50 years ago. Its snarl was as realistic as it must have been then.

To Keller, each speciman in his shop tells a story of other days and other ways, of a time when bisons roamed the plains and when wild animals were to be shot on what are now staid residential streets in St. Louis.

St. Louis itself hasn't changed much to him in the 40 odd years he has been here for he has resided always in the old business district, first at 304 Olive street and in his present quarters for the past 16 years. He used to take regular hunting trips but now he says "I'm afraid my legs are too fragile—but I can draw as fine a bead as ever."

Six candle stubs adhere to six prongs of a mighty deer's head, some of the 85 he made for his New Year's birthday party, his hands shaping them with the same cunning of years gone by when he studied by candlelight and by day learned the secrets of the wild folk who inhabited the woods and streams.

Can't Rely on Pacts for Peace, Says Mussolini

troublesome problem of reparations would receive its greatest impetus towards solution, I look with pleasure at what has been accomplished and the progress gained towards the general stability of Europe. For Europe, 1930 will continue the upward trend of complete, economical and political rehabilitation. Much was done in 1929 with the formulation of the Young plan and the partial evacuation of the Rhineland. Though these questions are still being discussed, 1930 should see the final settlement of these vexatious post-war problems. Europe has progressed and is continuing to reestablish itself on a firm economic basis and this year will mark the second stage of European stabilization.

Politically, there is no great preoccupation for the immediate future. There are still some odds and ends to be smoothed over and all of them should meet successful solution in the New Year. France and Italy seem to be on the way to compose their difficulties, and we are full of hope that 1930 will mark a period of practical progress in the relations of the two countries.

The relations of the Balkans countries are still somewhat of an interrogation mark to world peace. One could still repeat the time-honored and ever truthful old phrase that they are the "powder magazine of Europe." Even one of those little border incidents—which if kept under proper control die without having caused much of a ripple—could still precipitate a storm should a too sanguine or lazy drowsiness keep the greater powers blind to their real potentiality for harm. Or worse still, if the Balkan countries were encouraged in a frivolous though criminal spirit of mischief making, we could not foresee where it would all end. It is the duty of all wise governments to assist them in setting their internal affairs in order. Instead of engaging in quarrels with their neighbors, each one is so harassed with internal strife that all their efforts are needed for internal reconstruction, and 1930 ought to see them quietly endeavoring to consolidate their domestic affairs.

From present indications much will be said about the proposed United States of Europe in 1930. This is no new idea but efforts are apparent in certain quarters to push the idea, not perhaps so much for the promoting of a political accord but rather at arriving at some economic adjustment.

Europe is composed of so many heterogenous elements that an agreement even on an economic basis would be difficult. Economic claims clash with too much frequency. Markets are wanted by all but no one is anxious that the market which he particularly regards as his own should be made the common property of all. The whole network of economic lines is endless and complicated and jealously does each value his own particular trade and commerce before risking it in the common lot of all.

Europe will be at peace during 1930, but when we set our eyes toward the east, we cannot see with such clearness, for unrest is threatening. With Russia working through interminable channels of propaganda with provocative tactics, the Orient does not seem to lie reposeful and calm. China, India, Afghanistan, have all their periods of excess. Perhaps therein are the seeds from which may sprout a new world of conflicts in the distant future.

The cause of conflict lies in the clash of interests. Small may be the incident which starts a muster to defend or enforce these interests. While these clashes are bound to occur in this uneven world, the year 1930 should successfully pass from beginning to the end without having perturbed the present equilibrium. Too much optimism may represent a danger. Reasonable prudence is the beginning of wisdom, and by keeping our eyes open and our minds on the alert we may hope that the new year will create new foundations for a peaceful outlook leading to future prosperity.

Conference of Engineers Is Called by Radio Board

Development of Aerial System for Stations to Lessen Interference to Be Discussed—WTMJ Protests Its Service Is Ruined—Indiana Broadcasters in Fight.

Possibility of developing an antenna system for stations that will increase the service range to listeners near the transmitter and decrease iterference at a distance with other stations will be discussed at a radio engineering conference called by the Federal Radio Commission to meet in Washington on Jan. 17.

"The purpose of the conference," says Capt. Guy Hill, acting chief engineer of the commission, "is to see if the competent and experienced engineers in broadcasting can suggest methods to the commission that may be worked out to eliminate some of the present troubles.

"These troubles are mainly attributable to excessive number of stations in certain localities, and to the fact that many stations cause severe interference at great distances beyond their service range.

"Under present conditions, the number of stations now operating (approximately 600) greatly overtaxes the 90 available channels. Little can be done to better conditions, unless definite improvement in technique is developed or some stations are eliminated."

Among proposals that will be discussed at the conference will be Synchronization, increase of the number of cleared channels and reduction of the number of cleared channels.

A hearing has been ordered by the Federal Radio Commission on Jan. 22 on the petition of WFBM, Indianapolis, Ind., for a 50,000-watt construction permit and a change from 1230kc. to full time on the 1160kc. cleared channel now shared by WOWO, Fort Wayne, Ind., and WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va.

At the same time a hearing is scheduled on WOWO's request for full time on the 1160kc. wave length and increase of power to 50,000 watts.

WTMJ, Milwaukee, Wis., has filed a brief with the commission protesting against interference on its 620kc. channel, and also requests an increase in power from 2500 watts daytime and 1000 at night to 5000 watts both day and night.

WTMJ asserts that its service area has been destroyed by interference from WFLA-WSUN, Clearwater, Fla., which the commission recently placed on its wave, and by increase of power for WLBZ, a Maine station, from 250 to 500 watts. The main basis for protest is that the changes were ordered without giving WTMJ a chance to be heard. The point involved is the power of the commission to take such action without an advance hearing for the station or stations affected.

WAVE LENGTHS of St. Louis stations contrasted with that of 5SW, at Chelmsford, England, from which come the short wave broadcasts that are picked up by receivers at Riverhead, L. I., and then rebroadcast over chains of stations. Each KSD wave, as illustrated above, is 545 meters (approximately 1788 feet) long, and the completion of the two halves of the wave makes a cycle. One thousand cycles make a kilocycle. KSD sends out 550 kilocycles or 550,000 cycles a second.

How a Program Is Rebroadcast

Linking of 2LO, London, and KSD, by Use of Short Waves, From 5SW, Explained.

SO numerous have been inquiries as to what takes place when a radio program from England is rebroadcast through use of short waves that W. F. Ludgate, KSD engineer-director, has prepared the following explanation:

In a studio of 2LO, the great London station, a performer takes his position before a microphone. As he speaks into the microphone the air vibrations set up by his voice are converted to ordinary telephone current variations, which travel over two sets of wires—to the 2LO transmitter and to the transmitter of 5SW, the short wave station at Chelmsford, not far from London.

The 2LO transmitter converts the telephone currents into high frequency radio waves suited to be picked up by long wave receivers in England and on the Continent. The 5SW transmitter converts them into the same kind of high frequency waves, but the length of the 5SW waves is much shorter—only 24.5 meters—and they travel farther with greater power than do the longer high frequency waves.

At Riverhead, L. I., about 100 miles east of New York City, is a receiving station operated by the Radio Corporation of America. It has receivers designed to pick up broadcasts from 5SW with a special aerial system. The waves from 5SW are tuned in at the Riverhead station, changed back into ordinary telephone currents, and sent over wires to the National Broadcasting Co. building, 711 Fifth avenue, New York. There they are sent to the WEAF or WJZ transmitter to be changed back into high frequency waves and be broadcast, and also go over telephone wires to Pittsburg, Chicago, St. Louis, Denver, Los Angeles and other cities in which are stations hooked up in the chain. At intervals of some 200 miles on these land wires are "repeater" stations which "boost" the power of the currents.

Instantaneously the currents reach the "Beaumont" long distance telephone station in St. Louis. There they are amplified again and then sent over wires to the transmitter of KSD, which changes them again and shoots them out from its antenna in the form of radio waves of a high frequency of 550 kilocycles (500,000 cycles) and a length of 545 meters.

These waves are picked up by the aerial at a listener's home, are amplified by the radio frequency stages of the receiver, are rectified by the detector stage into audio currents and are amplified by the audio stages until they are powerful enough to actuate the speaker, which, in turn, makes the words of the performer in the London studio audible in the home.

The words of the performer in the London studio reach the ears of listeners in this country in about one-fiftieth of a second after they are spoken into the microphone. The speed of radio waves is the same as that of light waves—186,000 miles per second. In fact, they are heard in American homes virtually as they strike on the ears of persons in the London studio, for the speed of radio waves is approximately 900,000 times that of sound waves.

Incidentally, the frequency of a radio station, which really means the number of cycles a second, is calculated as follows: The speed of radio waves is 300,000,000 meters a second. Dividing the speed by the wave length gives the frequency. As KSD's wave length is 545.1 meters (1788 feet), dividing 300,000,000 by 545.1 gives its frequency, which is 550,000 cycles or 550 kilocycles.

Soviet Station Using 60,000 Watts Power On 938 Meter Channel

A Soviet station with a capacity of 100,000 watts has been put into operation on 938 meters (320kc) but is using only 60,000 watts. At that, the Russian station is the most powerful in regular operation.

The channel it is using is in the band reserved for aeronautical service, but the Soviet Government was not a party to the international treaty of 1927 and, so, is disregarding it.

De Gogorza Will Sing Jan. 16 in RCA-Victor Hour

Three Spanish artists—Emilio de Gogorza, really famous as a baritone; Countess Medalogo Albani, the NBC soprano, and Andres Segovia, who has made guitar playing a fine art—are to take part in the RCA-Victor Hour over KSD at 9 o'clock Thursday evening of next week, Jan. 16.

Next Thursday night's RCA-Victor program will bring an hour reviewing light opera from the days of Offenback to the present. Three conductors—Nat Shilkret, Rosario Bourdon and Leonard Joy—and soloists will have parts.

It is announced that these broadcasts will continue on the high standards set with the inauguration of the new series Thanksgiving day, when John McCormack was the featured artist. Since that time Mary Garden, Elizabeth Rethberg, Marian Telva, Hulda Lashanska, Harold Bauer and Giacomo Lauri-Volpi have been heard.

Among other artists who may be heard are Amelia Galli-Curci, Lucrezia Bori, Rosa Ponselle, Marie Jeritza, Nine Koshetz, Richard Crooks, Lawrence Tibbett, Giuseppe De Luca, Beniamino Gigli, Ezio Pianna, Mischa Elman and many others.

In the list of special programs under consideration are an All-Russian program, in which two famous Russian musicians will be heard; an all-Wagner evening, an hour called "The Last Word in Jazz," during which the compositions of several young American composers will be played, and a group of programs featuring Victor's popular entertainers and orchestras. In one program, the winning composition in Victor's $25,000 prize competition for a new musical work in symphonic form will be announced and put on the air.

The best wire to use for an aerial for long service under all weather conditions, and one that will not corrode, is a solid or a stranded enamel-covered wire.

Phil Cook 'Whole Show' in New Daily Broadcast Feature

Phil Cook, noted for his versatility as a radio entertainer, is being featured as "The Aunt Jemima Man" in a new series of daily broadcasts that began last Wednesday. The feature goes on the air twice a day, first at 7 a. m. over four Eastern stations and again at 8 a. m. over KWK, WLW, WLS, WREN and KFAB.

Cook, who is the author of the Broadway musical comedy successes, "Molly Darling," "Plain Jane" and "When You Smile," is to write his own songs and dialogue for his sketch of songs, burlesque and news comment.

This "one-man-show" has become known to the radio audience as a comedian, composer, humorist and Ukulele player, not to mention characterizations of the Negro and the Chinese. Before his broadcasting days, Cook was a commercial artist for an advertising agency.

The program is sponsored by the Quaker Oats Co. of St. Joseph, Mo.

St. Louis Woman On Second Day Of Florida Tour

Traverses Battle Scenes of Civil War, Crossing Tennessee.

THIS is the second of a series of four stories by Mrs. Kirksey describing her tour from St. Louis to Florida, with her two children. It was written at Sewanee, Tenn., and covers the second day of the trip. The third story will be published next Sunday.

By HELEN KIRKSEY.

AFTER several light skirmishes around Nashville, Tenn., and a great battle near Murfreesboro, we are "tenting" tonight "behind the lines," way up in the Cumberland Mountains. Just which side of the lines we are on has not been settled yet between the two "scouts" I have been trailing with all day, but with such ease of travel the actual hardships of war are as difficult to realize as the fact that so much time and feeling have passed since my own childhood that there would be any question in the mind of a youngster as to which side of the Civil War he is fighting. In my childhood days we took sides only on convictions that were strong enough to battle about, if we were playing "1862," and if we went in for modern warfare, only the boys and girls who always got the short end of everything, anyhow, would be Spaniards in "the taking of San Juan Hill."

Our "tent" is a charming inn at Sewannee and we are in the midst of the very modern University of the South, but so persistently have we dodged enemy camps and cannonballs all afternoon that I am sure the children's dreams will be all blue and gray tonight.

We have had a glorious day. As I wrote last night, we drove to Henderson, Ky., yesterday from St. Louis, going out of East St. Louis on U. S. Route 50 to Vincennes, where we turned south of U. S. 41. We will follow 41 all the way to Ocala, Fla., and there decide whether to go to the east coast or west coast of Florida.

In Kentucky, driving from Henderson to Hopkinsville this morning recalled, by contrast, a trip I made this way three years ago. It is coal mining country and more attractive viewed from the fine hard roads of today than those of mud and refuse from mines, such as I once drove over. A few miles on a coal road makes one look like an end man in a minstrel, and about as comfortable. But that is gone, and the all-weather roads along there now make towns with names like Morton's Gap seem quite incongruous.

Between Hopkinsville, or to be familiar, Hoptown, and Clarksville the tobacco barns on every farm brought the realization that we were drifting into Dixie. In the autumn the tobacco grown in the surrounding fields is cut, bunched and hung in these barns to be cured for market by smoke. The farm houses themselves begin to look southern, and the wide galleries and long tree-lined drives leading to them from the road suggest a mint bed near the kitchen for "Ole Marse."

Less than three years ago, before the completion of the present excellent roads, when I drove over that route, we came to a place in the highway that was under water, and we were invited by painted signs to choose between being pulled through free by State mules or "Ride Dry for 50 Cents." Having just accomplished a desperate detour of mud so deep that it was patrolled by boys on horses to fetch the Negro and pair of State mules stationed nearest at hand in case a car was hopelessly stuck, we decided not only to ride dry at any cost but to see all the novelties the route offered.

The dry way was through a farm yard and over a field on wooden tracks not much wider than a tire, with one narrow guard rail. The tracks had been laid on dried corn stalks to keep them from sinking

Federal-Aid Bill Is Expected to Get Favorable Vote

Approval of Both Houses of Congress Looked for This Week.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. — Congress will return from the holiday recess Monday ready to offer its solution to some of the major problems of motordom. Passage of the bill providing increased funds for Federal-aid is expected shortly after the House resumes its sessions. Approval of the measure also is looked for in the Senate, with the probability that the proposal to increase the annual appropriation by two-thirds will be a law within the next few months.

The Dowell bill is the Federal-aid bill upon which the House will be called upon to act. It calls for an additional $50,000,000 for the next fiscal year and $125,000,000 as the annual appropriation for the succeeding years 1932 and 1933. The addition for the next fiscal year brings the total amount for that period to $125,000,000, so that the measure actually provides that sum to finance the Federal-aid program during the next three years, instead of the $75,000,000 which has been the annual contribution of the Government since 1922.

Hearings have been held on the Dowell bill by the House and a favorable report was made by the committee on roads. Senator Phipps of Colorado, is sponsoring a similar measure in the Senate.

The proposal to increase Federal-aid appropriations has been given the added significance of being a measure of assistance to the farmer. It has received the support of farm organizations on the ground that it will provide further facilities in the way of farm to market roads.

Death Valley, Once Feared by Travellers, Now Easily Reached

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 4.—As recently as three or four years ago a trip to Death Valley constituted a rugged adventure, and comparatively few motorists visited the gigantic backdoor wonderland because roads into the region were not inviting.

Three years ago winter resorts invaded the valley. Road improvements were undertaken.

Two years ago one could motor to Death Valley in fair comfort and enjoy good accommodations.

One year ago the accommodations had progressed to the status of excellent, with corresponding progress in the condition of the main road.

This winter, ease of travel, as respects the main route to Death Valley, is pronounced, while the accommodations are all that any travelers could possibly desire.

Nor have the operators of this modern desert caravansary overlooked the fact that the delightful desert air has a way of building up healthy appetites, especially if one motors and hikes about visiting the nearby points of interest.

New York Auto Show Opens With 46 Cars Displayed

More New Models Than at Any Previous Showing in January.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—With 46 makes of passenger cars, including two importations from Europe, and 180 accessory and shop equipment exhibits, the thirtieth annual New York automobile show got under way at the Grand Central Palace this evening. It was characterized by the presentation of perhaps more new yearly models than have ever before been shown at this time of the year.

New straight eights, one V-type eight and a big V-type 16-cylinder car, were outstanding. In addition, radical changes in exterior appearances marked many lines.

The show will close next Saturday night and reopen in Chicago Jan. 25 to run for another week.

The following makes of complete cars and chassis are on display:

Auburn, Black Hawk, Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Chrysler, Cord, Cunningham, De Soto, Dodge Brothers, duPont, Durant, Elcar, Erskine, Essex, Franklin, Gardner, Graham-Paige, Hudson, Hupmobile, Jordan, Kissel, La Salle, Lincoln, Marmon, Marquette, Nash, Oakland, Oldsmobile, Packard, Peerless, Pierce-Arrow, Plymouth, Pontiac, Reo, Roosevelt, Ruxton, Studebaker, Stutz, Viking, Whippet, Willys-Knight, Windsor White Prince (Moon). Foreign cars: Mercedes-Benz and Voisin. Taxicabs, Checker and Yellow.

On all sides one finds what pleases the eye. Considered externally, the cars of 1930 have beauty as their keynote. While a glance at some of the highly polished chassis reveals engines and working units which are extremely pleasing, and quite the "poetry of motion," without exception, the manufacturers in planning their new models have made an effort to make them more beautiful in various ways. A number evidently assume that the public takes for granted the fact that cars generally have plenty of power and speed. It is no longer necessary to stress such points as pickup, hill climbing prowess, flexibility, et cetera. With the new type of light, high-speed motors, especially the sixes and eights, the buyer no longer worries about getting plenty of reserve power. In endeavoring to apply art to industry more intensively, the automobile designers have made considerable progress. Having ascertained that greater comfort and more rakish appearance can be obtained by hanging the body lower, cars will continue to be hung low—some lower than ever before. This happens to be true of the new front-wheel drive designs offered this season.

In lowering the body, better proportions have been obtainable in the matter of relation between wheels, hood, radiator, fenders, et cetera. One characteristic of 1930 certainly is the excellent appearance of the cars—the entire chassis and body appearing to be a unit rather than a series of units stuck together. As for the lines and masses entering into the design, style creators have been most suc-

Auto Output Of 5,651,000 Units in 1929 Sets Record

Compares with 4,601,130 Units in 1928; World Automobile Registration in 1929 Reached Total of 34,700,000 of Which 76 Per Cent Were in United States.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The automobile industry in 1929 produced 5,651,000 cars and trucks, having a wholesale value of $3,483,900,000, according to preliminary figures announced today by Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

That is the largest production ever achieved in a single year, and compares with a total production of 4,601,130 units in 1928 with a wholesale value of $3,162,798,880.

World registration of motor vehicles at the close of 1929 reached 34,700,000, of which 26,400,000, or 76 per cent, were registered in the United States.

The world registration in 1928 was 31,778,203, of which 24,493,124 were registered within the United States.

The motorist last year paid an average of $812 for his car, according to Mr. Reeves' figures.

In addition to the unprecedented production of new cars, the industry manufactured parts and accessories for replacements as well as service equipment having a wholesale value of $920,000,000 and turned out rubber tires for replacement valued at $600,000,000.

The motoring public, according to the statistics, paid a total of $925,000,000 in taxes on motor vehicles. Included in the levy was $415,000,000 on gasoline consumption. In 1928 the total taxation amounted to $807,887,967, including $304,871,766 on gasoline consumption.

A new high mark also was established in export business in 1929, Reeves reports. His figures show that 1,015,000 American-made motor vehicles were sold outside the United States last year and they, with parts an dtires, had a value of $757,400,000. Only 710 vehicles were imported in 1929.

In 1928, 825,113 units were exported, including those assembled abroad of American-made parts, with parts and tires, had a value of total value of $578,565,249.

The automobile industry and the motoring public used 297,000,000 barrels of gasoline for the year.

Highway improvement work in 1929 brought the total of surfaced highway in the United States to 660,000 miles. The total miles of highway of all kinds aggregate 3,016,281.

The industry gave employment to 4,300,000 persons either directly or in allied lines.

Tour to St. Louis

One of the three tours for delegates to the Sixth International Road Congress next October, will have St. Louis as its objective. Delegates will go by train to St. Paul and Minneapolis and leave by motor bus to visit, besides St. Louis, Duluth, Minn.; Des Moines, Waterloo, and Davenport, Ia.; Springfield and Joliet, Ill.; South Bend, Ind.; Toledo, O.; ending at Detroit. Another delegations wil go to Florida and a third to New England. The purpose is to take the delegates to those sections of the country whose climatic conditions will closely parallel those in their own lands.

Cabins for Tourists

WASHINGTON.—Lieutenant-Colonel U. S. Grant III is the local General of a vast army of tourists, always charging here to see the sights. It's Grant's duty to take care of those who do not plan to patronize the hotels. He has had a little colony of cabins erected at the tourist camp along the Potomac and has started preparations to erect more.

133-h. p. 'Eight' Is Hupmobile's Latest Offering

On 137-Inch Wheelbase, It Also Affords Custom Body Styles.

Entering 1930 with two of the most successful models it has ever produced, a 70-horsepower six in the $1000 group and a 100-horsepower eight in the medium priced field—the Hupp Motor Car Corporation announces.

A surprise in the form of another new eight—one of the most powerful production-built cars in America. The first announcement was made at the opening of the New York automobile show yesterday. Hupmobile has usually displayed but two complete lines of cars.

Now, with the superpowered eight, the products of the Hupp Corporation include four chassis lengths, ranging in list price from $985 upward. Of these cars, four body types are found in the "S" six series, six in the "C" eight series, five in the new big eight and two in the model "U" just announced.

This newest Hupmobile, known as the model "H," mechanically boasts of several innovations and refinements which are new to American motorists.

The cars are on display here by the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., St. Louis distributer.

The engine is entirely new. Its developed brake horsepower is 133. New cylinder head design and construction provide maximum operating efficiency from the various grades of fuel now on the market.

This new engine carries a down-draft carburetor. This is said to be the first time that down-draft carburetion has been applied to a straight eight engine and the first time that double down-draft carburetion has been applied to any engine.

This new carburetor enlists the aid of gravity to improve engine performance and obtains the most complete and equal distribution of fuel yet developed. There is no "starving" of cylinders. The carburetor is on the top of the engine.

Another advance step in engineering practice incorporated in the new car is that of radiator-cooled oil.

The new Hupmobile eight is the first American car to introduce this practice. Radiator oil cooling systems represent the newest mechanical departures and refinements in some of Europe's most costly motor cars.

In the new straight eight a section of the left side of the radiator core is partitioned off exclusively to reduce the temperature of the engine lubricant. Inasmuch as the temperatures of engine, engine lubricant and water are interdependent, the devotion of this radiator to cooling of the engine's oil supply reduces the necessity for large and bulky water radiator space. Hence the radiator of the new Hupmobile eight is of trim appearance lending itself completely to the modern styling of this new car.

The bodies of the new Hupmobile eight are exceptionally large and roomy. The new series is longer than the Hupmobile eight introduced last October, having an overall length of 175 inches.

The smartly peaked roof coping lends a new note in frontal appearance. A distinctive median line divides the coach work into separate planes. This median line is first noted in the smart French roof coping. In the rear of the bodies it is carried out in even greater prominence. From the top center point throughout the rear panel it is noted. Even the lower edges of the windshield and rear window carry out this new line effect. The windshield frames are chromium plated. Two windshield wipers are standard on all models.

On the same 137-inch wheel base is the model U, powered by the 133-horsepower motor, the only difference being that the model U cars are for seven passengers. Two new bodies, entirely custom built by the Baker Raulang Co., comprise the new series—the seven-passenger sedan and the sedan-limousine.

in the sea of mud, and the enterprising farmer had all of his family out to handle the traffic. Every car was conveyed across by one who stood on the running board to keep it in the straight and narrow, and from the number of cars at both ends waiting their turn it looked like he would soon be able to make the last payment on the red plush parlor set.

All along the way are billboards advertising "loose floors" in Clarksville. Kay said it reminded her of that song "I've Got a Ceiling That's Falling" or somp'n, but you don't have to watch your step in Clarksville. Loose floors are the show rooms for tobacco as it comes from the barns, and buyers from all over the world do their shopping there. Clarksville is a little city of beautiful homes, fine old ones and many imposing new ones. Our route took us past a country club, which by its size bespoke considerable social life.

Then we swung over to Springfield and into Nashville through hills that until later in the day seemed like mountains — hills where myriads of white violets are waiting for Spring.

You might be lucky and reach Nashville on a bright shining day. I never have in the winter time and I am always reminded of downtown St. Louis. But it is a city well worth stopping to see. We drove around the Capitol and the World War Memorial, which are in the business section, and out to a park where there is a replica of the Parthenon, said to be the most similar to it in the world. Athens in all her glory! The building is intended to be an art museum when the interior is completed.

Vanderbilt University is in Nashville—the campus is extensive and impressive—and Fisk University, too, where the Negro jubilee quartette made "All o' God's Chillun," "Little David" and other spirituals.

If you want to live an hour in the past drive out to the Hermitage, the home of Andrew Jackson. Even the little church he built near the house for Mrs. Jackson is there just as it was originally built and used. The entire place is maintained by a historical society in Nashville, and open to the public.

We began the Civil War as soon as we left Nashville on the Murfreesboro Pike. The going was difficult only in the minds of Tom and Kay, who were, of course, in danger of capture any minute, but the concrete road belies the name "Pike." Tom, the History Hound, told us that at Murfreesboro, 40 miles below Nashville, the Federals won a battle in which the total losses to both sides were nearly 25,000. You may not be the kind of tourist who wants statistics as you go but it certainly makes a difference in your impressions of a locality when you know that 80,000 men fought for three days for possession of it.

And so we came to Monteagle, a mountain summer resort, where we turned right, instead of following No. 41 to Chattanooga, and drove across the mountain top to this very individualistic community. Formerly Swannee was on the main highway, but you will be well repaid for the 10 or 12 extra miles over here and back to 41. I think that all of the university buildings and fraternity houses, and perhaps the homes of faculty members, too, are of the same material—Tennessee limestone—and in perfect accord with the surroundings. The university of the South is Sewannee, practically, and it is the only place I ever saw that always looks rose-colored to the naked eye. The scenery through the mountains is simply stupendous, and in places the altitude so great, by the sheer drops of the mountain sides, that I found myself cautioning myself, the pilot, "Keep her nose down and don't lose your flying speed." But the road is wide, the grade reasonable, and the going fine. We have added 280 miles today to our 250 yesterday, and I have not met an argument yet against women driving alone to Florida.

Tomorrow night we expect to be in the heart of Africa-Central Georgia, unless we tarry at Chattanooga or Atlanta. It is cold up here in the mountains tonight, but it is clear and—well Sewannee is just one of "those moments."

The NEW 1930 Series

Exhibited here this week and at New York Auto Show

The motor car Surprise of 1930! Values that excel all comparison! Prices that revise all automobile standards! Study the entire market, then take your pencil and figure for yourself how much more you must spend for any other car that offers you comparable wheelbase, power, room, strength, endurance, performance, and the last word in every motoring improvement and high-class advantage. Then DRIVE the Auburn, and there will be no doubt as to WHAT car offers the best investment.

AUBURN!

Values

120" Wheelbase SIX

Anyone paying less than $1000 for a car should inspect, compare and drive the new Series 6-85 four-door closed car. You are entitled to long wheelbase and a tremendously strong rigid frame, because they are the foundation of all automobile requirements. To skimp here is fatal to efficient, enduring performance. It cannot be glossed over with body attraction. The amazing value of this Auburn Six begins down deep with its rugged foundation, making possible a larger, uncramped car with ample head and leg room; a real, big luxurious automobile with fine car advantages. Bijur chassis lubrication, hydraulic shock absorbers, and hydraulic four-wheel brakes. Convenient payments.

100 h.p. Straight Eight
125" WHEELBASE

Here Auburn announces the most important automobile news in all the world today. Not superficial changes or "talking points", but a vast sweeping fundamental change in the re-establishment of values in the entire industry. Auburn makes its new Series 8-95 Straight Eights available to the vast army of motorists who have known Eights were far superior, and who wanted to own them. Now NO car buyer need be handicapped by a lesser car. This four-door Sport Sedan of 125-inch wheelbase for much less than many Sixes! Not an untried, hastily produced model, but perfected through five years of Auburn's Straight Eight leadership; a definite, tested, proven value. Double armor-plated frames, Bijur chassis lubrication. Hydraulic shock absorbers, and four-wheel hydraulic brakes. Finest mohair upholstery, luxura springs, Brewster non-glare windshield, and every refinement and improvement you expect in a strictly quality car. Its sturdiness and efficiency are the result of long experience, of constant improving and of added betterments, until today its worth rises far beyond the limits ever attained by any other comparable car. It is the climax of our policy of making Auburn's success retroactive to buyers.

130" WHEELBASE

Auburn has earned a reputation for doing the unusual—for doing what others say is impossible. In this manner, Auburn has convinced a rapidly growing number of people that they can have not only finer motoring in Auburn cars, but also that it is much better business to invest in Auburn cars. Never has this been more evident than with this new Series 125 four-door closed car of 130-inch wheelbase. In fact, this car is the most daring departure from contemporary practice that Auburn has ever made. It eclipses all others. For here is a value in size, strength, power, refinement and endurance, that only those accustomed to paying the highest prices have ever enjoyed. Now—luxuries, performance and distinction are offered in a car that makes its purchase an act of thrift. You probably will never need to call upon its maximum of reserve power. But it is always there, priceless in emergencies, and continually saving the motor from strain and undue depreciation. The frame, the strongest under any automobile, resembles a steel bridge in construction. It is double armor-plated, firmly rigid, preventing shimmy, vibration and body twists and strains. Lycoming is the unquestioned leader in Straight Eights, and this motor with its smooth flow of over-lapping power impulses is the utmost of Lycoming's attainments in reliable, durable and efficient performance. Drive it and you will be amazed. And of course this fine car has Bijur chassis lubrication, hydraulic shock absorbers, and four-wheel, internal expanding hydraulic brakes. The upholstery, the fittings and the finish of this Series are the very last word in quality and good taste. We caution you not to delay. Place your order at once. Every year Auburn has been oversold. The demand for this value will break all records.

Prices Reduced From $30 to $60 On Chevrolets

More Powerful Engine in 1930 Models, Priced at $495 Up, F. O. B.

Price reductions ranging from $30 to $60 are announced by the Chevrolet Motor Co., in connection with the presentation of the 1930 Chevrolet, which embodies many changes and refinements.

New and old prices follow: Roadster, $495, $525; phaeton, $495, $525; sport roadster, $525, $555; coach, $565, $595; coupe, $565, $595; sport coupe, $625, $685; club sedan, $625, $675, and sedan, $675, $695. In addition, there are these new prices, not shown in the old list: Sedan delivery, $595; light delivery chassis, $365; one and one-half ton chassis, $520, and one and one-half ton chassis with cab, $625.

The announcement comes at the close of Chevrolet's greatest year, which witnessed an output of 1,300,000 six-cylinder cars.

Features of the new line include added safety factors, greater beauty, improved riding qualities and better general performance, with added power and faster acceleration.

Fully enclosed brakes, giving protection against water and dirt, are of the internal expanding type, with two shoes in the front brakes and four in the rear. Tests are said to have shown the new brakes will stop a car traveling 30 miles an hour in 2.2 seconds within 48 feet.

Attractive new closed bodies, in a variety of colors, carry the Fisher stamp of craftmanship. Eight models, three of them new, comprise the line. Closed cars are the sedan, coach, coupe, sport coupe and club sedan. Open models are the roadster, sport roadster and phaeton. The new models are the sport coupe, sport roadster and club sedan.

The six-cylinder valve-in-head engine introduced a year ago after four years of research and development, has been further improved and refined. Since the introduction of the six a year ago, test cars have run up more than 1,000,000 miles of driving at the General Motors Proving Ground in the working out and the justifying of the improvements found in the 1930 car. All the resources of the General Motors Research Laboratories and the Chevrolet experimental laboratory were placed at the disposal of the Chevrolet engineering staff in this work.

Working with Chevrolet's chief engineer, were General Motors engineers and proving Ground engineers, with 18 Chevrolet engineers assisting in supervising the development and refinement of the improved six-cylinder motor.

The result of the efforts of this engineering talent is a smoother, quieter, more powerful motor. The new engine, fully enclosed, with a high compression non-detonating head, develops 50 horsepower.

The brake horsepower has been increased over the entire speed range. At 1000 revolutions per minute 24-5 horsepower is developed and the maximum of 50-horsepower is attained at 2600 revolutions per minute. This increase in power insures a marked improvement in acceleration and hill climbing ability. At normal driving speed the new engine develops many times the power required to drive the car. Specifically, the rear axle has been redesigned while the differential unit has been strengthened and its oiling system redesigned to insure long life and quiet operation.

Smoother operation of the engine and longer life are assured through the use of light weight pistons. Steel-backed crankshaft bearings have been adopted because they are more durable.

The oil pump has been increased in capacity and improved in efficiency, while the carburetor has been improved in respect to both its accelerating pump and jet size. The accelerating pump has been increased in length and reduced in diameter. This improvement also helps the acceleration performance by increasing the duration of the spray.

The 48-pound crankshaft has been retained and a further contribution to smoother engine operation, improved distribution and increased economy has been made by the new intake and exhaust manifolds of the heated T design.

The air cleaner has been improved by reversing the position of the intake slots and providing for a less restricted flow of air. With the intake slots located at a greater distance from the exhaust manifold, the air entering the carburetor is much cooler and a greater amount of air can be handled in the same space because of its greater density. These combined refinements result in better engine performance by insuring delivery of clean, cool air to the carburetor in larger quantities.

The clutch on the new car has been improved by the adoption of an integral disc, made in one piece of high carbon steel. This will give the 1930 cars smoother and easier clutch action, with quieter operation and longer service, it is said.

Easier riding and greater quietness are accomplished through a new type of self-adjusting spring shackle in which bushings in the spring eyes and brackets are eliminated, thus doing away with wear. Hardened and ground tubular pins, with tapered ends, are pressed into the springs and brackets while oil forced into them forms a large reservoir, making frequent lubrication unnecessary.

Another improvement bringing about easier riding, is found in the Delco-Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers in the form of a rigid link rod instead of a strap connecting the operating arms with the chassis and insuring positive transmission of all rebound movements.

A new type of gasoline gauge of unusual accuracy is found on the new Chevrolet. A double float in the tank insures correct reading of this gauge regardless of the position of the car.

The position of the steering wheel in relation to the seat has been changed, making the driver's position much more comfortable. The horn button in the center of the wheel has been made more accessible and easier to operate by increasing the height of the crown and improving the design of the rubber bellows.

Appearance and riding qualities of the car have been improved through a change in the tire size from 4.50-20 to 4.75-19. The rim diameter has been reduced one inch.

Disc wheels are provided as standard equipment on all models except the sport roadster and sport coupe. The wire wheels on these models are equipped with drop center rims and are demountable at the hub. The large wire wheel hubcaps are chromium plated and of distinctive design.

The instrument panel design and arrangement this year is entirely new. The instruments are all mounted on a single carrier plate which is assembled from the rear. This permits the removal of individual instruments for service. Spark and throttle controls as well as choke are located on the instrument panel, which is indirectly lighted.

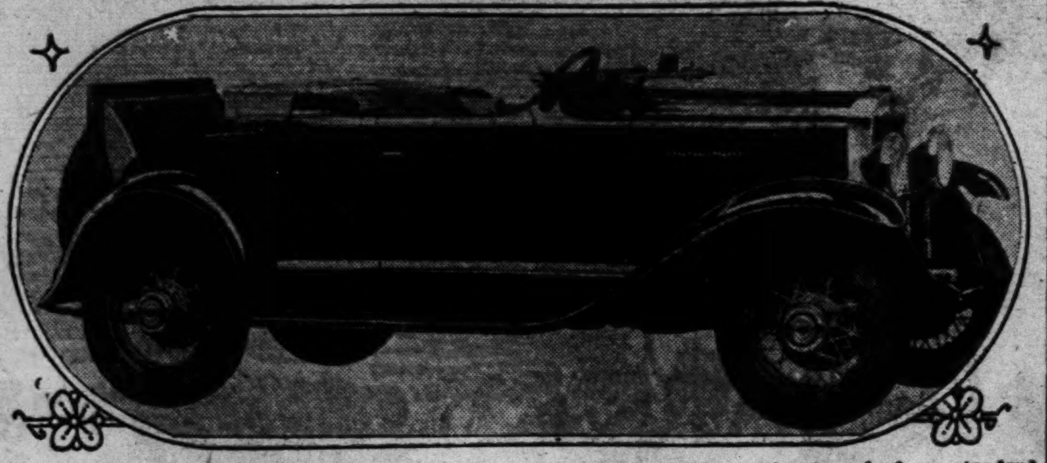
In the coach the left front seat is hinged only at the floor. The back and seat being in fixed relation. The right front seat is of the folding type, hinged at both floor and back. Appearance of the body has been improved by a new contour of the window reveals. The body is finished in classic blue duco with ivory stripings and wheels to match. The interior of the body is finished with a high grade velour of harmonizing color. The coupe follows the same design as to window reveals while the body is finished in Scaraba green Duco with Arizona gray mouldings and tusk ivory stripings. Wheels are finished to match with the velour trim of a harmonizing color.

The sedan stands out as a de luxe model with chrome-plated cowl lights and attractive chrome-plated cowl mouldings. The body is finished in boulevard maroon with black mouldings, rear quarter and wheels. Striping on both body and wheels is of Aurora red while the trim is in harmonizing color of a high grade mohair.

The club sedan is finished in Llama gray Duco with black rear quarter. Moldings are black with Eos red striping. Wheels are Llama gray striped with Eos red. The mohair harmonizes with the general ensemble.

Refined Lines, Greater Power in New Chevrolet

Chrome plated cowl lights and molding have been added to the Chevrolet. The sedan is shown.



One of the smartest of the new Chevrolet models is this sport roadster, with wire wheels as standard equipment.

De Soto Straight Eight Is Given Initial Showing

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The eight that stormed the steep side of Ligonier Mountain, in Pennsylvania, last fall, attracting the attention of some of the country's foremost writers on automobile topics, is now revealed as the new De Soto straight eight, a Chrysler-built product, and companion car to the De Soto six. For weeks the engineering staff testing the new car drove it against the sharp mountainside, pitting it against the best eights the market affords, in the most gruelling tests that an automobile can be given.

Daily this small but powerful eight was driven through exacting performance paces, hill climbing trials up the four-mile face of the mountain, acceleration tests and straight away runs to bring out its sheer speed capabilities. In these trials, the new eight was matched against various other eights of different makes, always against a larger and more expensive car, for the purpose of forcing the new candidate for automobile honors to do its very best.

In all of these exacting and trying jousts the new De Soto straight eight more than held its own. It actually outperformed its bigger and higher priced opponents and was equaled in but one event, and that by a car in the luxury class, it is said. When it is explained that the new De Soto straight eight is buil to sell in the around-a-thousand-dollars class, and the trial cars against which it was pitted range in price from $1500 to $3500, it can be seen that the Chrysler principles of engineering and precision methods of manufacture have resulted in producing another sensational automobile.

In these climbing tests a five-passenger De Soto straight eight wen over the top with a seven-passenger load a feat that only one of the other cars, much more expensive, was able to duplicate. The side of Ligonier presents a tough climb for an automobile. It starts at 1200 feet above sea level and rises to 2600 feet in a driving distance of three and seven-eighth miles.

As a result of these trials, and of many months of laboratory and road experiments and demonstrations, the De Soto eight comes before the public as a fully tried and proved car. Its eight-cylinder motor is a new creation. Its specially designed mono-piece body gives it unusual strength and lightness. Its down-draft carburetor brings a successful racing-car principle of carburetion to the eight-cylinder automobile engine.

Change Name of 'Graham-Paige' Line to Graham

An old name in a form that, though new, continues a long established tradition in the industry, appeared yesterday at the New York automobile show, where all cars built by the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation had nameplates bearing only the single name "Graham."

The adoption of Graham alone signifies more than a mere change of name, according to Sol Gross of the Gross Motor Co., local Graham distributer. It marks the final completion of a definite plan of the three Graham brothers, who, even before they entered the passenger car field, resolved that ultimately they should build automobiles that would be entirely Graham in design and in manufacture, both chassis and body.

That goal has now been achieved. In the two and a half years since the Grahams, Joseph B., Robert C. and Ray A., took over the properties of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co., they have more than doubled their manufacturing facilities. Two body plants—first one at Wayne, Mich., and then a great new factory at Evansville, Ind.—were acquired and equipped with modern production machinery. Lumber mills were erected at Perry, Fla., to supply the body plants with hardwoods. At the same time, the main plant was expanded and provided with new machinery and facilities for the manufacture of frames, engines and other major chassis units.

With this development completed, the combined plants are now turning out Graham sixes and eights that are as completely Graham in manufacture as they are now in name. Every car built henceforth will be made up of a Graham-built engine in a Graham-built chassis, on which will be mounted a 100 per cent Graham-built body.

The Graham plants carry out efficiency in material-handling by means of mechanical conveyor systems, time saving and labor saving devices and modern methods in manufacturing and assembling.

Changes Name

The Brake Equipment & Supply Co., 3415 Washington boulevard, will be known as the Riehl Brake Equipment & Supply Co. hereafter. The company will occupy the same quarters. The company is now exclusive distributer in this area for the Gruss sleeve type air spring and Westinghouse piston type air spring. L. J. Riehl is the owner of the business.

16-Cylinder Car By Cadillac at New York Show

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Visitors at the New York Automobile Show are displaying an interest in the new 16-cylinder Cadillac, on pre-announcement display there, that recalls the enthusiasm aroused when the first American eight-cylinder car was exhibited by Cadillac in 1914. This new automobile, to be called the Cadillac V-16, is the first 16-cylinder car this country has known. It is on exhibition in the Grand Central Palace, the General Motors Salon at the Hotel Astor, and Cadillac's permanent Fleetwood Salon at 10 East Fifty-seventh street. The 16-cylinder engine alone is also on display in the Hotel Commodore.

The Cadillac V-16 will not be available for delivery to purchasers for several months. The two cars which Cadillac is featuring at New York were especially prepared.

Features of the engine are the smoothness and flexibility, trim appearance and the capability under all traffic conditions. In design, the engine is V-type. The included angle between the two blocks of eight cylinders is 45 degrees. The valve mechanism is overhead, operated by a single camshaft set at the base of the V between the cylinder blocks, and assured of absolute silence by a patented automatic valve silencer developed in collaboration with General Motors Research Laboratories.

The V-16 power plant is provided with two fuel systems—two vacuum tanks, two carburetors and two intake manifolds. Accelerator control is conventional. Lubrication is full pressure to all bearing surfaces. Crankcase ventilation is thermostatically controlled. Ignition is by Delco-Remy, incorporating two coils, an eight-lobed timer with double-contact points, two condensers and a distributor.

Brakes are time-proved safety mechanical design, all internal and weather proof, adapted to the V-16. Pedal efficiency is augmented by a unique vacuum brake assister. The transmission is the non-clashing syncro-mesh type applied to the power requirements of the V-16.

Cadillac is also showing a representative number of bodies, by Fisher and Fleetwood, on the eight-cylinder Cadillac and La Salle chassis. These are featured at the General Motors Salon at Hotel Astor. These two cars, it is said, are to be continued by Cadillac as their principal contributions to American motoring. The V-16 is distinctly an addition.

Powerful New Erskine Offered In $1000 Class

A new model Erskine, of new design and greatly increased power and performance, is announced by Studebaker, through the Lurie Motor Car Co., St. Louis distributer. The new car is known as the "dynamic" new Erskine and is on display here, in conjunction with the showing at the New York auto show. Seven body models are offered ranging from $895 to $1095 at the factory.

Simultaneously, the Lurie company announces an addition to the Studebaker President eight line, the five-passenger state victoria, priced at $2245 at the factory, including six wire wheels and folding luggage grid.

A victoria brougham on the same chassis will be offered soon. According to Sam Lurie, head of the Lurie company, it will be presented with red wheels and black body, with black wheels and body, also in silver pine color.

An outstanding characteristic of the new Erskine is its power. It is to have more power per pound of weight than any other car under $1000. Tests conducted with the new Erskine on the Studebaker proving grounds indicate that it is destined to establish completely new standards for value and performance in the $1000 price field.

The complete model range includes a five-passenger, four-door sedan, regal sedan, club sedan, regal landau, two-passenger business coupe, coupe for four with rumble seat and tourer with folding top. Save for the business coupe and tourer, which are finished in genuine leather, upholstery is in mohair. Mohair or broadcloth is optional in the regal landau. Two extra wire wheels in front fender wells and a folding luggage grid are standard on the regal sedan and regal landau.

Mounted on a wheelbase of 114 inches, the new bodies are long, graceful and exceptionally roomy. Ample headroom has been achieved by allowing plenty of space in the body from floor to ceiling, while additional legroom in the rear seats is provided by a recessed front seat. Clear-vision bodies are of welded steel over selected hardwood foundations, and are of Studebaker design and manufacture throughout.

The power plant is of Studebaker design and manufacture throughout. It is a six-cylinder, L-head type, cast en bloc, developing 70 brake horsepower at 3200 r. p. m. Bore and stroke are 3¼x4½ inches, giving a piston displacement of 205 cubic inches. Based on a comparison of car weights and horsepower rating, this engine supplies more power per pound of weight than any other car under $1000.

Changes in Lines Noted in Gardner Models for 1930

At the New York show the Gardner Motor Co. is exhibiting the following new models for 1930: Series "140" eight-cylinder sedan and brougham; series "150" eight-cylinder sport phaeton roadster and brougham, and series "136" six-cylinder coupe.

Basically, the Gardner line for 1930, embracing 24 distinct models with a wide price range, remains the same as that introduced in the early summer of this year and there have been few mechanical changes, excepting those of minor importance. In appearance and in riding comfort, however, a number of notable improvements have been made in these new Gardner offerings. The low sweep of line and fenders is especially noticeable.

Gardner has achieved a style excellence in these new cars which commands the attention of the discerning motorist. The ensemble is longer, rangier, with a lower and more rakish effect than ever, quite in line with the modern trend of the more expensive cars.

New Durant Line Introduced at New York Show

Two Chassis, Equipped With Three and Four Speed Transmissions.

An entirely new line of Durant cars developed by the group of executives who assumed control of Durant Motors last year, is being revealed to the trade and the public for the first time at the New York Automobile Show.

There are two chassis, one equipped with a three-speed transmission and the other with a larger engine and a four-forward-speed, standard shift transmission. The three-speed car is built to sell in the lower-priced six-cylinder field and the larger, more powerful car in the $1000 price class.

Considered from an esthetic viewpoint the new Durant bodies make a strong appeal. Accentuated horizontal and subdued vertical lines and sweeping, graceful curves give the impression of a fleet, low-hung, powerful car. The spear point hood louvres first attract attention to the motif that is carried out through the art treatment of the entire car. The distinctive touch imparted by the motif appears in many places, both outside and in, including head and parking lamps, radiator filler cap, starting crank hole cover, outside and inside door handles, window regulators, robe rail, assist cord mountings and instrument panel. The indirectly lighted instrument panel carries out the idea of the Durant seal which appears on the radiator emblem and on the hub caps. The escutcheon plates and the vanity and smoking sets are designed to harmonize.

Wide doors give easy access to the roomy interiors and when seated the passenger or driver finds ample headroom and legroom to convince him that external appearance did not deceive him—that the new cars are truly roomy and comfortable. Seat cushions and backs are so molded and so placed as to give a feeling of restfulness. Proper location of seats with respect to the slender steel pillars makes the visibility exceptionally good.

Front seats of all the inclosed models and of the sport roadster are easily adjustable fore and aft to satisfy individual requirements of different drivers. The short, easy operating seat control crank is conveniently located just behind the gearshift lever, the ratchet and screw construction making it self-locking in any position and easy even for a lady to operate.

Returning to the engines, the bore and stroke of the "6-14" are 3⅛x4 inches and of the "6-17", 3¼x4⅝ inches, giving displacements of 199 and 258 inches, respectively.

Among the features of the improved plain tube carburetor are a positive acting accelerating device to provide snappy acceleration and an economizer that permits operation on a lean, economical mixture through the ordinary driving range yet automatically supplies a rich, powerful mixture when required for speed, hills or hard pulls. A self-cleaning fixed vane air cleaner is fitted.

Compulsory Insurance.

Because of the mounting annual toll of traffic accidents in England and Wales, where the death list last year was more than 3100, a compulsory insurance plan is now before the British House of Commons. Three months' imprisonment and a fine of $250 may become the penalty for driving an automobile in England without personal liability insurance.

Can't Dim Lights.

Dimming of glaring automobile headlights on a highway, sometimes advocated as a courtesy to passing cars, is prohibited in Wisconsin on the ground that the procedure may cause accidents.

CHEVROLET

Today

-Chevrolet announces

THE GREATEST CHEVROLET IN CHEVROLET HISTORY

Today, Chevrolet presents the Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet History—a smoother, faster, better Six—with new bodies by Fisher.

Basically, it is the same sturdy, substantial Six which won such tremendous popularity in 1929. But it is a greater car in every way—for it embodies every worth while advancement that a year of engineering research has developed. There are scores of vital improvements which contribute to every phase of comfort, performance, endurance and safety!

An improved six-cylinder valve-in-head motor, with its capacity increased to 50 horsepower; four Delco-Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers; fully-enclosed internal-expanding weather-proof brakes; a new dash gasoline gauge; heavier and stronger rear axle; Fisher non-glare windshield; larger tires—

—these are typical of the many improvements which make this car the Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet History.

But most impressive of all from the standpoint of the motor car buyer, is the sensational dollar for dollar value which this new car provides. For, in spite of its finer quality—this smoother, faster, better Six has been made available——at greatly reduced prices!

During 1929, more than a million three hundred thousand persons bought six-cylinder Chevrolets. This enormous volume production has made possible many savings in the Chevrolet factories—and, in keeping with its long-established policy, Chevrolet is sharing these savings with the public. No written description can do justice to the extra value and quality provided in this new car. Visit your Chevrolet dealer—see this car—ride in it—and judge for yourself the sensational value it represents.

Willys-Overland Announces New Car, Willys '6'

Prices Range From $695 to $850; Can Make 72 Miles an Hour.

Powered by an engine that develops 65 horsepower, producing a speed of 72 miles an hour in high and 48 miles an hour in second, the new Willys six is announced by the Willys-Overland company as one of the most powerful cars in its price class. With this achievement of power, the Willys six brings to the low-priced field a surplus of speed for all the demands of modern motoring. In appearance the new car offers a style development as pronounced as its performance and is seen as a significant bid by Willys-Overland for outstanding leadership in the Willys six price class.

The prices range from $695 for the two-passenger roadster to $795 for the standard sedan and $850 for the de luxe sedan, according to J. S. Mitchell, vice president of E. J. Johnson, Inc., distributer.

An entirely new car, the Willys six meets the demand of the public for a low-priced six with a speed and power development found heretofore only in cars selling above the $1000 class, according to Jack Mitchell, general manager of E. J. oJhnson, Inc., local distributer.

Numerous features of modern engineering are embraced in the construction of the new car, such as its rubber insulated engine to provide vibrationless action, highest compression of any engine in its price class, internal four-wheel brakes all around, Monroe double-acting hydraulic shock eliminators, manual heat control, full force feed lubrication, three-spoke rubber covered steering wheel, "finger-tip control," crankcase ventilation; heavy counter-balanced crankshaft, hand brake lever at extreme left; adjustable front seats in sedan models; sturdy frame construction, large oversize tires, and unusual oil and gas economy at cruising speeds of 35 to 45 miles an hour.

The Willys Six incorporates elements of safety and riding comfort at every speed range. The new models, which include a standard sedan, de luxe sedan, coupe, roadster and coach, are characterized by lines of distinctive beauty with rich color combinations and interior upholstery comparable with cars selling at higher prices.

Not content with a performance of 72 miles an hour in high speed, the Willys-Overland engineers have developed an engine that flashes away from traffic jams at 48 miles an hour in second gear. Double-acting hydraulic shock eliminators give a soft cushion effect over every kind of roadway and assures comfortable riding under all conditions.

With this new car representing the greaest mechanical achievement in Willys-Overland's history, it is a fitting tribute that it should be named after John N. Willys, who, for more than 22 years as president, directed the company's destinies until he resigned in favor of L. A. Miller a few months ago and became chairman of the board.

More than a year in the course of development, the Willys six has been perfected after exhaustive tests. These tests included thousands of miles over all types of highways in every section of the country and power tests on the steep mountains of Pennsylvania, Tennessee and West Virginia. Throughout all the tests, accurate records of performance were kept by the engineers.

Accurate tests show the dynamic flow of power and the resultant outstanding records of acceleration. It will accelerate in high gear from five to 25 miles in eight seconds, and from five to 50 miles in 21 seconds.

The engine has a 3¼" bore with a 3⅞" stroke and a displacement of 195 cubic inches. It develops 65 horsepower at 3400 revolutions per minute and 136 feet pounds torque at 1200 revolutions per minute. The maximum horsepower is developed at a car speed of 70 miles per hour which makes it obvious that under favorable circumstances with a light car and a favorable wind, a speed of 75 miles an hour can be obtained.

Two Knights Complete Willys Line for 1930

Two complete lines of Knight engined sixes round out the company's presentation in the Willys-Knight division. These lines comprise the 1930 Willys-Knight great six, which has established a conspicuous position for distinctive style, beauty, comfort and performance in the quality car field, and the Willys-Knight "70-B" which has proved so popular in the lower-priced Knight field.

The line will include a five-passenger sedan, five-passenger coupe, roadster and coupe. Each model is notable for its striking body design and ultra modern style development which permits the effective color treatment employed. The interiors are marked by comfort, luxury and smart appointments, with upholstery and hardware in perfect harmony.

While the body lines and the outstanding style development of the new Willys-Knight great six show no material change, the power development of its improved 6-cylinder sleeve-valve engine has been increased to 87 horsepower, the most powerful engine ever produced by the Willys-Overland company. This results in a higher road speed than obtainable heretofore.

Narrow Radiator And Higher Hood Feature New Ford

New Ford bodies made their appearance for the first time Tuesday in dealers' showrooms here.

Added beauty of lines constitutes the outstanding feature of these new bodies. Mechanically, the Ford retains the same chassis and engine that have established the performance records of the Model A, with such changes as have been built in since its introduction.

The new lines of the Ford are most readily apparent in a deeper and narrower radiator, a higher and longer hood and streamline mouldings that sweep gracefully rearward without a break.

The impression of a car that sits and rides lower results from a lowered top, smaller wheels, larger tires and new fenders, while increased riding space has been provided through greater interior dimensions. Fenders of new design add to the flowing sweep of the car, while the running board and side dust shield or valance fit snugly to the body. Also, the fenders flare up from the chassis frame in a pleasing line to a higher elevation than formerly. Rear fenders also sweep down gracefully over the wheels to a point two inches lower than previously.

One of the distinctive changes is found in the 19-inch wheels, a reduction in dimensions of the earlier wheels. This change, when coupled with larger tires, brings the car closer to the ground, thereby attaining a still snugger adherence to the roadbed and permitting of increased riding comfort and safety.

While an effect of new length and lowness results from the lowering of roof lines, there is no curtailment of headroom inside. The interior reflects improvements as much as the exterior. Throughout the line, greater leg room and riding space have been achieved. Adjustable seats have been added to all closed types to permit increased ease of riding, entrance and exit.

Another of the innovations of the new Ford bodies is the use of rustless steel for exposed metal parts. This is found in the radiator shell, headlamps, hub caps, cowl finish strip and tail lamp. It is said that the new steel does not corrode, tarnish or rust in any kind of weather and that it cannot wear off, crack or scale because it is the same metal throughout.

Bodies will be available in a variety of new colors. Among those seen for the first time Tuesday were Kewanee green, chicle and copra drab, thorne brown, Bronson yellow, moleskin, Andalusite blue, maroon and black.

General Tire Gain

With a gain of only 5 per cent in the number of its distributers in 1929, the General Tire and Rubber Co. made better than a 20 per cent gain during the year in the number of tires sold, in a year when the tire industry as a whole fell 5 per cent below the 1928 figures for unit sales, it is stated by W. O'Neil, president.

Because of the fact that tires are 15 to 20 per cent cheaper than they were a year ago, the company's gain in dollars and cents has been less than the increase in unit sales, O'Neil pointed out.

Braunig Named Salesmanager for Allen-James Co.

The Allen-James Motor Co., 2300 Olive street, a Chevrolet dealer, has appointed J. S. Braunig salesmanager. Braunig was formerly sales manager for another Chevrolet dealer in St. Louis and has been prominent in sales work in St. Louis for the last 10 years. His experience and proven ability is expected to aid materially in increasing the sales volume of the Allen-James company throughout 1930. As a step in this direction, he has already increased the sales personnel of the company and is in a position to take care of the increasing demand caused by the many improvements in the new 1930 Chevrolet line of automobiles which are now on display in the Allen-James salesrooms.

Airplane Engine Powers New Line Of Franklin Cars

Air-Cooled Power Plant Can Develop 95 Horsepower; New Body Models.

The first airplane-type motor ever to be employed in an automobile, one which has already flown an airplane, appears in the new line of cars brought out by the Franklin Automobile Co., of Syracuse, N. Y., for 1930.

This step brings the air-cooled automobile motor which the Franklin company developed in 1901 down to its most modern form as represented in aviation. The motor develops 95 horsepower and is said to operate in the ranges from 60 to 80 miles the hour with a smoothness of torque and power hitherto unparalleled in automotive power plants.

It is mounted in bodies new in design and ultra-modern in conception to match the advances of the age symbolized by the air-cooled aviation motor.

The driving force of the new Franklin is said to lie in the fact that it develops more power per cubic inch of cylinder capacity than the power plant of any other automobile, as well as developing greater power per pound of car weight than any other car in its class.

The new Franklin presents a striking appearance, each model being distinctive and characterized by a new type of hood with gracefully arched front in which are mounted vertical vanes that give a slender effect to its proportions. The same contour is reflected in the bodies which are marked by a deep sectioned and well rounded roof. The entire style effect is set off by the staggered horizontal louvres, hood and belt moldings and the use of a military type visor.

Two series of cars are included in the line, comprising complete groups of body models on chassis of 125-inch and 132-inch wheelbases. The series 145 is mounted on the former and the series 147 on the latter, which, combined with the custom car models, gives Franklin complete price coverage in the quality car field, from $2585 up to $3300.

Included in the presentation of the 16 standard body models are four sports creations which embody design motifs new to the industry. These are the 1930 speedster, which follows in design the custom-built model that was introduced in limited production a few months ago; the five-passenger Pursuit, the five-passenger Pirate touring, and the seven-passenger Pirate phaeton. All of these cars are in the standard line and were inspired by recent Franklin models which met with favor among custom car designers at recent salons. Such new features as the concealed running boards, deep cut doors, horizontal dart louvres, original treatment of windows, moldings and panelings, and the rakish slant of the windshield place these new Franklin types in a conspicuous position in the fine car field. The speedster and the two Pirate models will be on the 132-inch chassis while the Pursuit will be on the 125-inch.

For the first time in history, Franklin will offer four-speed or three-speed transmission as optional. This feature has been adopted to conform with differences in driving conditions. Thus, persons living in a locality where continuous high-speed running is a possibility, may order the four-speed transmission with its maximum road speed at low engine speed and its attendant smoothness. On the other hand, persons residing in or using their car in mountainous or hilly regions or in heavy city traffic, may employ the three-speed transmission with its recognized acceleration and high-gear climbing ability.

cessful in giving the silhouette of the car a dynamic appearance with a flow of lines in splendid hythm. The vogue of stream-lining bodies in order to make for greater speed, of course, naturally enhances the rhythm.

The color schemes of cars for 1930 are no mere hit-and-miss experiments. For the most part, it is noted that the designer has gone at the matter scientifically, and has called in the expert colorist. Cars show more attention to the matter of relation of secondary tones to the main motif. The designs in general reveal simplicity in color combinations, the majority being based on not more than three tones—as, for example, one for body (or body and wheels); one for fenders and one for striping and trimming. In many cases, the interior either matches or harmonizes with the dominant exterior tone.

During the past 18 months, considerable progress has been made in producing permanent shades of color which will not fade in the sun and rain. Brilliant tints have proved that many of the faster shades which would not have been at all durable a few years back may be used today and withstand the elements about as well as the more somber tones.

Many Cars Junked.

While more than 4,300,000 new automobiles were sold in the United States last year, the registration increased only 1,350,000. This is due to the junking of more than 2,410,000 old cars, and the exportation of more than 580,000 new ones.

At St. Louis Airfields

RAIN and warm weather last week demonstrated the necessity of drainage at Lambert-St. Louis Field. Although an adequate storm sewer has been laid, preventing the flooding of the airport, there is still need for ordinary tile drainage. The thaw and rain left the field muddy and with small pools of water standing in parts of the landing area. The T. A. T. Condor passenger ship became mired Thursday, requiring the services of a tractor. Other planes experienced difficulty on landing. Executives of several concerns using the field plan to call the attention of the Airport Commission to the need for additional drainage before the $3,000,000 bond issue funds have been exhausted.

Von Hoffmann Succeeds Father.

Bernard Von Hoffmann has been elected president of the Von Hoffmann Aircraft Corporation, succeeding his father, Albert Von Hoffmann, who will continue as a director of the concern.

O. R. Haueter, formerly with the Alexander Eaglerock Co., was elected vice president to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Bernard Von Hoffmann. The Von Hoffmann company operates a flying school and has sales agencies for Eaglerock, Cardinal and Avian planes.

Appointed Sales Manager.

Joseph Reed, who was a captain in the army air service during the World War and later sold automobiles, has been appointed sales manager for the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co.

In his new capacity Reed will have charge of sales of Robin and Thrush planes, and any others which the Curtiss-Robertson company may produce in the future. He sold planes all last year for the Universal Aviation Corporation, making an excellent record. In addition to his selling ability, Reed is of an inventive turn, having been the first flyer in these parts to put brakes on an airplane.

Lindbergh to Demonstrate Plane.

Col. Lindbergh promised Oscar Weiss, chief air mail mechanic at Lambert Field, who was custodian of the "Spirit of St. Louis" on its various visits here, to demonstrate the speedy Lockheed-Vega monoplane, which he is to receive at Los Angeles, on his return trip. The new plane has a reported speed of 200 miles an hour and a large gasoline capacity and friends of Col. Lindbergh anticipate that he will use the plane in a nonstop flight this year.

"Red" Jackson to Race.

"Red" Jackson, endurance flyer, will depart tomorrow for Miami, Fla., in a speedy Travel-Air monoplane to participate in the all-American races this month. Jackson was the star of the races last year and, with a faster ship, expects to better his past records.

Contrary to rumor Jackson is still connected with the Curtiss interests and will represent the Curtiss-Wright Sales Corporation at the Florida races.

New Aviation Engine.

A new aviation engine said to produce a horsepower unit with 40 per cent less fuel than the best engines in use today, is to be manufactured by the Wright Aeronautical Corporation. The engine it is said, weighs less per horsepower than other engines and expected to become an importa factor in air transportation throug reducing operating costs and increasing pay load. The engine w invented by Alfred Schwarz, a co sulting engineer of New York, an is adaptable to automobiles, tra tors, ships and stationary pow plants.

More Than 200 Firms to Have Planes at Show

With great interest being centered upon 1930 as the paramount year of aeronautical accomplishments, the International Aircraft Exposition to be held here Feb. 15 to 23, sponsored by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, should point the way to a year of unprecedented fulfillment, according to Cliff W. Henderson, manager of the exposition.

Exhibitors, numbering more than 200, the foremost aviation companies, groups and organizations in this country, as well as foreign manufacturers, are preparing the most elaborate display of aircraft and aircraft products yet assembled in one exhibit, he said. A concentrated merchandising campaign will be launched at the time of the exposition, Henderson added, and will mark the initial step toward the objectives outlined.

Marmon 'Eight-69' And 'Eight-79' Are Presented at Show

Coincident with the opening of the annual New York automobile show yesterday, Marmon announced two new lines of straight eight motor cars, known as the new Marmon eight-69 and eight-79 models and selling in the $1500 and $2000 price fields, respectively.

Introduction of these new lines closely follows the announcement of the new Marmon big eight in the fine car field, and these three models, together with the Marmon-built Roosevelt in the $1000 field, gives the company the distinction of being the first manufacturer to cover the four major price ranges exclusively with straigt-eight cars, according to R. R. Mann of the Archer-Mann Motor Co., distributer here. The new cars are on display here, beginning today.

Greater power, roominess, appearance and size are combined in the Marmon eight-69 and eight-79 lines. Although replacing the company's series 68 and 78 lines, the models are new in every respect and incorporate many improvements and refinements which stamp them as among the most advanced cars in the 1930 field. The eight-69 has an overall length of approximately 180 inches and is equipped with an 84 horse-power straight-eight engine. The eight-79 is 191 inches long from bumper to bumper and its straight-eight engine delivers 107 brake horsepower.

Both lines have L-head motors with such improvements as a fuel pump, crankcase ventilator, air cleaner and gasoline filters. The eight-79 engine is equipped with the Marmon double-dome combustion chamber, which was first introduced on the big eight and which alone results in a 10 per cent increase in power. A patent has been applied for this feature. Both new lines have equi-pressure cable link mechanical brakes, vertical radiator shutters, inside sun visors, parking lights on fenders and several separate comfort adjustments—adjustable foot pedals on the "79," and adjustable steering columns and front seats on both lines.

Five body styles will comprise the initial offerings on both the "69" and "79" chassis. They are five-passenger four-door sedan, four-door brougham, four-door club sedan, convertible coupe and standard coupe. All cars are featured by roomy interiors which are built to accommodate more than their designated number of passengers. A wide variety of colors and color combinations will be available.

Price Reduction Of From $200 to $400 by Auburn

A drastic price cut on the two straight eight models features the announcement of the 1930 Auburn automobiles, made yesterday. Price reductions range from $200 to $400, according to C. E. Graves of the Auburn-Graves Motor Co., Inc., St. Louis distributer.

Although there is no change in the price of the six-cylinder Auburn, the four-door sedan remaining at $995, factory, the 100-horsepower 8-95 sport sedan will sell for $1195, and the 125-horsepower 8-125 sport sedan at $1495, representing reductions of $200 and $300 respectively, while the 8-125 phaeton sedan, at $1695, will be $400 less than the old price.

In announcing the changes, E. L. Cord, president of the Auburn Automobile Co., said the program is the culimination of a five year's policy of giving the public better automobiles each year at less cost to buyer.

While incorporating many improvements and refinements, the new Auburns retain the characteristics of the old. Models are on display here at the Auburn-Graves Motor Co., Inc., 2309 Locust street, St. Louis distributer. The changes were made known to the local Auburn organization at a banquet in Hotel Coronado Monday night, attended by newspapermen.

Three models are offered in the 6-85 line, the sport sedan at $995, four-door sedan at $1095 and cabriolet at $1095.

New and old prices in the 8-95 series follow: Four-door sport sedan, $1195, $1395; full sedan, $1295, $1495; cabriolet, $1295, $1495, and phaeton sedan, $1395, $1695.

New and old prices in the 8-125 series are: Four-door sport sedan, $1495, $1795; four-door full sedan, $1595, $1895; cabriolet, $1595, $1895, and phaeton sedan, $1695, $2095. All prices are at the factory.

All three series are equipped with Lycoming engines, Bijur chassis lubrication, hydraulic shock absorbers, internal expanding, four-wheel hydraulic brakes, cam and lever steering, steel running boards, Brewster non-glare windshields on closed models, reinforced bodies and other features.

The six is built on a 120-inch wheelbase, with 72-horsepower motor. The 8-95 is on a 125-inch wheelbase and the 8-125 on a 130-inch wheelbase.

Concert by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, at 2 p. m. Music of Johann Sebastian Bach will be contrasted with that of a modern living composer, the brilliant Hungarian, Ernst Von Dohnanyi, and the waltzes of Johann Strauss, the younger.

Although Johann Sebastian Bach was the descendant of a long line of musicians and composers, it is in him that the name of Bach blossomed into immortality. Indeed, he is the very head-spring of our musical world. Composers like Mendelssohn have sat at his feet and hailed him as the "Musical Messiah." He was 65 when he died, and his composing period covered 45 years.

Dohnanyi, whose "Suite" will be heard as the second selection on the program, was in Chicago in 1900, when he was beginning his remarkable career. At that time, at the age of 23, he appeared with the Chicago Symphony under Theodore Thomas.

Johann Strauss, the younger, also was a visitor to America. Possibly a few who will hear the orchestra play his light-hearted "Wine, Women and Song" waltz, today will remember his visit to this country in 1872, when he was engaged to play in the International Peace Jubilee, in a hall which held 50,000 people. Strauss was accompanied to America by his wife and a poodle, and there is an interesting story that his wife used the dog as a provider of glossy black hair which she sent to impressionable young women who wrote asking for a lock from the famous composer's own head.

It is said that Miss Dragonette is now among the highest paid radio artists in the world.

When Miss Dragonette sang last night for the first time as an exclusive Cities Service star, she joined a group of friends with whom she sang on another program. They are the Cavaliers, a quartet once known as the Hoover Sentinels.

Chain Programs Get Only 13 Per Cent of Total Hours on Air

Radio listeners in the United States get a grand total of 1,252,802 hours of broadcasting in a year. This is the aggregate time "on the air" of all stations in the country, according to figures compiled by the Federal Radio Commission.

Total time devoted to chain programs is 13 per cent or 156,551 hours. The aggregate used for station programs and the promotion of good will for the broadcaster's own business amounts to 639,881 hours or approximately 51 per cent. The total time sold by stations, exclusive of chain programs, is 410,426 hours or approximately 33 per cent.

To maintain a 50,000 watt station, like WLW, WENR, WTIC, KDKA costs an average of $265,707, the commission estimates.

Wile Will Report Naval Conference Over Chain Daily

Frederic William Wile, the Washington political analyst and broadcaster, has been selected by the Columbia System to keep the American radio audience informed on the proceedings of the London Naval Conference called by President Hoover beginning Jan. 21. This will be the first time that a special representative of a chain has been sent abroad for the express purpose of reporting a conference of this nature for a listening audience.

Engineers have completed arrangements for the trans-Atlantic short wave rebroadcasting circuits over which Wile, speaking from his suite near the conference chambers in the English capital, will be enabled to send his voice into the homes of American listeners.

Wile's words will cross the Atlantic by means of radio waves, be received at several points on the American coast, and be relayed by land wires to the control room of WABC, the key station of the Columbia chain system, where it will be sent out on the network to 48 stations in this country and Canada.

Arrangements are also being made by the Columbia chain to broadcast the speech of King George when he formally opens the Naval Limitations Conference.

Chicago Children's Programs on Chain

Another Chicago radio feature—"My Bookhouse Story Time" is now a Columbia chain feature. Russell Pratt, who has conducted this children's feature through WMAQ, will be "The Bookhouse Story Man" on the network. With WMAQ as the key station, the stories from the juvenile land of make-believe will be presented each Monday, Wednesday and Friday between 4:45 and 5 o'clock.

Pratt is widely known for his "Topsy Turvy Time" and his antics with "The Three Doctors," the bit of studio hilarity in which he has for teammates Ransom Sherman and Joe Rudolph.

No radio broadcasting station in New Zealand may be operated for advertising purposes.

What's New In Radio Industry

Atwater Kent Reports Demand Makes Inventory Shut Down Impossible — New 'Super Zenith' Models Introduced—All Have Double Push Pull Audio—'Minuet' Amrad Set Added to Line—New Victoreen Is 'One Spot' Receiver—Trade Notes.

"CONFRONTED by the greatest midwinter demand in radio history, the Atwater Kent Manufacturing Co. has been unable to close down over the holidays for the usual Jan. 1 inventory," says a statement from the company sent to the Brown & Hall Supply Co., distributer in the St. Louis area. Throughout December our production has been speeded up to man-power capacity in an endeavor to catch up with a demand unprecedented in the annals of radio manufacture and merchandising.

"Ordinarily our factories close during the holiday season for inventory taking, but not so this year. Wheels are turning as rapidly today as they turn at peak production seasons."

Temple Reports Large Orders for Sets.

From Chicago comes word that the Temple Corporation states that on Dec. 16 orders were received for 29 carloads of Templetone receivers. The unusual amount of business received and in sight quashes rumors about depression, particularly in radio, and makes for confidence in the industry, says a statement for the company. "Indications point to a healthy and normal radio business in the early months of 1930. Production plans are being made accordingly, and a better business in the first four months is assured than was expected two months ago."

Five New Zenith Models All Use Double Push-Pull Audio.

Five new console models of Zenith receivers are announced. They will be known as the "Super Zenith" line. All have nine-tube screen grid chassis, double push-pull audio, linear power detection and extra large dynamic speaker.

A "Super Midget" model (No. 60) containing the same chassis and speaker as the large models is designed to fit in a nook or corner of a small apartment. Its cabinet is in matched butt and striped walnut.

"Super" models 62, 64 and 67 have automatic tuning. Model 62 is of early American design with Gothic motif. No. 64 has a concealed antenna and a cabinet in Charles II style. No. 67, also a loop set, is in Italian Renaissance design. A No. 61 has a lowboy cabinet in eighteenth century American style.

A new direct current Zenith is the Model 563, which has the automatic tuning device. It has 11 tubes, and comes in a highboy cabinet in early English style with hand-carved linen-fold pattern on the doors.

Amrad Adds "Minuet" Model.

Following a policy of identifying radio receivers with musical terms, the Amrad Corporation is producing a new popular-priced set to be known as the "Minuet."

Last year the Amrad line was known as the "Symphonic Series," and the individual models were called the "Opera," "Sonata," "Nocturne," and "Concerto." This year's line, to which the new "Minuet" has been added, is known as the Bel Canto series, and consists of the "Aria," "Serenata," "Symphony" and "Duet" receivers.

The new "Minuet" is a console of fine walnut and lace wood. It has eight tubes, including three screen grid tubes and two 245 tubes in push pull; the Mershon Condenser, an extra-heavy chassis, and a dynamic speaker on a baffle board.

New Victoreen Superheterodyne Tested in St. Louis.

A new Victoreen superheterodyne receiver has been introduced that appears to be really a "one spot" set. It was tested Monday night on West Pine boulevard, near Vandeventer avenue, where reception conditions are poor, the place being three-eighths of a mile from WIL, a mile and a quarter from KWK, two and a half miles from KSD and about 10 miles from KMOX. All these stations generally tune very broadly on sets at this location.

The Victoreen brought in WOR between WLW and WGN clearly and with great volume. It was 10 kilocycle selective up and down the line. WBT could be heard through KMOX. WTAM came in without any "wash" from KMOX. Between KMOX (on 1090kc) and WIL these stations were tuned in clearly: an unidentified station on 1120kc; WJJD on 1130kc; WAPL-KVOO, on 1140kc; WOWO, on 1160kc. WHAM on 1150kc could be heard faintly occasionally between KVOO and WOWO, but could not be "cleared up" that night.

Stations were heard on nine channels between WIL and KWK and on 10 channels from KWK down to 1500 kc. Because of the general unwillingness of announcers to give call letters at less than 15-minute intervals, it was impossible to identify all these stations in the one night. But they were unmistakably different stations, some of them on crowded channels whereon no single station ever could be identified by a St. Louis listener during the 6 to 11 p. m. broadcasting period.

Time did not permit "tuning" the upper part of the wave band, but volume on all stations picked up was so great that there could be no doubt of coast-to-coast reception on any good night.

The receiver is made in three parts—tuner, audio amplifier and dynamic speaker. It is housed in cast aluminum and finished in de luxe style. It uses 227 tubes in the two detector stages, intermediate stage, oscillator and first audio stage, and a 50 type tube in the last stage. The recifier uses two 81 type rectifier tubes and two ballast tubes. The set also has a C eliminator that uses a 201A tube.

On Testing Radio Tubes.

"Dealers and servicemen often are satisfied if a tube shows a high emission or plate current," says George Lewis, vice president of the Arcturus Radio Tube Co. "But this does not necessarily mean that the tube is a good one. On the contrary, if the emission is above normal, it generally means a gassy tube, which is quite as bad as a tube characterized by a low plate current. A gassy tube almost invariably introduces distortion, and is responsible for several radio ills. A tube, before being placed in a customer's set, should be tested in a well designed set tester, and the client should determine, by simple observation and questioning, that the tube he is buying falls neither above nor below the normal tolerances."

Frech Heads RCA's New Radiotron Company.

T. W. Frech of Cleveland, vice president of the General Electric Co., has been granted a year's leave of absence and will become president of the new RCA Radiotron Co., Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, announces.

"Tony Cabooch" to Play in Majestic Hour

CHESTER J. GRUBER, whose work as "Tony Cabooch" over KMOX has won him a contract to play in the Majestic Hour over the Columbia chain, beginning Jan. 17.

St. Louis Comedian Gets Contract for Part in Chain Program

In 11 weeks of broadcasting his "Tony Cabooch" sketches over KMOX, Chester J. Gruber has won a popularity sufficient to attract the attention of the national networks. As a result he has signed a contract to take part in the Majestic Hour over the Columbia chain, beginning Jan. 17.

Gruber, who was born in St. Louis, spent 12 years in vaudeville, including stage experience abroad. Of late he has been managing Miner's Theater in Collinsville, Ill. He had no previous broadcasting experience when he convinced the KMOX management that his "Tony Cabooch" skits, in which he played Tony and several other characters, would be successful on the air.

In the 11 weeks on KMOX, Gruber received nearly 20,000 letters from listeners.

Says Radio May Make World Speak English

A future in which races throughout the world will use English as a secondary language, largely because of the radio, is mentioned as a possibility by Gen. James G. Harbord, who was Chief of Staff of the A. E. F. and now is president of the R. C. A., discussing radio as an instrument for promoting international understanding and peace.

Since the greater and most appealing part of the world's broadcast entertainment is offered in English from America and the British Isles, the General points out, radio has provided the strongest incentive in history for many races to master a common tongue.

Play of Stage Life In Eveready Hour

In their white tights and soup-strainer mustaches, Tony and Ernesto used to stop the show back in the days of detachable cuffs and hobble skirts. One-arm hand stands and flying spins were duck soup to these two alley oopers and they trouped in the big-time houses until the onrush of the jazz age.

Then new acts set at a speedier pace crowded them out of the big time and Tony and Ernesto each year had to take a salary cut if they wanted to job at all.

It took a good looking little dancer, herself down on her luck, to get Tony and Ernesto out of their rut. The way she did it will be told over KSD in the first Eveready Hour broadcast of the New Year next Tuesday evening.

The program will be a dramatization of a short story, "Flash," by Edith Fitzgerald, whose writings of the stage are authoritative because it was her profession until her recent retirement.

The radio audience will be taken inside the stage door of the Olympic Theater, a small-time vaudeville house in New York, where the "Number Two" act is trying to entertain a dozing matinee crowd.

Speaks on Air Today

GEN. JAN CHRISTIAN SMUTS, famous Boer leader, formerly Secretary of State and Prime Minister of South Africa, who is to speak at the League of Nations anniversary meeting in New York this afternoon. The meeting will be broadcast at 2 o'clock over the Columbia chain.

Activities of Boy Scouts

HONOR WINTER CAMPER AWARDS TO BOY SCOUTS

Seventeen, Including 4 Scoutmasters, Win Honors at Irondale Reservation.

Thirteen scouts and four scoutmasters won honor winter camper awards for achievement at a winter camp conducted by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council at the Irondale reservation, Irondale, Mo., Dec. 27 to 31. Nine other scouts won satisfactory winter camper awards.

The honor winter camper badge is given only to those scouts who meet requirements in activities, test-passing, project work, and conduct at camp, while the satisfactory camper award is made to those meeting somewhat lower standards. The honor campers were Scouts Jere Manning, John Barry, Carr Beam, James McIntosh, Carroll Case, Alfred Reber, Julius Mayer, Robert Dawson, George Bopp, Fred Weber, Elmer Gutherman, Walter Gundlach and William Buehl, and Scoutmasters Leroy Lane, Irwin Keefer, William Sippey and George McDonald. Satisfactory campers were Charles Lorenz, John Wharton, Kenneth Dickman, Harry Babbitt, James Delano, George Gundlach, Karlos Tackett, Kenneth Gudermuth and Ferdinand Gast.

The inter-patrol contest, run during the five days of camp, was won by the Fox patrol, composed of four scouts of Troop 60, Manning, Marshall, Matteson, Barry and Lorenz and Scout Beam of Troop 82. The Foxes made 254 points, 10 more than Patrol Leader Mayer's Silver Spoon patrol, which finished second. The Silver Spoons, however, won the camp treasure hunt.

SCOUT TRAINING COURSES TO BE RESUMED THIS WEEK

Elementary Work at Michael School Tomorrow, Principals at the Stix School.

Training courses in Boy Scout leadership which were suspended during the holiday season will be resumed this week, William Puffer, educational director of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, has announced.

The elementary course, for men new to scouting, will hold its ninth meeting at the Michael School tomorrow night, and will devote its time to map-making. The principals course, for more advanced leaders, will also resume tomorrow, but at the Stix School. The course in first aid will hold its eighth meeting at Washington University Medical School, Wednesday evening.

Two talks will be given at the principles course, T. E. Spencer, Assistant Superintendent of Public Schools, taking as his subject "Vocational Guidance as Preparation for Citizenship," and Dr. C. E. Colgate speaking on "Scouting Merit Badge Experiments and Vocational Exploration." Spencer is in charge of the program of vocational education and guidance in the public schools.

A hike to Dr. Staley's cabin at Castlewood, Mo., will be taken next Saturday afternoon as the tenth meeting of the elementary course. The hike is scheduled to start at 3 o'clock at a gathering place to be announced at the meeting tomorrow evenings. Attendance at an afternoon hike is a requirement for winning a training certificate awarded for completion of the training course.

Most of the camp program consisted of outdoor tests such as tracking, nature study, and woodcraft; outdoor scout games, projects in the test subjects, and hiking. The annual snow fight, however, was canceled, as the snow had melted by the time camp was under way.

Troop Notes

North District.

An investiture ceremony for the seven new scouts signed during December by Troop 122 of Sherman Park Community Center, as its quota in the Membership Roundup, is being planned for some time this month. The scouts will also at this time be presented with the Standard Troop award, having met all the requirements this winter. Among these were the reregistration during November of 39 active and 14 associate scouts, 12 troop committeemen and Scoutmaster L. A. Frank; the winning of prizes for selling the largest number of tickets to the Merit Badge Show Nov. 1, for arena work at the show, and for their Leathercraft booth there; and the recruiting of the new scouts. The prizes taken at the Merit Badge Show later led to the winning for the second consecutive year of the grand prize of the show.

Six of the troop committeemen have been appointed a subcommittee in charge of advancement of scouts in rank—Part 2 or the 1930 Achievement Roundup. Two of the other committeemen are in charge of the troop drum and bugle corps.

A new troop, Troop 222, has been organized at Ramona Park Lutheran Church, under Scoutmaster G. Bueltmann. The Troop Committee is composed of D. Jones, George Weise and Fred Simons, assisted by the Rev. W. Weick, pastor. Troop 222 was organized largely through the efforts of Scout Elmer Lueke, who has been appointed scribe.

Troop 205 of the Bates School is being reorganized under a new scoutmaster, T. F. Hunt, formerly assistant scoutmaster of Troop 3 of Grace Holy Cross Church, and a deputy commissioner of the North District. Hunt will continue to fill the latter office, in addition to his work as scoutmaster. The troop is at present working on reregistration, which is due this month. Scoutmaster Hunt is one of the best known and most active scout leaders in the district.

South District.

Troop 38, of Bryan Mullanphy School, held its fourth annual Christmas party at the school the evening of Dec. 27. Several members of the Fathers' Club of the troop were guests. The evening which was spent playing games, was climaxed by a Nello contest between Harry Schlueter, Fred Schlueter, William Thorne, and C. S. Rubey, former scoutmaster of the troop. Refreshments were served.

A Christmas party, at which the scouts exchanged gifts, was held by Troop 155 at McCausland Avenue Presbyterian Church Dec. 27. The officers for 1930 were also invested by Troop Committeeman Tubbs, and five-year veteran badges were presented to several of the scouts by Scout Commissioner H. D. McBride. A program of stunts was given by the patrols. At its conclusion the scouts presented Scoutmaster Pollack with a radio.

West District.

An inter-patrol contest consisting of 12 projects was conducted by Troop 2, of Pilgrim Congregational Church, at the meeting last week. The Panther and Eagle patrols tied for first place with three points each.

A joint hike to some woods in the county was taken by Troop 9, of the Masonic Home, and Troop 71, of Maple Avenue M. E. Church, last Monday. The hike was led by the two scoutmasters, Carroll A. Voight and E. V. Williams. The greater part of the day was spent in instruction and test-passing, emphasis being laid on fire-building and cooking. Both of these troops are planning interpatrol contests to start immediately.

Walgreen Series On 8-Station Net Headed by WLW

Hour Programs of 10 Separate Features on Wednesdays, Starting Jan. 8.

A special chain of eight stations including KMOX and WIL, St. Louis, has been formed for a Walgreen broadcast every Wednesday night from 7:30 to 8:30, beginning this week.

The first hour long program scheduled for next Wednesday night, Jan. 8, is planned to consist of 10 separate acts employing some 70 performers.

WLW, Cincinnati, will be the key station for the special chain which, in addition to the two St. Louis stations, will include WLS, WIBO, WBBM, WJR and KMBC.

Two of WLW'S established features—Henry Shies' orchestra and Henry Fillmore's band—will be on the program, which also will bring the Mid-Pacific Trio of Hawaiian musicians; the Six Walgreen Singers; the Welcome Rythym Rowdies; the Old Tymers, fiddlers; June Mancroff, "blues singer"; Elmar, ukulele player; Tony Grotario, accordion player, and English Charlie, a comedy singer. There will be a different master of ceremonies for each program.

Nonsense Act 'Hit' On Air for 3 Years

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO. — "Good evening, friends of the ether and friends of the feather friends—as we look into this intelligent microphone before us"——

But, why go on? It doesn't make sense.

The "three doctors," Russell Pratt, Ransom Sherman and Joe Rudolph, do not intend that their act shall make sense.

"Drs." Sherman and Pratt have been presenting—as a hobby—extemporaneous, sophisticated humor over WMAQ for three years. They were joined by Rudolph, pianist with a tenor voice, two years ago, and the trio captured the public fancy.

They claim to be without ideas when they face the "mike"—and listeners will believe that.

"Somebody says something, and that starts an argument," said Sherman. They call their act a "musical potpourl." Sometimes they create several characters for their programs.

Pratt is president of a downtown store, and secretary of the Chicago Credit Men's Associtaion. He also conducts the WMAQ Topsy Turvy hour for children, broadcast each evening except Sunday at 5:15 Central time.

Sherman is an insurance broker. Both Sherman and Pratt are from Appleton, Wis.

Barnes' Talk Goes To Europe by Radio

Radio gave England a first hand impression of American business and economic conditions last Monday when Julius H. Barnes of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States delivered a talk, addressed primarily to Great Britain, through a National Broadcasting Co. microphone in his Washington office.

The broadcast, heard from 39 stations associated with the NBC system in the United States was sent out also from the short wave station of WGY, at Schenectady. It was arranged at the request of Lord Beaverbrook, publisher of the London Express, and was designed for a London banquet, at which the publisher was a guest. It was scheduled to be picked up by the British Broadcasting Corporation and rebroadcast to English listeners.

Barnes gave British listeners a picture of business stability throughout America.

Coolidge to Speak Over Chain Thursday

Calvin Coolidge will make a broadcast speech next Thursday night for the first time since he said good-by to radio listeners from the rear platform of his train just before it left Washington on March 4 last. He will speak from St. Petersburg, Fla., beginning at 8:30.

The occasion will be his appearance as guest of honor at a banquet given by the New York Life Insurance Co.

The address, entitled "The Economics of Life Insurance," may be heard through stations which broadcast the Maxwell concert, including KWK.

Cost of Operating Power Set.

Just how much current an all-electric set uses can be figured by noting how fast the metal disk revolves on the watt-hour meter. For instance, with all current in the house turned off, the disk should not move at all. If, with a 75-watt lamp turned on, the disk revolves five times in one minute, and with only the radio set turned on, it revolves 15 times in one minute, it is obvious that the radio consumes three times as much power as the 75-watt lamp, or 225 watts. Multiply this by the number of hours a month the set is in operation divide by 1000 and multiply by the cost of electricity to the per kilowatt hour (refer to the bill) and the cost for current to operate the set for one month will be ascertained.

Atwater Kent Jobbers to Meet

A meeting of Atwater Kent distributers is to be held in Philadelphia tomorrow and Tuesday. Among those attending it is Fred Welbe, vice president of the Brown & Hall Supply Co., the St. Louis distributer. The meeting is to discuss merchandising the 1930 receivers, Wiebe said, not any new merchandise. Distributers from Wichita, Omaha, Kansas City and the Texas cities were to go East with him, Wiebe said.

TIPSY NEGRO TRIES HAND AS TRAFFIC COP

Tangles Things Up Generally Until Regular Policeman Helps Him to Station.

Clarence Jones, 924 O'Fallon street, a Negro, who drives a coal wagon when sober, got a little inebriated last Friday morning, parked his horse and wagon at the curb and started in to direct traffice at Compton and Lawton avenues. The result was that he got traffic tied up in an awful manner, and Traffic Officer Galinski was questioned when the officer brought Jones into Police Judge Rosecan's court yesterday.

"Where were you Friday?" the Court asked Galinski. "Why weren't you here to testify in your traffic cases?"

"I was driving a coal wagon, your honor," said Galinski.

"What?" asked the Judge.

"Yes, sir," said the officer. And he told of finding a traffic snarl at Compton and Lawton as he was on his way to court, or wondering what was wrong with the traffic, of finding Jones waving his arms at the middle of the intersection.

"Jones was drunk," the officer continued. "I sent him to the station with another officer, and I got on his coal wagon and followed them. It was just about the time Jones usually makes his trip, and every few feet one of his customers would stop me and try to buy some coal. I was in uniform, too."

Jones took the stand, admitted his traffic misdirecting, admitted he'd done a little drinking previously. Jones told the truth.

And Judge Rosecan discharged him.

Troop Notes

points, was declared winner of an inter-patrol contest conducted by Troop 26, of Delmar Baptist Church, during November and December at the meeting of the troop last week. As a result the Beavers will be awarded a bronze statuette at the next Parents' Night. Troop 26 signed five recruits, Robert Gartside, Junior Giles, George Merkle, Walter Michner, and Robert Schoenthaler, to make its quota in the December Membership Roundup

The troop has received notice that it placed first in division 2 and third in division 1 of the recent Merit Badge ticket sales contest, having sold 248 tickets. Scout Harry Svatek also placed second, and Scout George Tooley fourth, among all scouts of the council in the individual ticket sales contest.

Results, announced last week, of the Merit Badge Show, ticket-selling contests revealed that Troop 30, of the Y. M. H. A., won four of the 10 individual prizes and placed second in the troop contest. Scout Melvin Hartzman placed fifth among all the scouts of the council in sales. Scout Francis Klein tied for sixth, and Scouts Harry Rothman and Sam Gollub tied for eighth. The first half of a series of interpatrol contests being conducted by the troop ended at the meeting last week. with the Apache patrol winning a natural history museum contest. The Navajos took second, while the Mohawks came in third.

The year 1929 has been one of the most successful in Troop 30's 15 years of existence. In February the troop sold its quota of circus tickets and won an achievement streamer; in May two patrols won first and fourth places in the District Camparall. Nearly every scout in the troop attended one or more camps during the summer, including the Roving Camp tour given as a prize for the Camparall. Scout Elliot Gillerman became an Eagle Scout at the fall city Court of Honor and three Eagles of the troop conducted an investiture ceremony for all the new Eagles of the council. Scout Melvin Hertzman gave a talk at this investiture. The troop exhibited a booth at the Merit Badge Show, and concluded the year by winning the above prizes.

Five scouts of Troop 60 of the Union Avenue Christian Church attended Winter Camp, conducted at the Irondale Reservation during the Christmas holidays. These scouts, Jerre Manning, Marshall Matteson, John Barry, James McIntosh and Charles Lorenz, formed the nucleus of the Fox patrol, winner of the interpatrol contest conducted during the five days of the camp. Scout Manning acted as patrol leader of the Foxes, while Matteson was assistant patrol leader. Scouts Barry and Matteson also were the camp buglers. The award of Honor Winter Camper was won by Scouts Manning, Barry and McIntosh, while that of Satisfactory Camper was awarded to Scout Lorenz. Scouts Matteson and Lorenz each passed merit badges while at the camp.

Troop 60's old newspaper, the Pink Owl, which has not been published for some time, has been revived since the merging of Troop 134 with Troop 60. It is now being sent out regularly under the supervision of Scribe Charles Lorenz.

Suburban District.

EXHIBIT BY PUBLIC SCHOOLS JAN. 16-18

Second Annual Display of Work from Kindergarten to High School Stages.

The second annual General School Exhibit, displaying work indicative of the development of the public school pupil from the kindergarten through vocational, special, evening, and high schools, will take place Jan. 16, 17, and 18 at the city's seven high schools and Hadley Vocational School. The Board of Education inagurated the annual exhibit last May to acquaint the public with St. Louis' school program.

Each exhibit center will present the work of each type of school individually, but not competitively. The displays will be arranged by grades and subjects. Night schools will be represented to manifest the opportunities for self-improvement offered persons of all ages by the St. Louis school system. In addition to wall, table and room exhibits, there will be a number of demonstrations of class-room work.

There will be five entertainment programs by the schools of each district consisting of plays, music, pageants, athletics, and folk and esthetic dancing. These will be given on each of the three nights and on the afternoons of Jan. 17 and 18.

The following schools will constitute the exhibit centers: Beaumont, Cleveland, Central, Roosevelt High schools, Sumner and Vashon High Schols for Negroes, and Hadley Vocational School.

In its entirety the exhibit is designed to show how the modern conception of education has displaced the old method of learning by rote with preparation for the problems of maturity by training children to think as individuals.

It is intended also to depict a system which not only provides equal educational opportunities for all children, but special and general training for the continued education of adults.

The Board of Education's facilities for carrying out this system include 99 elementary schools, including 14 for Negroes, six junior high schools, including two for Negroes; seven high schools, including two for Negroes; 29 special schools, including seven for Negroes; one vocational school for each race; 16 night schools, two of them for Negroes; and three Saturday morning apprentice classes. There are also day classes for foreign-born adults.

In addition, the board maintains sight conservation, lip reading and speech correction classes for handicapped children, open air schools, and classes or special schools at City Hospital, Koch Hospital, Missouri Baptist Hospital, Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, and Oak Ridge Farm.

Reception at Altenheim.

The St. Louis Altenheim, 5408 South Broadway, will hold a New Year's reception at the home at 3 o'clock this afternoon. A special program of entertainment has been arranged.

MY LIFE IN THE WHITE HOUSE
By
Mrs. Calvin Coolidge

In a remarkable series of articles, which will be published in St. Louis exclusively in the Post-Dispatch, the former First Lady of the Land tells her experiences in the White House.

Frankly, charmingly and with warm, friendly humor, Mrs. Coolidge relates the amusing, unusual happenings of her eventful years in Washington.

The diplomatic function that came to be known as the "dinner of horrors" . . . experiences with souvenir hunters who raid the White House . . . the fun of incognito shopping tours . . . searching the White House attic for relics of former Presidents . . . how the President's wife learned that her husband did not choose to run—these are some of the absorbing things Mrs. Coolidge talks about in her intimate view of life as it was lived by the President, his wife and his family.

You can hardly fail to enjoy this human, personal story. An interesting installment will appear each Monday, beginning tomorrow.

SIX FAMOUS WRITERS DISCUSS
The Divorce Problem

What is to be done about divorce? That is one of the unsolved questions of the day—a problem of vital importance to everyone.

Beginning next Wednesday, the Post-Dispatch will publish a series of six forceful articles on this subject, written by authors who are internationally known for their liberal views. The following writers will give their opinions on present conditions and suggest possible reforms:

H. G. WELLS predicts the coming of new types of marriage which will do away with the necessity for divorce.

SINCLAIR LEWIS demands free and easy divorces at the will of the persons involved.

FANNIE HURST proposes that the marriage bond be viewed solely as a legal contract.

H. L. MENCKEN insists that divorce reform and religion be separated.

FLOYD DELL describes vividly and from an original point of view New York's collusion divorces.

BERTRAND RUSSELL maintains that the welfare of children is the most important divorce problem.

Thinking readers will welcome the frank, outspoken opinions of these noted writers. One of these articles will appear each week, beginning next Wednesday in the Daily Magazine.

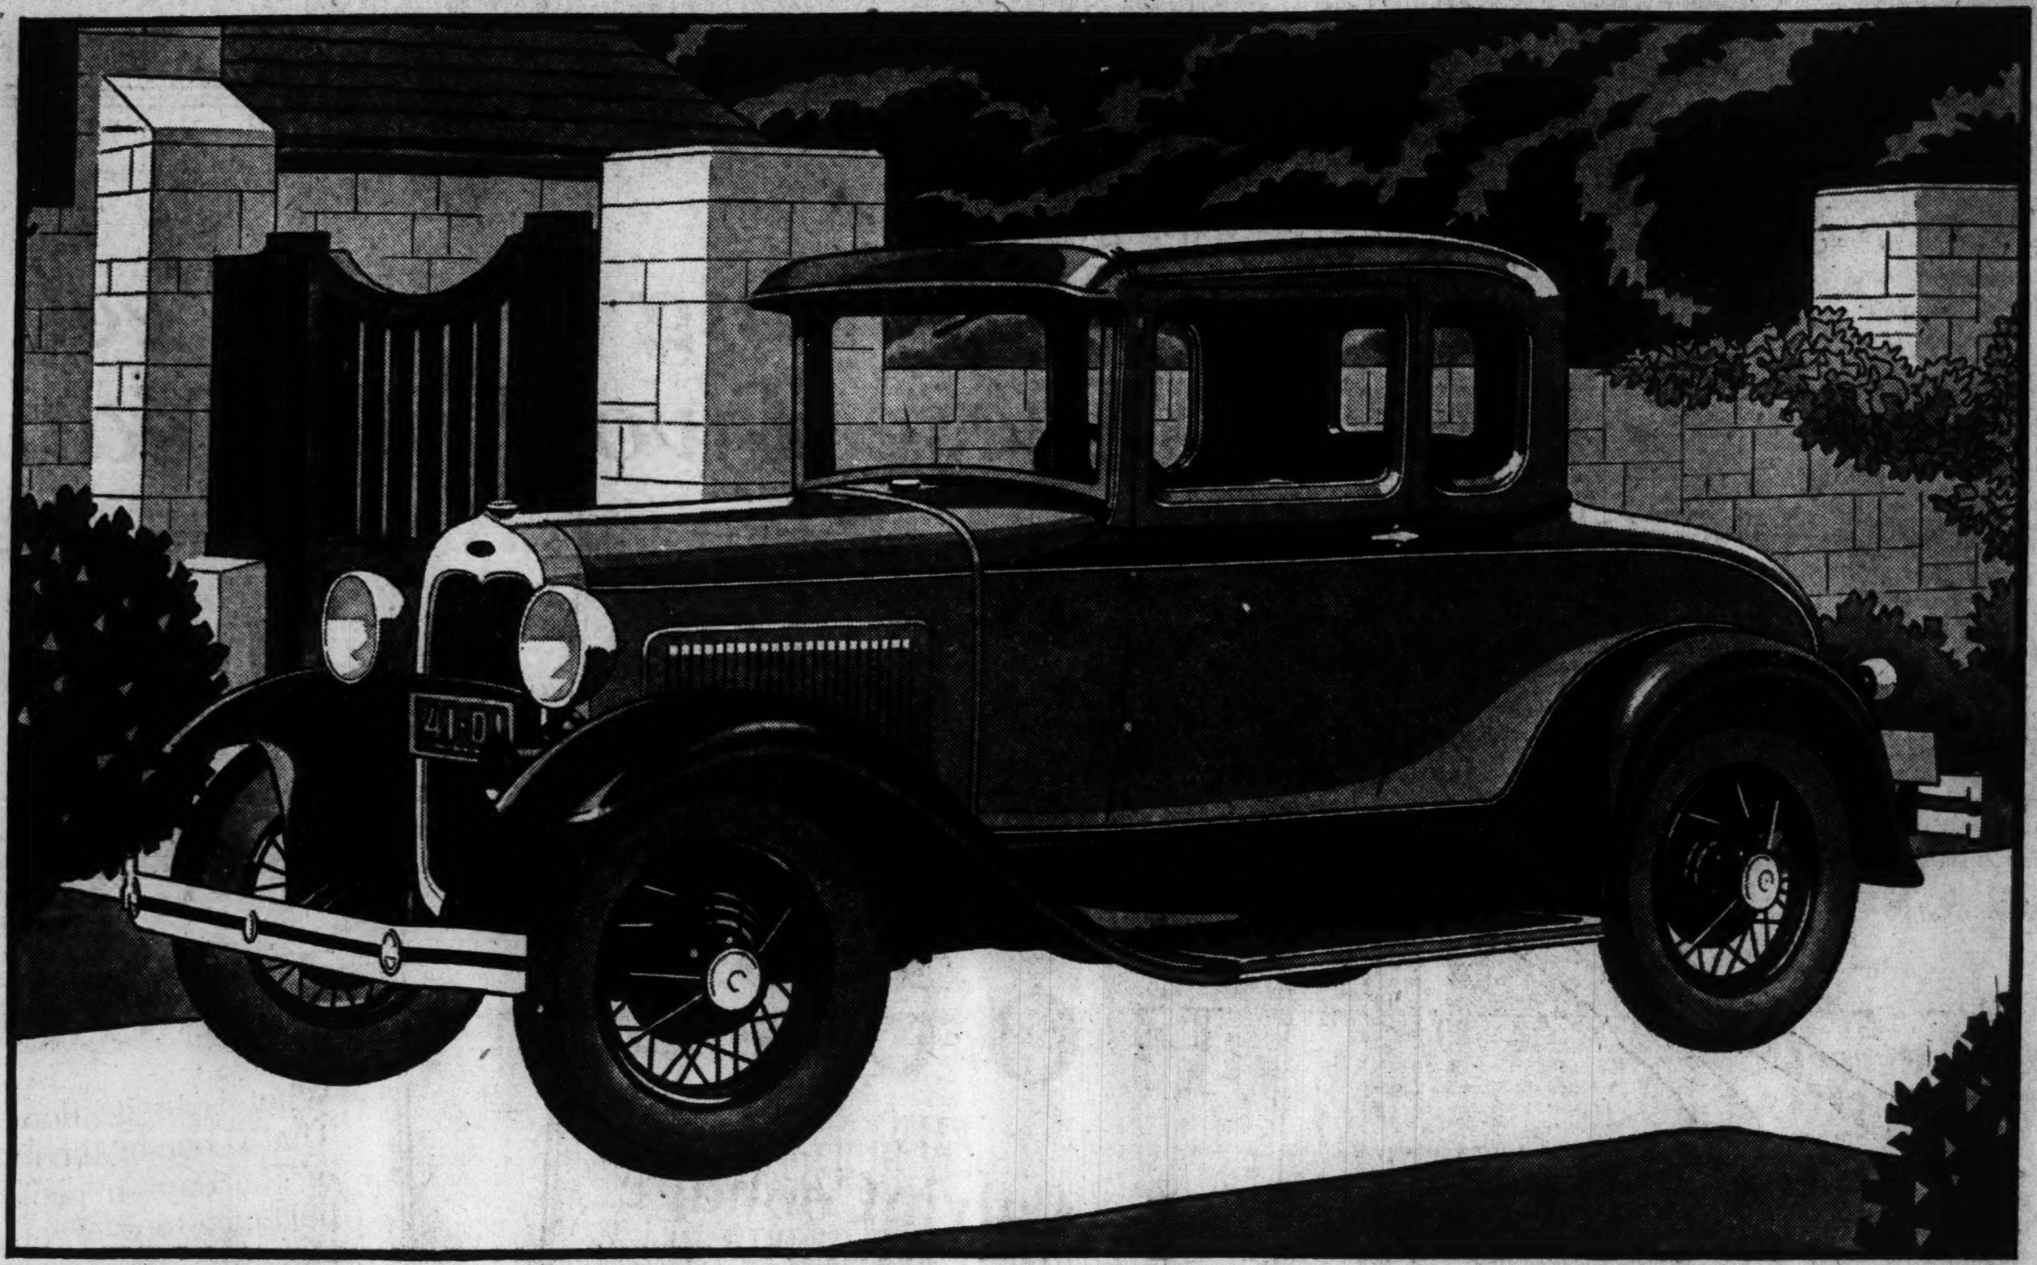
New Beauty

FOR THE NEW FORD



THE NEW FORD COUPE

Flowing grace of line gives style and distinction to new, roomy Ford bodies. Now on display at dealers' showrooms

THE NEW FORD CARS, shown last Tuesday for the first time, have been enthusiastically received throughout the country. Everywhere it is realized that now, more than ever, the new Ford is a "value far above the price."

One of the distinguishing features of the new Ford bodies is the carefully planned harmony of every detail of design. From the new deep radiator to the tip of the curving rear fender there is an unbroken sweep of line—a flowing grace of contour heretofore thought possible only in an expensive automobile.

LOOKING at the new Ford you are impressed instantly by its smart style and compact, substantial sturdiness. For there is about it a certain character or personality which sets it apart and gives it a fresh and lasting beauty. You will take a real pride in this beauty just as you find a real thrill in the alert, capable performance of the car.

All of the new Ford bodies are finished in a variety of colors, with new striping and new streamline moulding. Interiors have more leg room. Closed cars have adjustable front seats. The smaller wheels, with larger tires, bring the car closer to the road, with a consequent gain in riding comfort and safety.

An additional feature of importance is the Rustless Steel used for the radiator shell, head lamps, hub caps, cowl finish strip and tail lamp.

This Rustless Steel will retain its bright, gleaming luster throughout the life of the car. It will not corrode, rust or tarnish in any kind of weather. Its brilliance is permanent. There is no plate to wear off, crack or scale, for it is the same bright metal all the way through.

The use of this Rustless Steel on the new Ford is a reflection of the enduring quality that has been built into every part of the car.

AT today's low prices the new Ford is unquestionably an outstanding value. Check it over feature by feature and you will see that it brings you everything you want or need in a modern automobile:—beauty of line and color . . . safety . . . comfort . . . speed . . . power . . . quick acceleration . . . ease of control . . . economy of operation . . . low up-keep cost . . . typical Ford reliability and long life.

$170,000 PAID BY GARAVELLI FOR DELMAR CORNER

LOT COST $14,400 TWENTY YEARS AGO

Office and Theater Building for Sixth Street Corner Projected by Chicago Interests.

By Berry Moore.

The Balson block at the northeast corner of Delmar boulevard and Hamilton avenue, owned by the Balson estate, was purchased yesterday by Joe Garavelli, restaurateur, for an announced consideration of $170,000. Negotiations were conducted through the Balson Realty Co., of which Lewis Balson is president.

The two-story building occupies a lot with a frontage of 72 feet on Delmar and 150 feet on Hamilton, which the purchase included. The first floor of the building is divided into stores, and the second floor into offices, occupied principally by doctors and dentists.

The Walgreen Co. occupies the corner store, of which it recently acquired a 15-year lease, and the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. the adjoining store on Delmar. In addition there are six stores on Hamilton avenue under lease to various concerns.

Annual gross rentals of the building approximate $18,000, or more than 10 per cent gross on the reported purchase price, which established a record valuation. The price paid was at the rate of $2361 a foot for the Delmar frontage of 72 feet, mentional as reflecting the high valuation placed on the site, in addition to that of the building which is not on a commensurate scale.

Bought for $14,400.

The late W. L. Balson paid $14,500 for the site 20 years ago, or at the rate of $200 a foot for the Delmar frontage. The cost of the building was low compared with prices now prevailing for construction.

The corner has been one of the most coveted real estate prizes in this part of the city. O'Neill Ryan, former Circuit Judge, owns the southwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Hamilton avenue, comprising a three-story business block, which he purchased several years ago as a permanent investment. The northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Hamilton avenue, improved with a one-story restaurant building, with garden in connection, is owned by August Busch, president of the Anheuser-Busch company. It was originally occupied by the late John Caferatta, a famous restaurateur.

Garavelli acquired the property as a permanent form of investment, impressed with the business possibilities of Delmar boulevard, especially this section which has taken on new importance with the widening of the thoroughfare and the completion of the new Wabash viaduct, together with the Wabash passenger station at Delmar boulevard and Hodiamont avenue. Virtually marking the advent of the new year, the purchase is regarded as decidedly reassuring.

1930 Deals in Negotiation.

While the new year is still in its inception, an impressive number of deals already are in negotiation, including several building projects on a large scale for both the downtown and uptown business centers of the city, according to real estate men.

Negotiations being handled by Giraldin Bros. Real Estate Co. disclosed plans for a combination office building and theater projected by Chicago interests for a prominent Sixth street corner, dominating one of the most important intersections in downtown St. Louis. The site is now occupied by an office structure, which the proposed building would replace, according to Irving Field of the sales staff of the Giraldin concern, who has just returned from Chicago in behalf of the project.

While the exact location of the site involved is withheld pending negotiations, there are several Sixth street corners between Washington avenue and Pine street, with ample dimensions for the project.

Downtown Office Buildings.

Negotiations for the Liberty Central Trust Building, 18 stories high, and the former National Bank of Commerce block, occupying the southwest and southeast corners of Broadway and Olive respectively, dropped as a result of the collapse in New York stock market prices, have been resumed, it is understood. The ground of the Liberty Central Trust Building and the adjoining building on Broadway have been leased to the Negotiations for the Liberty Central Trust Building, 18 stories high, and the former National Bank of Commerce block, occupying the southwest and southeast corners of Broadway and Olive respectively, dropped as a result of the collapse in New York stock market prices, have been resumed, it is understood. The ground oor of the Liberty Central Trust Building and the adjoining building on Broadway have been leased to the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. for a term of years. Tentative plans in connection with the former Bank of Commerce block, include subdivision of the ground floor into brokers' offices or stores and a tower structure to replace the former five-story Post-Dispatch building at 410 North Broadway which forms a part of this block.

The prices at which these buildings are available involve handsome profits with the restoration of values in the downtown district between Eighth and Fourth streets, which the trend of developments indicate. The possibilities of the present Federal building block at Eighth and Olive streets, essential a site for large department store, and the proposed opening of the Eads Bridge upper deck for a free highway for vehicles and pedestrians, are mentioned as potential factors in this connection.

Nelson Building Negotiations.

Negotiations also have been renewed with Martin & Breitt, it was stated, for the eight-story N. O. Nelson Manufacturing Co.'s building, occupying a quarter block at the southeast corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets. The structure is the largest strictly fireproof commercial building in the heart of the business center on the market. It occupies the site under a 99-year lease from the Liggett estate at a relatively low rental. The N. O. Nelson company several months ago removed to a new building with rail facilities on Duncan avenue.

Offers were reported for the northeast corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, owned by Nathaniel Glick, president of the Glick Real Estate Co. This site, which is occupied by a four-story hotel structure, is one of the largest available in this part of the city.

Earnest money contracts were closed during during the week for purchases in several of the more important intermediate centers, but the properties involved and identities of the purchasers will be withheld pending final papers.

Sales of apartments were a feature, the Anderson-Stocke-Buerman Co. announcing the sale of a 24-family building of three-room efficiency suites, with garages in the rear, at 5738 Enright avenue, in a trade involving a total of $225,000, with clients of Gilbert & Stein, real estate.

Julius Feydt announced the sale of an eight-family apartment at the southeast corner of Euclid and Kossuth avenues, owned by Edwin W. Roscher, to William E. Monckton, and a four-family apartment at 734 Syracuse avenue, in University City, for the Miller Building Co., to Albert Wiethop.

80 NEW PLANTS IN CITY IN 1929; 135 EXPANSIONS

These Include Airplane Engines, Cotton Pickers, Dry Ice and Restaurant Seats.

An increased industrial investment of $83,261,000 for land, buildings and equipment in St. Louis in 1929, represented by the establishment of 80 new plants and the expansion of 135, was announced yesterday by George C. Smith, director of the Industrial Bureau of the Industrial Club.

The figures showed increases over 1928 of 17 in the number of new industrial establishments acquired during the year, 63 in 1929, and 17 in the number of expansions, 118 in 1928. The industrial investment increase in 1928 was $21,899,000, little more than one-fourth that of 1929. The 1928 growth required 5388 new industrial employes, as compared to 6281 for last year.

"A careful check of the new industries and expansions reveals the fact that 22 new products not previously available in St. Louis will be manufactured here!" said Smith. "These new products include airplane engines, plant fertilizers, domestic coal stokers, portable radios, cotton pickers, dry ice, road material spreaders, dry metallic rectifiers, centrifugal drying machines, steel tubing, beverage faucets, restaurant seats, self-dispensing gasoline pumps, viscosity meters, synthetic insulating rubber and a variety of chemical and pharmaceutical products.

Fields of Manufacturing.

"Of the 80 new industries, 20 are engaged in the manufacture of men's and women's clothing and furnishings; 12 in iron and steel products; six pertain to the aircraft industry; five are engaged in the manufacture of building materials; four in food products; three in printing; two each in upholstering, dry ice and nursery products, and ten in the manufacture of miscellaneous products.

"During the year the natural gas pipe line from Louisiana to the St. Louis district has been completed and already several of our industries are enjoying its benefits. The advent of natural gas here for industrial use in contributing substantially to the development of a wide variety of our basic industries, including iron and steel, chemical and ceramic industries.

"Of the 135 local industries which undertook expansions, 26 are engaged in the manufacture of iron and steel products, including machinery and supplies; 17 in men's and women's furnishings, including clothing; eight in food products; seven each in automobiles and accessories and shoe manufacturing, including supplies and equipment; six each in chemicals and packing materials; five in printing and publishing; four each in electrical equipment and furniture; three each in railroad repair shops, sporting goods and woodworking; two in airplanes; and 13 in the manufacture of miscellaneous products. The establishment or expansion of 21 warehouses is included among the 135 expansions announced.

Gain in Car Loadings.

"There are many other evidences of growth in the St. Louis district during the year. The closest approximation for car loading statistics available for St. Louis are those related to the loaded cars interchanged by the Terminal Railroad Association. These indicate a 6 per cent increase in volume of business for 1929 over 1928. Debits to individual accounts will show an increase of 3½ per cent.

"Based on averages for the past 11 months, the consumption of industrial gas is 13 per cent greater; consumption of industrial electricity is 16 per cent greater; consumption of city water in St. Louis has increased 3¾ per cent; telephone calls have increased 4 per cent.

"It is now quite apparent that the recent slump in the stock market will not have a long-continued adverse effect on industrial expansion. With the national earning capacity high, inventories low, price levels for commodities maintained, capital funds abundant and available, and industrial surpluses returned from the money market, renewed interest in expansion projects is being reflected in the correspondence and calls of the Industrial Bureau. It is confidently expected that the early months of 1930 will witness the acquisition of a number of plants of major importance and wide variety."

IN MEMORIAM

ALTHEIDE—In loving memory of my dear wife and our darling mother, Ida Grace Altheide, who passed away two years ago today.
Wonderful mother, woman and aid,
One who was better, God never made;
Wonderful worker, so loyal and true,
One in a million, that, mother, was you.
Just in your judgment, always right,
Honest and liberal, ever upright,
Loved by your friends, and all whom you knew.
Our wonderful mother, that was you.
Sadly missed by HUSBAND AND SON.

BAUER—In loving remembrance of my dear wife and mother, Nellie Bauer, who departed this life Jan. 9, 1919, 11 years ago:
"WIFE AND MOTHER."
You've your own little way of doing things right,
You've a dear little smile that makes all seem bright;
You've a heart ever true and a love full and free,
So, dear wife, and mother of mine, you've been a wonder to us all.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

Lytell Coming In "Brothers"

American Theater Dark This Week, While Shubert Is Holding Over "Follow Thru" Gives the Local Dramatic Field to the Casey Players at the Orpheum—Ethel Barrymore to Be Seen in Two Widely Different Plays During a Single Week's Engagement Starting January 27.

THE American Theater is getting its last dark week of the season out of its system now and will be closed until next Sunday night when Bert Lytell, who was a "legit" actor of prominence before he became a screen star, returns to the stage with his new drama—new to St. Louis at least—called "Brothers." In the meantime the Shubert will go into the second, and final, week of the musical comedy "Follow Thru" and next week will shut up shop again for a week, the revival of the old melodrama, "After Dark," scheduled for that night, having been canceled.

This leaves the field this week pretty much to the Casey Stock Company down at the Orpheum Theater where Arthur Casey will offer the mystery meller, "The Silent House." This piece will test out the plan of holding plays at the Orpheum for two weeks. The opening offering, "The Bachelor Father," which ended its run last night, did a surprisingly large business for 11 days.

BERT LYTELL, stage, screen, and again stage star who comes here in "Brothers" was of the theater from babyhood for the Lytells have been theatrical people for four generations. Blanche Mortimer, Bert Lytell's mother, was a leading woman with a considerable following, and it was she who introduced the present star behind the footlights. It was a walk-on part—or to be more accurate a carry-on part, since Bert at the age of six months was hardly ready to perambulate in front of an audience. The play was that popular melodrama, "The Lights of London." The records show that young Mr. Lytell behaved with propriety and decorum.

This first record is succeeded by a 16-year hiatus during which Lytell was parentally required to obtain an education despite the fact that his youthful impulse was to go straight upon the stage as was. A schooling terminated at Canada College in Toronto left Bert Lytell still hankering to follow the family profession. His initial job in New York was as a sort of famulus at the old American Theater. An opening as assistant stage manager presented itself with a stock company in Newark. The following season saw the young man a member of the company, with a contract in his pocket for one year of light comedy roles.

WITH this auspicious beginning, Lytell went on to more difficult things. At the age of 23 he headed his own stock company, the Bert Lytell Players, in Albany. Here he acted, directed, and laid much of the foundation for his later work. At least one other person in the company beside himself has since achieved a big name in the amusement world. She is Helen Ford, originally of Troy, New York.

Lytell's later Broadway engagements included "The Mixup" and "Mary's Ankle." It was in 1917 that he first acted for the screen, playing the title role in "The Lone Wolf" under the direction of Herbert Brennon for Selznick. Other of his pictures have been "The Right of Way," "Lombardi, Ltd.," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "Kick In" and "To Have and To Hold." Before his return to New York late in October to begin rehearsals of "Brothers," he completed a picture called "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" shortly to be released. In this he projected again the character of Lanyard, in which he first entered the movies 11 years ago in the film version of the mystery story by Louis Joseph Vance. Not to be behindhand in the great influx of movie stars into the talkie field, Mr. Lytell also did a Vitaphone picture recently presented here, "On Trial" with Pauline Frederick.

His return to the stage as the star of "Brothers," by Herbert Ashton Jr., does not mean that he will necessarily desert either the movies or the talkies. It is inevitable with his background that he should be

The Thyrsus Dramatic Society of Washington University will repeat Bernard Shaw's "The Shewing Up of Blanco Posnet," which was recently successfully presented on the campus at the university. David Black will play the part of Elder Dan; Strapper Kemp, Max Picard; Mary Tuttle, the Woman, and Willis Wager, the Sheriff. The play is under the direction of Clark Clifford.

The Loretta Players of Webster College will present "When the Whirlwind Blows," by Essex Dane. Mary Frances Broeker will play the role of Mme. Elizabeth Androga. Josephine Rabbit the part of Josefa and Catherine Cody the part of Anna. Mrs. D. M. Sankey is directing the play.

"The Beau of Bath," by Constance D'Arcy Mackaye will be presented by the Webster Groves Theater Guild. Gordon Hall will play the Beau; June Nultenberger the Lady of the Portrait, and Percy Finkenauer, Jepson, the Servant.

A prelude of dances by the Sarazan School of Dancing will open the program. Thorwald Olsen will present Miss Clarice Bruere, soprano, in a group of soprano solos between plays.

Plays for Blind Home.

Fifty girls and boys will give two performances of "The Marriage of Prince Flutterby" and other little plays on Jan. 17 and 18 at 5235 Page avenue for the benefit of the Blind Girls' Home. Song and dance numbers will be given between the plays. The performance will be under the direction of Alice Jones Wientge.

AT THE NEW YORK PLAY

By Robert Littell

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.

THE carefree weeks that surround Christmas and New Year's are traditionally among the busiest in the theater. This year sees something a little less than the usual jam, but we are fortunate in having more interesting first nights and fewer of the fly-by-night productions which trade on the chance that during the holidays people are slightly befuddled and will go to see anything. Even so, our stockings are not exactly bulging.

Sidney Howard's first play in three years, "Half Gods," was a great disappointment. So was the much heralded Cochran revue, "Wake Up and Dream." The Shubert production of a play from the Italian, "Death Takes a Holiday," rather spoiled a magnificent fantastic idea, and was saved from heaviness chiefly by the remarkable performance of Philip Merivale. Walter Hampden's Christmas present to theater-goers, a barely altered revival of that grand old antique, Bulwer-Lytton's "Richelieu," had the unmistakable accent of amateur theatricals.

Most satisfactory of the holiday fare was the new comedy by St John Ervine, author of "Jane Clegg" and "John Ferguson," and critic of last season's Broadway events for the New York World and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

IT was William A. Brady, producer, among a hundred other things, of "Street Scene," who added to this season's small total of theatrical pleasures by showing us Mr. Ervine's "The First Mrs Fraser," with Grace George, who has seldom, if ever, appeared to better advantage, in the leading title role. Miss George herself directed this altogether agreeable and disarmingly old-fashioned story of divorce with a light, resourceful touch, and her own extraordinary gifts for half-serious comedy are admirably supported by a cast that includes such aces as A. E. Matthews and Lawrence Grossmith. It was an evening of triumph for the actors, who overshadowed and added to a play that belongs to a species familiar to the theater parties of 1920 or even of 1910.

"The First Mrs. Fraser" will surprise many people, many people who remember the St. John Ervine of "John Ferguson" and "Jane Clegg." It is anything but somber and earnest and of the soil; it is admirably carpentered artifice wholly of the theater, and, in this age of dramatic experiments and expeditions, refreshingly conventional. It makes no demands on us, it tells us nothing that the theater-goer of 20 years ago would not have been quite capable of meeting and understanding, and at the same time it is, thanks mainly to the freshness and high spirits of the acting, an extremely pleasant and varied piece of entertainment.

AT the very start, one accepts it as entertainment, one forgets to ask one's self whether or not one should try to believe, and not even Mr. Ervine's occasional puffs of sermon and social comment make one want to take it out of the theater's rosy glow and see how its colors match with life's daylight.

Mr. Ervine's brief fits of rage at the hard selfish younger generation, his opinions, never very intrusive, about divorce and marriage, are most admirably subdued by Miss George and her brilliant cast into the comic frame. "The First Mrs. Fraser" has moments that verge on sadness, and others that peek over the fence at melodrama, but the performance keeps a nice balance between possible extremes, and melts farce, melodrama and serious sentiment into one smooth and polished whole.

It is around Miss George, as the first Mrs. Fraser, that the play revolves. It is into her house, a lonely house for the past five years, that her former husband (the part played by Mr. Matthews with humorous briskness and a very unusual Scottish accent) comes with all his troubles; it is her advice he asks when his second marriage, to the selfish, contemptible young peacock, threatens to go on the rocks. It is Mrs. Fraser who gets the goods on her successor, and arranges to have her elope with a useless and invisible nobleman, in a scene at once amusing and exciting. And it is Mrs. Fraser whom we leave alone on the stage at the end, contemplating the handsome string of pearls with which her ex-husband, after his first offer of remarriage has been gently but firmly refused, begins a second courtship which is to last long after the curtain has gone down.

HERE is a perfect part for Miss George, and her playing of it is perfection too—warm-hearted and also self-possessed, and extraordinarily neat in the small by-play of unspoken comedy.

But even Miss George's skill with all the tools of half-serious and amusing comedy would hardly be enough to keep us from noticing how much like a dozen other plays of various vintages is "The First Mrs. Fraser."

Thanks to Mr. Matthews, Mr Grossmith, Miss Goodney and Mr. Halloran (Mrs. Fraser's husband, would-be husband, successor and son respectively), we do not notice this slightly dusty familiarity nearly enough to interfere with a very pleasant and entertaining evening.

Little Theater In 'Ivory Door' All This Week

A. A. MILNE'S "The Ivory Door," a three-act fantasy with a prologue, combining medieval color and modern wit, will be presented for a week commencing tomorrow night by the Little Theater of St. Louis, 812 Union boulevard. According to the theater management, the cast for this fourth production of the organization's 1929-1930 season, will be interesting from the character acting standpoint.

Ashley Bickmore, who will do the Chancellor, has already appeared as the sycophantic Joxer in "Juno and the Paycock," and as the Prologue in Mrs. Ernest Sachs' "Twelfth Disciple" recently. Ben Fry, who plays one of the amusing soldiers in "The Ivory Door," recently appeared as one of the Pharisees in "The Twelfth Disciple."

Eric Applewhite, who was in the "Torch Bearers" last spring, will play King Hilary, Fay Magdolo, who did the Maid in "The Marquise", recently, will play Prince Perivale. Percy Ramsey is to do the Captain. Mr. Ramsey is known among Little Theater followers, having appeared in "The Pigeon."

Bruce MacFarlane, who recently did Annas in "The Twelfth Disciple," will appear as Brand, the faithful soldier of King Perivale. The Mummer will be performed by George Wendling. John Becker will do Count Rollo; Ralph Friedman, recently in "The Twelfth Disciple," will do a soldier; Marjorie Hecht, the country girl, Thora; Martin Hughes, the deaf old "Beppo"; Sol Kohn and Henrietta Mundt, the amusing court habitues; Frances Bright, the doughty nurse of King Perivale; Edward A. Herzberg, an anxious subject; Sara Cabell, the Princess Lilia; and Charles Dillom, King Perivale.

Kreutzberg and Georgi to Dance Here on Tuesday

AT the Odeon on Tuesday evening, Harold Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi, modernist dancers from the Mary Wigman School, Germany, will be introduced to St. Louis through the medium of the Civic Music League.

Kreutzberg's art is said to be powerful and expressionistic developed through years of training and a deep love for the dance. It was not until Max Reinhardt brought Kreutzberg to this country in 1927 in his production of "Midsummer Night's Dream" that the American public became Kreutzberg conscious. His tour with Georgi last season further emphasized his abilities. Both artists have the same background and both have worked together over a period of years.

For their program on Tuesday evening they have selected a number of their successes, notably the Dance of the Master of Ceremonies and The Angel of Last Judgment.

The complete program follows:

Polonaise	Chopin
Dance of the Master of Ceremonies (From Prof. Reinhardt's Festival Play, Salzberg)	Scott
In the Twilight	Milhaud
Variations	Mozart
Revolte	Wilckens
Dance of Salome	Scott
Romantic Dance Scenes	Debussy
Spanish Impressions	DeFalla
Mazurka	Scriabine
The Angel of Last Judgment	Wilckens
Persian Song	Satie
Spirit of Evil
Russian Dance	Wisslawski

De Mille Makes a Talkie

Producer of Many Spectacles Bows to the Sound Machines, but Refuses to Give Up His Bath Tubs—Some of the Stars Who Have Come and Gone Since the Early De Mille Days—Howard Hughes and his $3,000,000 Picture, Which Has Been in the Making for Three Years—When $2500 Was a Big Price to Pay for a Film Story.

CECIL B. DE MILLE, once considered fairly generally as the best director of spectacular and flashy motion pictures, is one of the last of the old line megaphone men to go over to the talkies, and his first effort in that direction is "Dynamite," which is showing now at Loew's. "Old Wives for New" was the first of the De Mille pictures to display gorgeous gowns, concealed telephones, AND swanky bathtubs. At the time of its production it was considered so daring, in fact, that the suggestion was made that it should be shelved. It is believed to have been a bigger commercial success than any other picture of its type. This film took Gloria Swanson from the comedy ranks and made her a dramatic star.

"Don't Change Your Husband" established the urbane Lew Cody as a prince of sophisticates. "For Better or Worse" continued the divorce series, and topped all previous pictures for box-office receipts. Bebe Daniels came from Hal Roach comedies to make an overnight hit in "Male and Female." William Boyd started his career as an extra in "Why Change Your Wife?" considered by many the best of De Mille's "divorce" series. "The Affairs of Anatol" presented Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, Monte Blue, Agnes Ayres and Bebe Daniels in an adaptation of Schnitzler's polished satire. "Manslaughter" brought Leatrice Joy from obscurity into stardom and made Thomas Meighan a greater star.

"Dynamite" is said to be of the same type as these. In line with the De Mille principle of creating "new faces" wherever possible, tests were made of many comparatively unknown performers. As a result Charles Bickford and Kay Johnson, New York stage players, were selected for the two featured roles of a coal miner and a girl of high social position.

"Dynamite" was written for De Mille by Jeanie MacPherson, author of 30 of his biggest successes, including "The Ten Commandments" and "King of Kings." The dialogue is the work of Miss MacPherson, Gladys Unger and John Howard Lawson, author of "Processional" and other impressionistic plays.

MANY stars have come and gone since the early De Mille days. Who hears now of Nita Naldi, once the exotic vampire of the movies? Of Arthur Johnson, erstwhile screen Lothario? Of Clara Kimball Young? Of Florence Lawrence, the "Biograph Girl" of the early days?

And who, day after tomorrow, will remember today's Clara Bows, John Gilberts, Alice Whites, Joan Crawfords?

Maybe the whole world will. And then again, maybe not.

Stars are not the only things whose days of glitter and splendor in Hollywood are succeeded by drab times of waning glory and of rejection.

In the yet brief history of the movies there have been dozens of transiently famous names which today are but wan ghosts from the past. Names which a few old-timers infrequently recall only to say "I remember when"—

The great movie star who today sits securely upon a pinnacle of popularity, enjoying a weekly salary to stagger an ordinary mortal, may find sermons in stones, indeed—sermons in theaters and wardrobe departments, too.

The great superspecial film which opens with fanfare, in a few months will be flaunting its comparatively faded charms at the neighborhood "grind" theaters.

Eventually, perhaps, it will close

'Evenings in the Orchestra'

A Great Musician Who After 75 Years, Seems an Even Greater Critic—Goossen's Opera Performed in Philadelphia.

By Thomas B. Sherman.

THIS piece is addressed to persons who like to read about music as well as hear it. It concerns a book which has just been published by Alfred A. Knopf called "Evenings in the Orchestra." The author of that book is one Hector Berlioz, a nineteenth century Frenchman who is identified in these times with such concert fillers as the "Roman Carnival" Overture, the "Racoczy March," and the "Fantastic Symphony." By the time another 50 years have rolled around these numbers will be known only to musicologists but if there is such a thing as compensatory justice at work—which I very much doubt—Berlioz will have been elected by then the Patron Saint of Music Critics by common and uncommon consent.

The series of articles which make up the book under discussion was published originally in 1852 and is only now being translated into English. Remember that while you are reading it and you will be constantly starting with surprise and delight at the neatness with which the author dispatches some of your pet abominations. On second thought, however, your delight will become tinctured with melancholy. If the passage of time has had so little effect on such phenomena as sobbing tenori, subsidized applause, musical cliques, stupid audiences and opera houses in general, that they flourish with the same malignancy they exhibited 75 years ago how can one hope that they will ever be eliminated?

One even suspects that for persons who regard music as a major art—and not a mere time killer for jaded dowagers — conditions may even be worse. Berlioz did not have to contend with the prima donna conductor, for instance, and there were no radios engaged in the unremitting task of keeping the public taste as degraded as possible.

But even if music must always generate parasites and charlatans as well as artists it will not be a lost art so long as there is an occasional Berlioz to describe them with sufficient accuracy. Needless to say an occasional one is as much as should be expected. An artist with an exhaustive practical knowledge of music, a wide collateral culture, a bounding fancy, a stabbing wit, and a conspicuous gift for words, does not come along very often.

THE title of "Evenings in the Orchestra" derives from the scheme which Berlioz utilized for binding together a number of unrelated articles which had appeared from time to time in Paris journals. He postulates the existence of an unnamed operatic orchestra in a "civilized town" whose members have formed the habit of telling stories or engaging in dialectic causeries during the progress of an opera too dull to engage their whole attention. Usually one man talks while the others listen, reserving their comment until the conclusion.

In this way the author has avoided the disjointedness of a mere compilation. Indeed the cementing process has been so skillfully managed that the reader often gets the feeling the main story is merely being served as an excuse for the critical give-and-take in which the members of this gifted band indulge.

On some evenings, of course, there is scarcely any conversation at all. These are the rare occasions when an opera by Mozart, Gluck or possibly Spontini is being presented. But even an opera which reduces the musicians to silence while it is being played is often not allowed to pass without somebody's being presented with a nosegay of cabbages.

For instance, "Don Giovanni" is being played. After it is over one musician asks another.

"What do you think of our baritone, Don Giovanni?"

"I consider he deserves the Montyon prize."

"What's that," he inquires turning to Corsino.

Corsino: "It's the prize for virtue." (Montyon was a philanthropist who instituted several prizes for virtue, literature, etc.")

THE toast to music which is put into the mouth of Corsino and which is given at the banquet of the musicians, is one of those utterances which might be made with as much justification today as then, if one had the same gift of combining a deadly serious sentiment with extravagance of speech.

Says Corsino: "She protects the drama, dresses up comedy, embalms tragedy, gives a home to painting, intoxicates the dance, shows the door to that little vagabond vaudeville, pours grape-shot into the enemies of her progress; she flings out of the windows the representatives of routine; she triumphs in France, Germany, England, Italy, Russia and even America; she levies enormous tributes everywhere; she has flatterers, too unintelligent to understand her, detractors who cannot appreciate the grandeur of her designs, the learned audacity of her combinations; but all fear and admire her instinctively. She has worshipers who sing odes to her assassins, who always miss her, a guard ready to die for her, which will never surrender. Several of her soldiers have risen to be Princes, Princes have made themselves her soldiers. People take their hats off to ignoble caricatures that pass for portraits of her, because of the name they bear; prostrating themselves, they shout and applaud with their hands when on grand days, they see her in person, her brow resplendent with glory and genius. She has passed through the Terror, the Directorate and the Consulate; now having reached the Empire, she has constituted her court out of all the queens she has dethroned. Long live the Emperor."

In other words, music, in spite of everything, is deathless.

THE recent performance of Eugene Goossens' one-act opera, "Judith," by the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company drew an audience from as far away as New York. The critics of the New York press treated the event with as much respect as if it had occurred within the confines of the Metropolitan. A typical comment on the performance was made by Oscar Thompson from the New York Evening Post, who, after commenting on the book provided by Arnold Bennett and the plot, went on to say:

"Mr. Goossens turned to the Straussian music dramas for his models. He decided, too, on the Straussian orchestra. Judith is, at least, second cousin to Salome. She is not permitted to wax lyrical, though she gives a hint or two of an inclination in that direction as she enters upon the love scene with Holofernes. The eunuch has some frankly melodious phrases; the others, including Holofernes, are not so much unlyrical as they are lyrical in a negative fashion. The center of interest, as in the operas of Strauss, is in the orchestra, which lacks neither color, vigor nor variety.

"Whether there is too much orchestra is a question, after all, as to whether the individual does or does not want his opera in the pit. For those who want it on the stage, this is an overwritten score. But Mr. Goossens has only adhered in this to what has been quite generally true of the post-Straussians. Here and there he remembers the English shimmers of his "By the Tarn" period. In these recollections are the relatively few moments of charm encountered in a work which, by reason of its action, is not primarily concerned with charm.

"Skill in word setting is one of the praiseworthy aspects of 'Judith.' Though the enunciation of the singers was of all degrees of clarity and lack of clarity, it can be assumed that about the same degree of intelligibility was attained for this American audience as is attained for one in Germany when 'Electra' is sung. 'Judith' is a professional job and the work of a man who knows the theater.

"The score, however, lacks characterization; it presents no fresh or very salient thematic ideas, and it is not cumulative in its musical interest. The tautness with which it begins is not greatly intensified by the later developments. The love music particularly fails of any swooning passion. There is nothing of contrast between the sensuous nature of Holofernes and the desperate purpose and the loathing of Judith."

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.

NEW YORK has never before seen such bargains in expensive furs as this season. The market slump hit this industry hardest of all. Jewelry, strangely enough, was not so badly hit. A $500,000 diamond necklace was a Christmas gift to a stage star from an admirer, incidentally.

What the Women Stars Wore at the New Year's Eve Parties

The Problems of Dress Which Confront the $7.50 a Day Extras

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 4.

WHERE they would go and what they would wear on New Year's eve, were questions of importance in Hollywood last week. The New Year marks the climax of the social and sartorial season in the film colony and many of the feminine players await this date to wear their most successful frock of the year.

KAY FRANCIS

Clara Bow entertained a small group of friends at her home New Year's eve with a buffet supper and dancing. For this event she wore a frock of gold and green lace.

Kay Francis, whose title of "America's best-dressed woman," makes her cynosure of all eyes when she appears in public, joined a party of friends at the Embassy Club. She wore a gown of chartreuse satin, and a cape of dark green velvet. Both frock and cape sweep the ground.

Mary Brian announced in advance that panne velvet in turquoise would fashion her costume for the 1930 festivities.

Nancy Carroll, for a large party at one of the local hotels, set off her titian beauty with a gown of green velvet, that flaunted a high waist line and a skirt that met the ground at startlingly irregular intervals.

Fay Wray welcomed another year at the home of friends, clad chicly in flame crepe and tulle. Lillian Roth entertained guests from her home town, New York, at a theater and supper party. She wore simple black panne velvet.

Ruth Chatterton joined the gayety of the Embassy Club, and wore an ensemble of black and gold lace. The coat of this costume was lined in black velvet and trimmed with black fox.

MARIE DRESSLER, the comedienne, once wrote an autobiography called "The Life Story of an Ugly Duckling," relating, obviously, how she succeeded on stage and screen without benefit of beauty.

Here is the tale of an "ugly duckling" of the canine world in the movies.

Mutt is a pedigreed dog, about 4 years old. He looks mangy, lazy, spindly, queer. But the records of his owner, Henry East, prove his aristocratic lineage. Mutt, it seems, was a "throwback" in a highly respectable dog family. A Sealyham, he was supposed to be beautiful. Instead—well, even his dog mother must have shuddered at sight of him.

Mutt, however, has fooled them. He atoned in intelligence for what he lacked in beauty, and was amenable to training.

Result, he has played in the movies with Billie Dove, Clara Bow, and Bebe Daniels, besides in the "Big Boy" comedies. And more, he has weathered the change to talkies, too, a rather difficult thing for a canine actor to do. He is now the lazy pet of the lazy Charlie Mack in the "Two Black Crows" second talkie.

PHOTOGRAPHY has had much to do with the career of Montagu Love, screen villain. A drawing he made of a photograph when he was in his teens brought him his first job as an artist.

MONTAGU LOVE

He drew pictures for a London newspaper seven years, but when photographs and the engraving of them became practical as a means of illustrating news events, Love was jobless.

Thus when photography took his job, Love joined an American theatrical company touring the provinces of England. Previously he had been an amateur actor, keenly hoping for a professional opportunity.

The Love family, in which there had been neither artist nor actor, frowned upon his dallying with drawing until he became famous locally. And his elders had serious misgivings about his eventual outcome when he actually became an actor.

LOVE toured the world with a Shakespearean company and finally came to New York with an English play, almost 15 years ago. A friend took him to New Jersey, where many pictures were then filmed, and officials of the company, seeing Love, asked him to try the movies. Photography was again to change the course of events for him.

Love's first picture was with Clara Kimball Young, "Hearts in Exile," made in 1915. Incidentally, it has since been refilmed as a talkie. Since then Love has been in pictures, first as a leading man and then in character parts.

It is difficult to imagine Love, soft-voiced and distinctly a homey type, as a villain on the screen. He spends his spare time drawing and painting life-like portraits of his friends.

RICHARD ARLEN will be starred in "Light of the Western Stars," an outdoor story in which Mary Brian will be the girl. . . . Ricardo Cortez, usually a hero, will be a villain in Joan Crawford's "Montana."

JOAN CRAWFORD

Bull Montana, than whom there is no uglier in the movies (Bull admits it), has had 100 or more proposals of marriage by mail. . . . He recently married, although it was not a mail proposal. . . . "Chasing Rainbows" is the latest title for another backstage story featuring Bessie Love and Charles King. . . . Joan Marsh, who has just reached 16, is considered the latest discovery for the movies. She is a Hollywood girl who at the age of 3 appeared in two Mary Pickford pictures, one of them as an orphan in "Daddy Long Legs." . . . There has been more discussion, locally at least, over the Chaplin attitude toward talking pictures than there has been over what anyone else has said or thought of them. It is typical of Charlie to say nothing to the reporters, although he once said publicly he saw "no charm in the talkies." . . . A studio here selects each year four promising graduates of an Eastern university and gives them six months to make good in the scenario department.

The first four who tried to write for the movies couldn't, and probably are doing now what others who graduate are doing. The studio is hoping that the second quartet will make the experiment worthwhile.

THE problems the $5000-a-week stars are supposed to be confronted with in selecting and keeping up their wardrobes are as nothing compared to the $10-a-day extras.

Only the "well-dressed extra" gets $10 a day, mainly because he has clothes and knows how to wear them. The extra who doesn't go in for finery can command only $7.50 a day.

The dressed-up extra has a more complete wardrobe than the average business man. His clothes are a part of his business. Unless he dresses well he cannot expect many jobs. The more jobs, the more chances for that big "break."

Contrary to general opinion, says the Central Casting Bureau, extras must supply their own clothes. Studios supply costumes and uniforms, but not "dress up," business or sports wear. It would not be to the extra's advantage to wear ill-fitting apparel, and it would be too great a problem for the studio to give individual fittings.

HERE is what the well-dressed male extra wears: A complete cutaway, with accessories that include topper, spats and cane; full dress; tuxedo; summer, light and dark business suits; sports outfit, including sweaters, flannels, golf knickers, beach robe, fancy lounging robe, and of course, silk pajamas; winter sports outfit; in footgear, dress, tan, black, sports and golf; riding and hiking boots, lounging slippers and beach sandals; linen, neckties, socks, caps and hats.

Why will an extra make such an investment to earn $30, or possibly $40 a week? Because he has seen the Charlie Farrells, the Gilbert Rolands, the Karl Danes and the James Murrays step out of the multitude.

It's a gamble, this movie business, with everything figuratively in favor of the "house," but try to find an extra who doesn't think it a sure-fire cinch.

Carlos Salzedo and Gregor Piatigorsky In Joint Recital

The harp as a concert instrument in this country has become practically synonymous with the name of Carlos Salzedo, who will be heard in St. Louis at the Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A., Union and Enright, on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 18, and Sunday evening, Jan. 19, on the same program with Gregor Piatigorsky, the eminent Russian 'cellist.

Salzedo is a native of the French Basque provinces and first came to this country as solo harpist with the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra of New York under Toscanini. His playing brought a demand for his appearance in concert, where he has won honors.

Salzedo also holds rank as a composer and his program at the "Y" will include compositions of his own. He will divide the program with Piatigorsky.

George Bancroft, Paramount Star, has just returned from a three-months' trip through Europe. His next picture will be "Ladies Love Brutes," from the play "Pardon My Glove."

Last Molinari Concerts This Week

BERNARDINO MOLINARI brings to an end his brief stay in St. Louis as guest conductor for the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's Golden Jubilee concerts, with an all-orchestral program at the Odeon next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening.

The concerts were originally scheduled for the appearance of Yelli d'Aranyi, the Hungarian violinist, as soloist. But Miss d'Aranyi's American tour was canceled and it was impossible for the orchestra to procure a soloist of equal rank to substitute upon the short notice provided.

So that instead of the Mozart concerto with the soloist, the orchestra will substitute in the program Mozart's G minor symphony. That work is the second of Mozart's last and greatest symphonies. The three, the E flat, the G minor and the C major or "Jupiter" were composed within six weeks. In the F minor he has hinted at the way Beethoven was to follow in developing the modern symphony through his path-breaking "Eroica."

At white heat Handel wrote his D minor concerto grosso, which is to open this week's symphony programs. Within a month he composed the 12 of those works to his credit. This is the tenth and one of the finest of them all.

Molinari's program offers in its last half Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" overture, the minuet from Gluck's "Orfeo" and the pizzicato ostinato, "The Scherzo," from Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony. With these, and bringing the program to a close is Paul Dukas' "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," founded upon Goethe's ballad, which tells of the youthful and amateur sorcerer who conjured a broom into a man.

The detailed program is:

I Overture.
II Air.
III Allegro.
IV Allegro.
V Allegro moderato.
Symphony in G Minor (K. 550)...Mozart

MORE than 20 years ago Howard Lang, visiting guest artist with the Arthur Casey Players at the Orpheum, this week in "The Silent House," was at the Century Theater here in "Climax." Only four were in the cast, three men and one girl, one of the smallest touring casts known. Since that time Mr. Lang has often been seen in St. Louis. With 37 years of stage experience behind him, has some noteworthy successes to his name. "The Monster" was specially written for him by Crane Wilbur. He played the Chinese intellectual opposite Florence Reed in "East of Suez." For almost 12 months he played at Royal Haymarket Theater, London, in "Friendly Enemies," the part played on Broadway by Louis Mann. In "Wake Up Jonathan," Mr. Lang appeared with Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske.

Included in the cast of "The Silent House" is Louis Tanno of the original New York cast. His role is that of Senor Peroda of Assam. Mr. Tanno has played in Spain, France and Italy as well as in most cities of this country. Grace Troy will appear as T'Mala; Arthur Pierson, leading man, as George Winsford; Pierre Watkin plays the part of Philip Barty; Alexander Campbell as Benson the butler; J. James Downing as Ho-Fank, the Chinese servant; S. Henry Novell as Mateo; Hixon Dicks as H'Wang, the mute.

"The Silent House" at one time was being played by 10 companies, two in America, including the Broadway company, with Mr. Lang; four in England, and one each in India, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand. Its authors, John Brandon and George Pickett, made large fortunes from the royalties.

WHEN Ethel Barrymore appears at the Shubert during the week of Jan. 27 she will be seen in two contrasting plays, G. Martinez Sierra's "The Kingdom of God" and Lili Hatvany's "The Love Duel." The first drama, which has proven one of Miss Barrymore's outstanding plays, was not expected to have the popular appeal it later proved to possess, but so impressed was the actress by the drama that she felt she must stage it, even if it ran but a single performance. It is not a religious piece in the generally accepted meaning of that term, for there is not a word about creeds or churches spoken throughout its entire three acts; nor is Sister Gracia, the chief character, a nun. In this role Miss Barrymore is seen at the varying ages of 19, 29 and 70.

"The Love Duel" was based on the lives of two people prominent in Hungarian society. On the occasion of its premiere in Budapest a gasp is said to have arisen from the audience which quickly recognized in Carlo and Lydia a man and woman well known in that city. As the title suggests, the story deals with a duel of love fought between two experts at the game. Zoe Atkins, former St. Louisan, author of "Declassee," in which Miss Barrymore starred several years ago, adapted "The Love Duel" for the American stage.

AND now that Producer E Carewe is going ahead wi plans to remake "The Spoiler as a talkie, movie old-timers ar recalling the excitement with which the old Selig forces greeted th author's demand of $2500 for th screen rights to his novel.

Rex Beach's price at the tim was considered exorbitant, and aft er months of bargaining a compro mise gave the author royalties in stead of a flat purchase price.

The picture, an elaborate nine reeler, opened April 11, 1914, at the Strand on Broadway, the thea ter which was the screen's first challenge to the legitimate stage of New York.

Enormously successful, it made famous its cast, including William Farnum, Thomas Santschi, Wheeler Oakman and Bess Eyton, while Beach's royalties rose to stagger ing figures over a period of years in which re-issues of the film were shown.

In 1923, a second silent version was made, this time with Milton Sills in the brawny leading role. Who will take the part in Carewe's production has not yet been announced, nor in fact, has any of the cast.

FROM time to time word comes from Hollywood about the prog ress being made in the produc tion of "Hell's Angels"—not to be confounded with "Hell's Heroes," which is at the Missouri this week—and considerable inter est has been built up in this film which, so far, has cost more than $3,000,000 with a first showing not yet in sight. Howard Hughes, producer-director of "Hell's Angels," is discussed constantly in film circles because he has invest ed all that money and three years in a picture. Hughes is 24, 6 feet 3 inches tall, slim, shy, and sound in his business knowledge. The only pictures he has produced: "Two Arabian Knight," "The Racket" and "Everybody's Acting," have been money-makers, and two of them won awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Art and Sciences. Louis Wolheim's talents as film actor and Lewis Milestone's abil ities as director first were given prominence through Mr. Hughes's use of them in his pictures.

The Hughes Tool Works of Houston employ 4000 men, and they were organized by Mr. Hughes' father. The young man fell heir to royalty rights on many patents on oil drilling machinery, inventions of his father. His in come from these sources is great.

Hughes does not like to be pho tographed, does not seek or wish personal publicity, is not in any sense the cartoonist's concept of a film producer. His knowledge of motion picture production is very considerable, particularly his store of information on sound. He ap proached motion pictures four years ago, as a student approaches a subject, as a business man an alyzes a problem.

There is, on the second floor of the Metropolitan Studios office building in Hollywood, a $25,000 projection room in which there are eight leather chairs, the most mod ern projection equipment in the country, every conceivable form of sound projection apparatus, a mod ernistic setting for the screen and uniform taste and comfort. It ad joins Mr. Hughes' private office, was built by him to view rushes of his pictures and to cut them, and has just been completed.

Mr. Hughes will go to New York in February, and so will the com pleted "Hell's Angels," all-talking, all-sound, part color. It will be road-showed in principal cities, ac cording to Mr. Hughes' present in tention.

Nothing even remotely touching the scope of "Hell's Angels" has ever come to the screen, avers a representative of United Artists who saw four reels of the picture in Hollywood. There are hundreds of planes diving at each other and toward the earth, Zeppelins fight ing off combat planes, whole vil lages blasted into smithereens, and authentic combat planes of various nations piloted by members of the Caterpillar Club and other aviators who risked their necks at every scene.

A large screen will be used in showing the picture in St. Louis and in other cities; and there is definite assurance that the first epic of the sound era—an epic that physically transcends "The Birth of a Nation," "The Covered Wagon" and the other silent ones —is on its way.

A Word of Praise

Beacon, N.Y., Jan. 14, '28.

"Just a word of praise for the good work that Scott's Emulsion has done in my family."

"I have four children, ages two, five, seven and nine. They are all what I call 'Scott's Emulsion babies', as they all take Scott's Emulsion regularly."

"The youngest child, age two years and one month, won first prize in a Baby Show that was held in Newburgh, N. Y. last August. Of 126 babies that were in the contest, my baby 'brought home the bacon'. I must say we all know that her health is due to using Scott's Emulsion."

"Two of my other children won similar prizes in past years and we always believe that it has been Scott's Emulsion that also brought them home with first prizes."

"The reason I am writing is because I want you and the World to know what Scott's Emulsion will do for children. It is the greatest health-builder I know of."

Yours truly,
JOHN O'DONNELL.

DE MILLE BOWS TO THE TALKIES WITH HIS DYNAMITE FILM

its butterfly career in the city as a special inducement to the loiterers who patronize the all-night theaters of the slum districts.

Or let the star but watch the evolution of a studio wardrobe, and thereby take a generous portion of humble pie. Today she goes for fittings of the new gowns for the picture which will enhance her popularity. Fresh, exquisite, alluring, the dresses are completed.

She wears them before the camera, they go back to the wardrobe room. In another film they are worn by bit-players. In still another, later, their now shabby daintiness adorns unknown extras.

At last they go to independent costume-rental establishments, to be rented by the day or week to "quickie" companies which cannot afford new ones.

In the end, worn practically to the last shred, they go into discard.

AND now that Producer Ed Carewe is going ahead with plans to remake "The Spoilers" as a talkie, movie old-timers are recalling the excitement with which the old Selig forces greeted the author's demand of $2500 for the screen rights to his novel.

Rex Beach's price at the time was considered exorbitant, and after months of bargaining a compromise gave the author royalties instead of a flat purchase price.

The picture, an elaborate nine-reeler, opened April 11, 1914, at the Strand on Broadway, the theater which was the screen's first challenge to the legitimate stage of New York.

Enormously successful, it made famous its cast, including William Farnum, Thomas Santschi, Wheeler Oakman and Bess Eyton, while Beach's royalties rose to staggering figures over a period of years in which re-issues of the film were shown.

In 1923, a second silent version was made, this time with Milton Sills in the brawny leading role. Who will take the part in Carewe's production has not yet been announced, nor in fact, has any of the cast.

FROM time to time word comes from Hollywood about the progress being made in the production of "Hell's Angels"—not to be confounded with "Hell's Heroes," which is at the Missouri this week—and considerable interest has been built up in this film which, so far, has cost more than $3,000,000 with a first showing not yet in sight. Howard Hughes, producer-director of "Hell's Angels," is discussed constantly in film circles because he has invested all that money and three years in a picture. Hughes is 24, 6 feet 3 inches tall, slim, shy, and sound in his business knowledge. The only pictures he has produced: "Two Arabian Knight," "The Racket" and "Everybody's Acting," have been money-makers, and two of them won awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Art and Sciences, Louis Wolheim's talents as film actor and Lewis Milestone's abilities as director first were given prominence through Mr. Hughes's use of them in his pictures.

The Hughes Tool Works of Houston employ 4000 men, and they were organized by Mr. Hughes' father. The young man fell heir to royalty rights on many patents on oil drilling machinery, inventions of his father. His income from these sources is great.

Hughes does not like to be photographed, does not seek or wish personal publicity, is not in any sense the cartoonist's concept of a film producer. His knowledge of motion picture production is very considerable, particularly his store of information on sound. He approached motion pictures four years ago, as a student approaches a subject, as a business man analyzes a problem.

There is, on the second floor of the Metropolitan Studios office building in Hollywood, a $25,000 projection room in which there are eight leather chairs, the most modern projection equipment in the country, every conceivable form of sound projection apparatus, a modernistic setting for the screen and uniform taste and comfort. It adjoins Mr. Hughes' private office, was built by him to view rushes of his pictures and to cut them, and has just been completed.

Mr. Hughes will go to New York in February, and so will the completed "Hell's Angels," all-talking, all-sound, part color. It will be road-showed in principal cities, according to Mr. Hughes' present intention.

Nothing even remotely touching the scope of "Hell's Angels" has ever come to the screen, avers a representative of United Artists who saw four reels of the picture in Hollywood. There are hundreds of planes diving at each other and toward the earth, Zeppelins fighting off combat planes, whole villages blasted into smithereens, and authentic combat planes of various nations piloted by members of the Caterpillar Club and other aviators who risked their necks at every scene.

A large screen will be used in showing the picture in St. Louis and in other cities; and there is definite assurance that the first epic of the sound era—an epic that physically transcends "The Birth of a Nation," "The Covered Wagon" and the other silent ones—is on its way.

A Word of Praise

Beacon, N. Y., Jan. 14, '28.

"Just a word of praise for the good work that Scott's Emulsion has done in my family."

"I have four children, ages two, five, seven and nine. They are all what I call 'Scott's Emulsion babies', as they all take Scott's Emulsion regularly."

"The youngest child, age two years and one month, won first prize in a Baby Show that was held in Newburgh, N. Y. last August. Of 126 babies that were in the contest, my baby 'brought home the bacon'. I must say we all know that her health is due to using Scott's Emulsion."

"Two of my other children won similar prizes in past years and we always believe that it has been Scott's Emulsion that also brought them home with first prizes."

"The reason I am writing is because I want you and the World to know what Scott's Emulsion will do for children. It is the greatest health-builder I know of."

Yours truly,
JOHN O'DONNELL.

Rich in Civil War Traditions, Virginia Takes Influx of Yankee Progress Coolly, Churchill Finds

Visits Battlefield and Discovers Lee's Campaign in Old Dominion Cannot be Understood from Maps and Books.

By WINSTON CHURCHILL.

(Copyright, Quotations not allowed)

THIS is the eighth of ten articles by Winston Spencer Churchill, British statesman, on his impressions during a recent tour. Churchill, who was First Lord of the Admiralty at the beginning of the World War, was Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Conservative Cabinet which went out of office when Ramsay MacDonald became Prime Minister. In next Sunday's article he will write of a visit to Washington.

IT takes only a few hours to go from Washington to Richmond, but we breathe a different air. It is another country. The scenes of bustling progress, of thriving and profuse prosperity, the echoes of the last word in modernity, have been left behind. We have exchanged the twentieth century for the nineteenth. We have crossed the mysterious boundaries which separate the present from the past. More than that, we have crossed the frontiers which divide victory from defeat. We are in the Confederate capital.

A mellow light plays around long-beleaguered, valiantly defended, world-famous Virginia. The hum of Chicago, the roar of New York, even the tranquil prosperity of California, all are absent. We have entered the domain of history. We march with Lee and Jackson, with Stuart and with Longstreet, through lonely woodlands.

From noon till night, with guides excelling in every detail of military history, we chase McClellan through the Seven Days' Battles. We begin with A. P. Hill in the two days' struggle at Gaines' Mill, while Jackson's marching columns, brought so swiftly and secretly from the valley of the Shenandoah, cannot cope with the difficulties of the ground. It is not until late on the second day that the general attack of Lee's Confederates can be launched against the Union right—thousands of men isolated on the northern bank of the Chickahominy. Then a fierce struggle in the summer evening until darkness falls, and the Union troops magnificently resisting during their retreat by their five bridges across the river, sullenly covered by their heavy guns. And now a fatal day of uncetainty and delay. The fog of war! Where has McClellan gone? Will he hurl himself upon the denuded lines which cover Richmond, or will be recoil to his base on the York? Either move is loaded with desperate peril for both armies; a day of cruel suspense for Lee!

Lee's Amazing Decision.

It is not until after dark on the third day that we know which course is taken. He has taken neither. With amazing decision and celerity he has thrown away his communications; he has severed himself from his base. He has established a new base on salt water; has ordered his fleet and store ships to meet him there, and is marching down the peninsula with his whole army in a long flank march across the front of the Richmond lines. Lee has not comprehended the meaning of sea power.

Swift, then, to strike him as he moves, we hurry back with Lee almost into Richmond, and, leaving Jackson to follow the Federal tracks, pour down the roads which radiate from the capital toward Savage's Station and White Oak Swamp. Now to cut the Union army in half as it toils along a single road! But our columns lag, the detour has been too much, the staff work is imperfect, the maneuver is too elaborate; we have not got the trained personnel to handle such complex affairs. McClellan's flank guard holds firm long enough to let the 30-mile blue serpent—nearly 100,000 men, with all their wagons and artillery, marching in one column—slip past the hoped-for point of interception. We make another detour, and strike again furiously at Malvern Hill. But here McClellan has entrenched again in full force and commands a tremendous position. His left is impregnable, and before we have found out that his right can be turned, our own center has attacked spontaneously—at half-cock as it were—and we are committed to general battle. Again a bloody struggle; again late at night the Union positions are stormed; again McClellan retreats under the cover of darkness; and this time brings his whole army intact and in perfect order safely into his new base at Harrison's Landing, under the all-powerful guns of his fleet.

We thought we had him rounded up; but he had marched through the jaws of death. Never mind, we have driven him 20 miles farther from Richmond, and we have gathered 35,000 good rifles from the battlefield. Important, this, because it is so difficult to fight without good rifles. Even the best Generals and the bravest troops find it hard.

Seeing Is Understanding.

It was with deep interest that I followed these memorable operations. No one can understand what happened merely through reading books and studying maps. You must see the ground; you must cover the distances in person; you must measure the rivers, and see what the swamps are really like. It is difficult for the modern eye, accustomed to judge military positions in miles, to adjust itself to these battlefields, where the troops faced each other erect in solid lines at a few hundred yards' range. And the Chickahominy River! What a surprise! It is little more than a woodland stream. And White Oak Swamp!—a thicket with some puddles. These were the days when the greatest dramas were played on miniature stages.

I was astonished also by the numerous traces which remain after nearly three-quarters of a century. The farm house and the churches still show the scars of shot and shell; the woods are full of trenches and rifle pits; the larger trees are full of bullets. Before the War Museum in Richmond still flies a tattered Confederate flag. If you could read men's hearts, you would find that they, too, bear the marks.

We stayed with Gov. Byrd, where Jefferson Davis ruled, and saw the Parliament Buildings where Washington and Lee received their commissions, where Virginia declared secession. I declined a warm-hearted invitation to visit Yorktown, to take part in the celebration of the hundred and sixty-third anniversary of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis. The Civil War makes better reading.

To Fredericksburg.

Accordingly next day I motored 60 miles along the famous turnpike to Fredericksburg. Here again the battlefields tell their own story. Admirable descriptive iron plates, erected at the cost of Virginia, and inscribed by deeply instructed hands, fix almost every historical point. The stone wall and sunken road at Fredericksburg; the cemeteries of Union and Confederate soldiers; the trench lines trailing away through the deserted forest, revive the past with strange potency. Here, south of the Rappahannock, is another wide area of battlefields, on which perhaps more soldiers have perished in an equal space than anywhere, excepting around Ypres and Verdun. Here the campaigns lie one upon the other, and Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville are overlaid by the Wilderness and Spottsylvania.

The trenches criss-cross one an-

STUDENT ESSAY CONTEST ON TOPICS ABOUT ST. LOUIS

Freshman Tuition at College to Be First Prize in News Service Competition.

An essay contest Jan. 15 to March 15 for students in public, private and parochial schools of St. Louis and St. Louis County was announced yesterday by Thomas W. Parry Jr., director of St. Louis News Service, which is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and the Industrial Club.

The boy and girl submitting the winning essays will each receive freshman tuition in any college or university in the United States. Three other boys and three girls will each receive a bronze replica of the medal presented by the city to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Essays, 1500 to 2000 words in length, may be on "any subject pertaining to the growth or history of St. Louis, its natural resources or peculiar advantages.

WINSTON CHURCHILL WRITES OF VISIT TO VIRGINIA BATTLE FIELDS

other; the monuments of dead commanders and shot-torn regiments are of diffent years. An earthy palimpsest of tragedy! Our guide observed, "My father was wounded here; he is still living in Richmond. His memory is perfect."

We were anxious to see the celebrated "Bloody Angle" in the salient of the Spottsylvania lines. The sandy tracks through the wild wooded region are intricate. We stopped at a farm house for information. The farmer, a tall man, hearty and strong, came out of a substantial dwelling.

"Yes! it is quite easy to get there. Turn off the high road half a mile back. Wait, I will go with you myself."

We jolted along. "See, here is the line," he said, "the main trench is further on."

Saw Start of Battle.

"You know all this very well?" I remarked.

"I have lived here all my life. I was here when the battle was fought."

"How old were you?"

"Eight!"

"Tell me exactly what you remember."

So then he told an unvarnished tale of how he and his father and two other children were in their farm house (not the present house but a cottage a hundred yards away), and how suddenly one morning, very early, swarms of troops arrived 'like bees'!

"The officer told us to pack up and clear out, for there was going to be a fight. My father told me to get them some water, which I did from the old well, while he put the horse in the cart and flung what he could snatch into it; and we drove off just as the cannon began and the shots whistled about. It was three or four days later when we came back. Our house was in ruins. There must have been a thousand dead men lying in that field below it. We had nothing left in the world. We were terribly hungry. We collected broken biscuits from among the dead."

The car stopped. We alighted and walked through sunlit glades of small oak, beech and maple.

"Here is the Angle," said our guide. "Here is where the dead lay thickest. Yes! in this trench they were piled in heaps, both sides together, blue and gray. We came here while the firing was still going on a mile or two away.

A Stream of Red

"My father scolded me for trying to take the boots off a dead soldier why lay here. See that little gully there? It was pouring with rain, and all the water running along it was red. You know," he added, "a little blood goes a long way."

A small boy came up with a basketful of bullets and regimental badges from the forgotten gleanings of a fearful harvest. We took some of these poor relics—all there is to show! Ah! No! Great causes have been settled. Destiny pivoting here has stamped the ground with a ruthless hell; the path of the world takes a different turn henceforward. Not in vain these deeds were done.

During the last few years, Virginia and the Southern states have at last begun a decided recovery. Industries, particularly textiles, have shifted from the North. Motor roads lace the towns together. Swift cars fly to and fro; here and there skyscrapers shoot upwards. The population of Virginia is undergoing a rapid increase. The old inhabitants are going to get rich; their lands are rising in value. There is an influx of busy industrials from the North. The Virginians take all this very coolly. "No doubt it will be nice to be rich and prosperous and go ahead, but still," they say, "we managed to get on all right before. We had a quiet life and culture of our own. Will it all be swamped by these new elements? We were knocked out of the world 70 years ago. We are not so very keen on going back. It may be progress, but it is Yankee progress. Now, in the old ways before war. . . .

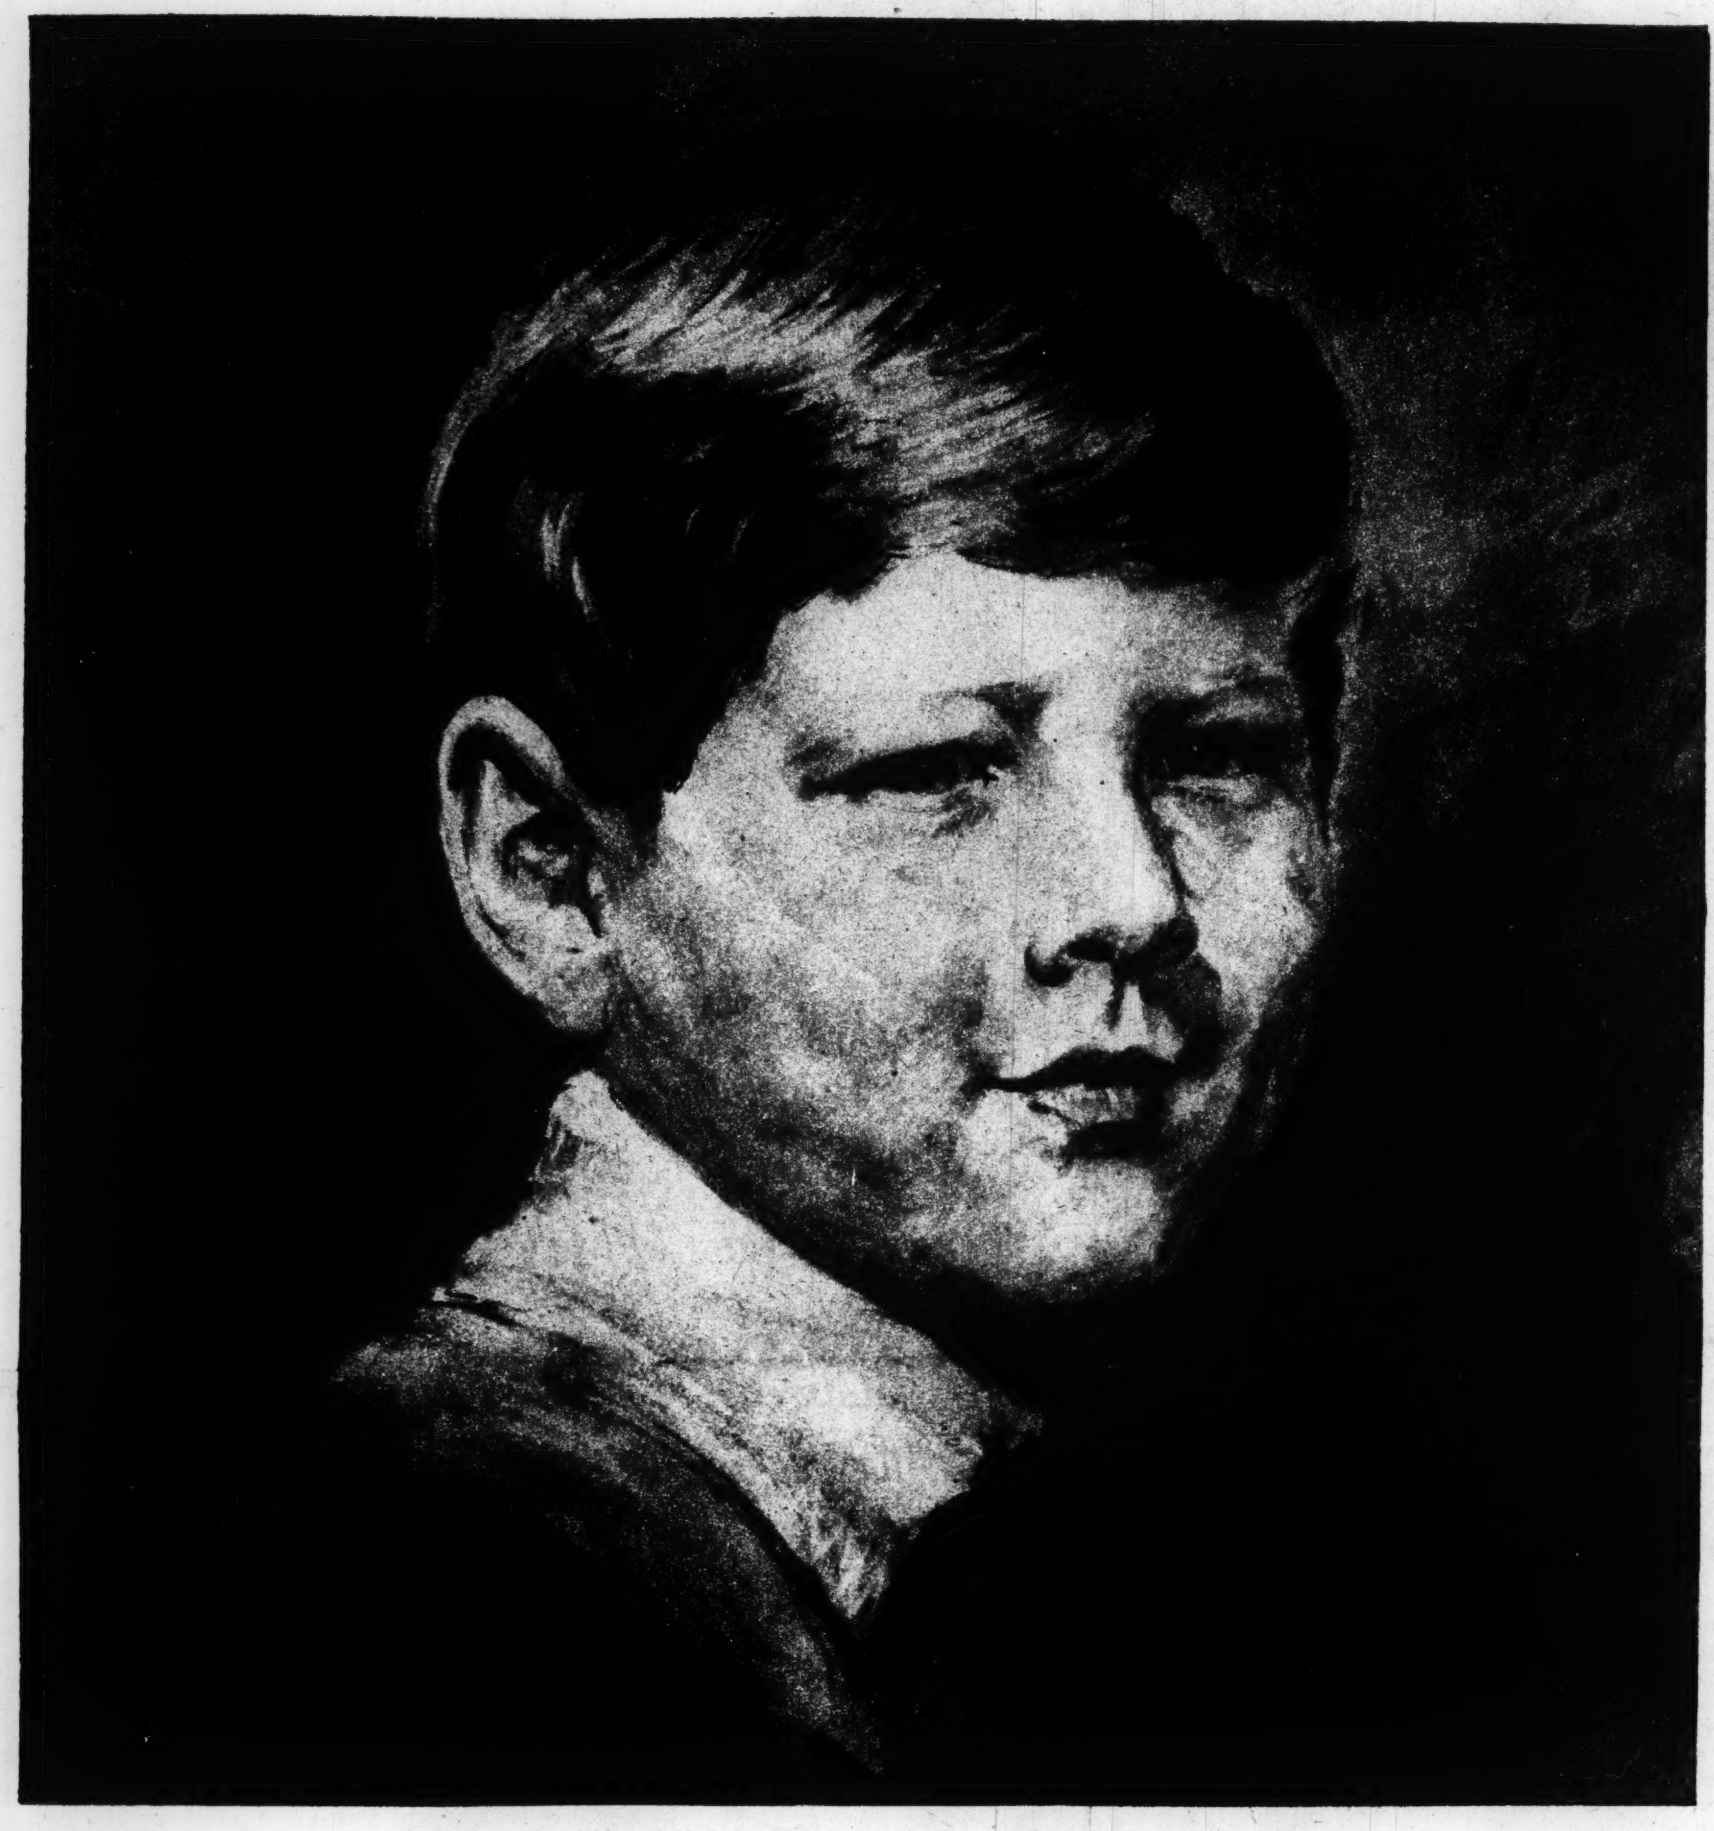
The First Authentic Interview With

The BOY KING of RUMANIA



Michael, the eight-year-old King of Rumania, and four snapshots showing him at play.

By F. J. DE KELED

"GOOD MORNING, Your Majesty!" An 8-year-old boy steps toward me, a faint smile on his face as he offers me his hand. I bow. He smiles cordially, showing two dimples in his cheeks—this sovereign over 18,000,000 souls, this King, in a few years, over life and death; and nothing but a pink-cheeked boy. It is King Michael I, 8-year-old master of Rumania; the grandson of Queen Marie; the son of Princess Helen and Prince Carol. He has something of the strong personality of his father; eyes that tell an expressive story, skin that shows the royal blood, manners of the stately old Spanish code of etiquette. He holds his head majestically.

"Good morning, sir," he answers in good English, and, turning his head, greets in Rumanian the group of bowing courtiers, his attaches, the satellites who revolve around him. We are walking through the gardens of the royal castle at Sinaia. Guards are everywhere; as the King passes they present arms.

"It's sunny today. The air is so clear. There is seldom so cloudless a sky," remarks the little King, as he looks around at the mountain peaks, close by and distant, which surround the huge and elaborate royal estate. The beautifully cultivated parks might have been at Fontainebleau, or Potsdam, so perfectly are they arranged.

THE little boy seems to enjoy nature, and, as we go farther, he leaves us and starts to run toward a stretch of open lawn. We increase our pace, not knowing quite what to do, but just as we start to run, the King stops. He stands stiffly at salute before the flag of his country, fluttering at the peak of a high flagpole. To one side, in platoon front, the palace guards are led by the Colonel commanding the Royal Bodyguard in salute to the flag, also. His respects to the sacred emblem of his country paid—a daily ceremony—the King salutes the Colonel gravely and turns sharply away. His face shows an entirely different expression now, quite serious, quite king-like. But, as he nears us, he is more and more the boy again. We are now a crowd of about seventeen people. I am standing on the left of General Costescu, Inspector-General of the Rumanian Army, and personal adjutant to the King. Others are the King's governess, the chief valet of the castle, three officers, a chauffeur, stableman and servants.

As we start again to continue our promenade along the smooth gravel paths I ask His Majesty what he likes best to do. And now, just as any boy of any country would answer, whatever his means, he starts to tell me his long list of favored pastimes. Not going to school, of course, but traveling, outdoor sports, and every sort of active play; running, playing ball, bicycling, horseback riding and driving a car. A farm boy of about the same age from Iowa told me the same things a few years ago.

A little later, as if to prove the truth of his feelings, His Majesty calls:

"Eugen! Get me my bicycle!"

A Ruler of Eighteen Million Subjects, but He Likes Sweets and Goes Unwillingly to School Like Any Other Eight - Year - Old.

The bicycle appears as if from a magician's hand. The King mounts and soon he is riding confidently. The governess and the footman begin running after him. Twice around the castle the panting couple follow him. Then, laughing over his shoulder, he gives them the slip by pedaling at full speed down the long hill to the garages. Full of anxiety, the governess is shouting after him:

"Be careful, Your Majesty! You'll fall!"

Everybody is concerned over the precious body of the boy Michael, who has forgotten that he is His Majesty the King. The long-legged footman says nothing, but races after his master at full speed. Arrived at the garages, the King hands over his bicycle and orders his automobile, which is a small electrically-driven roadster, just big enough for the royal child and an adult companion.

We wait expectantly, as if we were watching Douglas Fairbanks trying to start his car on Hollywood Boulevard. But the King's auto is of a different make. It starts noiselessly, and with perfect assurance Michael opens the throttle and begins tooling around the graveled drives at a speed of about eight miles an hour. The boy's face is flushed with happiness, and his mouth is a straight line, as he drives with utter concentration. Again the governess and a chauffeur chase madly after him to see that he comes to no harm. Soon the boy's nervousness relaxes and he begins teasing his pursuers by letting them almost catch up with him, and then putting on speed to pull away.

"That's the nicest present Uncle Nicky ever gave me!" he says joyously, as he gets out.

There is a chorus: "Well done, Your Majesty!"

Uncle Nicky, incidentally, is His Royal Highness, Prince Nicholas, member of the Regency Council of Rumania, which governs the country until the King's coming of age.

His Majesty stops in front of a large clump of shrubbery.

"Have you a penknife?" he asks one of his aides.

"I have, Your Majesty," is the reply. "Large or small?"

"Both!"

The official presents the penknives to the King. With a few heavy slashes of the larger penknife, he cuts off one of the branches cleanly.

"Well done, Your Majesty," says a guardsman.

"I can cut a very much bigger one," is the King's modest reply. With the aid of the smaller knife the branch in the King's hands soon takes the form of a very thin walking stick. It gives him an attractive new idea. His face is alight with enthusiasm as he asks:

"Shall we do something in the carpenter shop?"

"We are afraid that is impossible, today, Your Majesty," is the answer he receives. "Her Royal Highness has forbidden it." And, although carpentry work is one of the King's great passions, he no longer insists. As we near the palace the King puts on an air of mystery.

"I'll give you a big surprise! You want to photograph me, and so I'm going to get ready."

Ten minutes later His Majesty appears beside his personal adjutant, Major Mardarescu, quite a different little man. His new clothes consist of a gray flannel suit with long trousers.

"I wish you well to wear them," says the Inspector General.

"Thank you, Costescu," replies the King.

Noticing that one of the trouser cuffs is disarranged the Inspector-General stoops down to put it in place. "Now Your Majesty is quite big," he says admiringly.

The King, greatly flattered, smiles his satisfaction, showing a dimple in each cheek. He is obviously filled with pride as he leans forward and fingers the creases. Then, pointing toward the Inspector's trousers, he says: "Those are the sort I would like."

"You shall have such, also, but I prefer Your Majesty's," Costescu replies.

The next hour is devoted to taking picture after picture of a boy in his first long-trouser suit, of a young gentleman in a country setting, and of a young King, born of a line of Kings. Just as the last picture is taken, a butler comes up and announces the King's "second breakfast." Below one of the terraces on the lawn a table is spread. Michael leads the way.

WITH the nonchalance of perfect command, he invites us to share the royal meal. Milk for him, tea for us, and toast, jam, marmalade, biscuits and fruit for everyone. Like all boys, he reaches first for the sweets. But nobody here is going to stop him. Today he has on his first long pants and he has guests and the governess doesn't want to spoil the occasion by forbidding him what he wants. He is eating heartily, but he remembers his manners with every mouthful.

The porcelain is from Dresden, the silver from Italy, the linen damask from France, the preserved fruit from England, Florida and California.

The little King is at his jolliest, so happy is he at the unusual privilege of being the sole host, even though it is only at a breakfast table al fresco.

Suddenly Michael becomes aware of a portly and dignified figure stalking up and down the terrace, watch ostentatiously in hand—the very image of a bearded and frock-coated Old-World professor. At first the King deliberately looks away; then, his conscience apparently bothering him, he gets up, a rebellious frown clouding his face for a moment.

"I'm afraid I'll have to get back to my studies. Good-by, gentlemen." He smiles a little wistfully, and walks very slowly toward his waiting tutor.

I couldn't help thinking that here was no ordinary little boy who need learn "readin', ritin' and 'rithmetic," but one whose job in life required him to master half a dozen languages, the history of all nations, the geography of all the world, and the statesmanship of all time, besides such other necessary subjects as literature, the arts and philosophy. Learning to be a King must be hard work. And poor Michael, apparently, cares about as much for schooling as any of us did at his age!

Suzanne Lenglen now a Saleswoman

Suzanne in action.

The Girl Who Became the Greatest Tennis Player of Her Sex—and Dramatized Herself All the Way—Makes Another Excursion Into the Limelight.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

SUZANNE LENGLEN, who made, they say, at least $250,000 in a professional tennis tour of America in 1927, she whose glistening racket and swift strides once marked her tennis queen of the world, has gone to work in a Paris shop as a saleswoman.

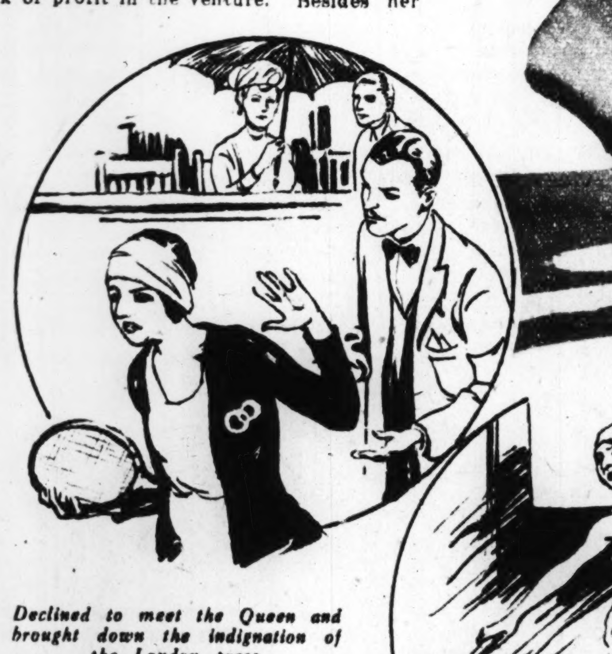
There is a rumor afloat on the Paris boulevards that Suzanne is broke. There are other rumors that she isn't. Some say she badly needs her saleswoman's salary. Others say she doesn't need it at all. Nobody seems to know and Suzanne will not clear up the mystery.

But this much is evident: Suzanne, who once declined to meet Queen Mary of England, Suzanne the imperious and obdurate, is at work in a small woman's shop, showing dresses, trying to sell them, explaining the new style, saying, "But Madame, is not this shade, this design, the perfection of perfection, is it not the perfect fit? Shall I send it home?"

All Mademoiselle Lenglen will say about her new employment is that she "hopes to make a lot of money," and that she is engaging in the business of selling dresses as a preliminary step to asking for reinstatement to her amateur tennis rank. And, as usual, Suzanne has managed to make even this commonplace act seem dramatic.

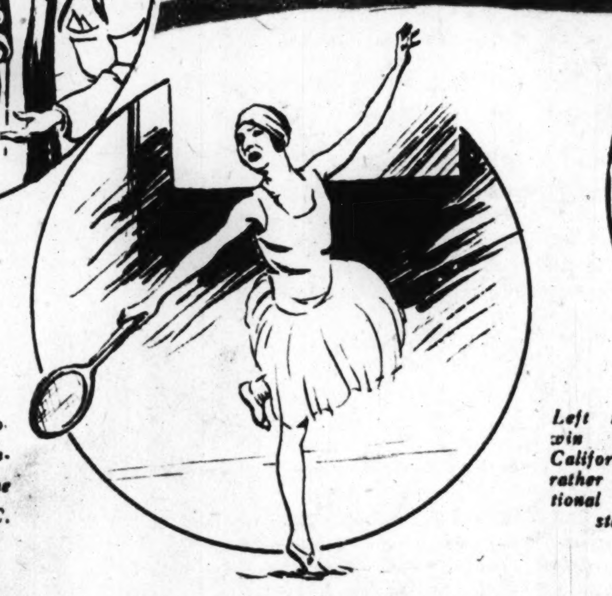
It was the promoting Mr. C. C. Pyle of "Red" Grange fame who commercialized the name of Lenglen and brought the round dollars of the U. S. A. pouring into her lap. With several other tennis stars, turned professional, including Vincent Richards, Lenglen barn-stormed about the country with Pyle's tennis circus.

They played in something like 40 cities and towns and there was no lack of profit in the venture. Besides her share of the admissions, there was for Suzanne a lusty royalty on all the advertising uses her name was loaned to, and they used her name for advertising just about everything from tennis balls to appointments for the kitchen.



Declined to meet the Queen and brought down the indignation of the London press.

Then Pyle proposed a world tour for his circus. But, it seemed, Lenglen could not agree with the promoter on the price. It was not that Lenglen wanted less than her backers were willing to give her, quite the opposite.



Played professional tennis under the aegis of C. C. Pyle.

And, it was noised about, a certain young man she had met was now advising her as to her financial opportunities. Who was he? Rumor, rumor, rumor. He was, they said, Mr. Baldwin M. Baldwin of California, grandson of E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin, who made a fortune in mining.

It was in 1927, her barn-storming concluded, that Suzanne and her mother and Baldwin M. Baldwin sailed for France, Baldwin not going in the role of suitor, it was said, but as Mademoiselle's manager. But manager or not, rumors still persisted that Baldwin and Suzanne were to wed—but there was just one difficulty and that was a rather considerable one: Baldwin already had a wife. And two children.

As Baldwin's wife showed no disposition to release her mate, that was just about all there was to it—for the time being.

Suzanne stayed away from these shores until December, 1928. Then she returned with her mother. And Mr. Baldwin Baldwin again was very much in evidence.

It was a gala visit. In a special railroad car furnished by the Baldwins, Suzanne and her mother crossed the continent. The Baldwin home at Arcadia, not far from Los Angeles, was their objective. Once there they became the guests of Baldwin's mother, Mrs. Anita Baldwin, and a very fine visit it promised to be there in that palatial mansion.

But—it wasn't.

It seems that Suzanne and her mother formed the habit of speaking to each other in French in Mrs. Baldwin's presence. Mrs. Baldwin didn't understand the language and consequently Mrs. Baldwin didn't know what they were talking about. But, thought the lady, after all, that is their language. And their discussions, more than likely, are confined to trivialities or passing remarks of no importance to their hostess.

So the Lenglens talked French.

But—Mrs. Baldwin had a French maid. Now the Lenglens, of course, knew the girl to be a countrywoman of theirs. But for that very reason, it appears, they felt the maid would let them rattle on as they saw fit without acting as translator to her mistress. That was exactly what the maid didn't do. She told Mrs. Baldwin just what her honored guests were saying about her—and according to the maid's story the honored guests, jabbering in French before their hostess, were discussing what they considered her shortcomings. The Lenglens, the maid told Mrs. Baldwin, were commenting about wrinkles they thought they saw on Mrs. Baldwin's hands, commenting, even, that they thought her hands unshapely.

Exit the Lenglens from the home of Mrs. Baldwin in short order. The Lenglens retired briefly to a Los Angeles hotel, and the next thing they were on their way east toward New York and the Atlantic Ocean.

They boarded a steamer and who was there beside them? None other than Baldwin Baldwin. And with Baldwin Baldwin was the attorney, Dudley Field Malone, who informed the newspaper men that he was going to try to get a divorce for Baldwin Baldwin in Paris.

But Suzanne still isn't Madame Baldwin Baldwin.

Suzanne says she is working preparatory to asking for her amateur reinstatement. Suzanne, then, would play upon the courts of the world again, and the world certainly includes England. But there are considerable numbers of people in France who doubt that Suzanne will ever tread an English tennis court in tournament play again. They recall that snub to England's Queen.

Suzanne leaving the courts at Forest Hills, Long Island, after she experienced a nervous breakdown while playing Mrs. Molla Mallory.

And is now a salesgirl.

That happened at Wimbledon. Despite the fact Queen Mary paid Lenglen the compliment of making a special journey from Buckingham Palace to Wimbledon to see the Frenchwoman play, Mademoiselle Lenglen deliberately refused to get into action.

The Queen passed off the incident smilingly. She didn't comment one way or the other on the fact that she had been offered an affront. Suzanne was on the grounds at Wimbledon, yet she even refused presentation to Queen Mary. This didn't make Suzanne popular in the British Isles.

A FEW days later Suzanne tried to explain her slight of the Queen by pleading she had been suffering from rheumatism. But the British newspapers did not stretch out their arms in forgiveness. They lit into her, very much in the manner of the American newspapers on the occasion back in 1921 when Suzanne, who was taking a sound drubbing from Molla Mallory at Forest Hills, Long Island, suddenly was seized with a convulsion of coughing and left the court with the match unfinished. That time Lenglen contended she was suffering from bronchitis. But it was charged openly that Suzanne was faking the cough; that she left the court to keep from being defeated.

When Suzanne flouted royalty, the English papers accused her of "running out" through fear of being licked by certain American women stars.

And now Suzanne, having made a neat pile at professional tennis, wants to go back to amateur rank.

Discussing her job as saleswoman with newspaper men, Mlle. Lenglen said:

"I have always wanted to do this sort of work—selling clothes. I adore clothes. I am through with tennis for the time being at least. I hope to make lots of money, just lots of money."

Just about that time the representative of a London paper turned the conversation.

"MADEMOISELLE," he said, "what about that chap in the United States to whom you once were engaged?"

"What chap?" she asked. "Whom do you mean?" And Mademoiselle's eyes flashed with all the fire they used to display at Wimbledon and Forest Hills.

"That fellow, Baldwin M. Baldwin," broke in the representative of an American daily.

"Baldwin Baldwin," she replied, not altogether pleasantly. "Baldwin has nothing at all to do with my job."

And when she was asked if she and Baldwin still contemplated matrimony, Lenglen refused to talk about it.

There have been many notables rumored engaged to Suzanne. Once it was Jacques Offenbach, the poet. Then it was Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraten, who in amateur days often was her doubles partner. But the Count was in the same fix as Baldwin Baldwin, he too had a wife, the former Millicent Rogers. When the Count and his wife were divorced, the Count married a Parisian beauty. During the winter of 1925 Suzanne was reported engaged to the Duke of Westminster, but the Duke denied it, and did it vehemently. At another time Suzanne's supposed fiance was an American dentist living on the Riviera, one Dr. Charles Willen. But when asked about it, Dr. Willen simply said, "Ridiculous."

SUZANNE is said to be getting the highest pay of any saleswoman in Paris, but just how much that is no one seems to know. The shop in which she works is in what once was the palace of Cardinal Fesch, uncle of Napoleon. In the courtyard of the palace an outdoor salesroom is being fitted out and in it will be a combination tennis court and putting green.

The job smacks of some permanency, for Suzanne has moved her household furnishings from Nice to Paris.

And Paris wonders. Why is she working? Does she have to work? For Suzanne's earnings during the past 10 years are said to have been among the greatest of any contemporary athlete. Among other things, she wrote a book, called "The Love Match," and though the critics didn't think much of it, it went over like a best seller.

But that is past and done with. And Suzanne is selling dresses.

Morgan, and the lovely Mrs. Josephine Rotch Bigelow, brilliant young Boston society woman, were found shot to death in the studio of an artist friend in the Hotel s Artistes here, the other day, the tragedy had all who knew them at the end of their wits. Both had everything to live for, both were known to be in love with their respective mates. How had this come about? Their friends could hardly believe it, yet here were these young people dead and Harry Crosby's pistol was in his hand.

Slowly, like persons coming out from a horrible nightmare, the intimate friends of Harry Crosby, who admired him as a poet and loved him as an individual, are beginning to reconstruct the intricate motives behind the shocking tragedy.

All the intimates of Josephine Rotch and Harry Crosby knew that the two had a great fondness for each other. They even made no secret of the fact of their love, but it was a love not at all rare among the sophisticates, a purely intellectual love. Only a few weeks before she was married last June to Albert S. Bigelow, popular young Harvard hockey star, she talked freely to friends about her triangle.

"I love Harry but I am IN love with Bert," was the way she put it, "and I know that Harry is madly in love with Caresse (Mrs. Crosby). We all understand one another perfectly!"

WHILE the police and the sensationalist newspapers immediately jumped to the conclusion of a suicide pact, all who knew the two intimately protested vehemently that such an interpretation was entirely out of the question. In the first place, they argued, such a pact would be wholly out of character for either of the two. In the second place, all their acts immediately preceding the tragedy belie such a theory.

Both were seen at separate luncheon parties by friends, each in gay, carefree mood. She told everyone she was going "to meet Harry," and excused herself early, saying she had a lot of things to do later, a dinner date with other friends, to be followed by a party arranged in her honor.

"What are you and Harry going to do this afternoon?" someone asked jokingly.

"Oh," was the laughing reply, "I am going to ask him to take me to the movies. He'll probably have some wild idea of something else to do, so I guess we'll end up by having a fight. We always end up in a fight, but we always make up."

She said it all laughingly, and everybody else laughed, for everybody knew that a fight with Harry Crosby meant merely an amusing argument. That was the last image these particular friends have of the living Josephine Bigelow, a gay, laughing young figure, breezily going out of the door. The next thing they saw was her picture on the front page of every newspaper, with headlines announcing that she and Harry Crosby had been found dead.

To find the key to the solution of the tragic puzzle the intimate friends of the young poet seek it in three reliable sources: His ancestry and early environment, his intellectual and artistic associations in Paris, where he had lived uninterruptedly the last six years, and his inner mental workings, as expressed consciously and subconsciously in his poetry and prose.

The young poet, they point out, came from a long line of New England Puritans, used for generations to emotional suppression and stoic self-denial. He was brought up in the same rigid tradition. The exclusive St. Mark's School at Southboro from early childhood, then Harvard. After college he was sent to train for a career as an international banker, with the idea of his eventually coming back to settle down to the respectable life of a rich Boston banker and to perpetuate the family tradition and position.

BUT after long generations of emotional suppression it does not take much for some long-smoldering spark to burst into flame. Young Crosby, impressionable and a poet by nature, fell in with the rebellious, extremist group of young artists in post-war Paris. There was Picasso, James Joyce, Andre Breton, Paul Eluard, Jean Cocteau, Phillipe Soupault, to mention only a few of the leaders of modern revolt in arts and letters. Harry Crosby was fascinated. Then and there he broke with the family tradition, gave up banking and took up poetry.

Being independently rich, he could indulge in whatever whims to which his fancy gave birth. He established an unusual town apartment at 19 Rue de Lille, Paris. For a summer home he bought part of the estate of the Count de la Rochefoucauld at Ermenonville and converted an ancient windmill there into an ultra-modernistic studio, which he named "Moulin de Soleil" (Mill of the Sun). Here he organized a polo team with donkeys in place of horses. Young Crosby and his wife, Caresse, herself a poet of distinction, started entertaining lavishly. Mrs. Crosby married the poet in 1922. She is a daughter of Mrs. William H. Jacob of Watertown, Connecticut, and was previously married to Richard R. Peabody, from whom she was divorced shortly before her marriage to Crosby, the decree giving her custody of the two children. Both Crosby and his wife, brought up to wealth, not only spent but gave most generously to young artists. Their homes became the intellectual and artistic centers of all the younger spirits, successors to the Decadents, Parnassians, Satanists, Symbolists, Diabolists and other movements in French belles-lettres during the second half of the nineteenth century.

As time went on young Crosby grew to be more and more of a rebel. "All compromise with me is impossible," he wrote in the current number of transition, which he and his wife owned. (This magazine purposely avoids the use of a capital letter in its name.) "I rejoice in the dangerous automatic liberty which deprives man of the volition which constitutes him a being responsible for his actions. I continually feel hurricanes of magic storming into me as wild and insane as eagles catapulting themselves into the sun.

"The inward nerves of my vision are beyond the sentiments of my heart and have no communication with the operations of my intellect. I boast of having effected this in a very complete manner by having caught and distilled certain rays of light from the sun."

He used to lie for hours at a time on top of his "sunmill" sunk in reverie, paying homage to the sun in daily ritual. He became a thorough-going sun worshiper. And along with that he became a seeker, in the true manner of the Romantics, of the "perfect moment" in which "the soul and the senses are reduced to a pin point, the ultimate gold point, the point of finality, irrevocable as the sun."

WHEN this "perfect moment" came to him, he kept reiterating in conversation and in poetry, then would also come the moment of death, for all life then would be full of "the horrors of anti-climax from which there is no recovering." To be ever ready for that "perfect moment," and in order not to be taken by it unawares, he began several years ago to carry in his pocket a small Belgian pistol, no larger than a toy, the pistol found clutched in his right hand on the tragic Tuesday.

"Die at the right time!" he wrote in a prose-poem, named significantly, "Hail: Death!" "No matter where you are . . . at the right time, when your senses are concentrated, when your entire life, your soul and body, are reduced to a pin-point, a sun-point, then is the time, and not until then, and not AFTER then, for us to penetrate into the cavern of the somber Slave-Girl of Death, in order to be reborn, to become what you wish to become, tree or flower or star or sun, or even dust and nothingness, for it is stronger to founder in the Black Sea of Nothingness, like a ship going down with flags, than to crawl into the malodorous house of evil and old age.

"For the Seekers after Fire and the Seers and the Prophets and the Worshipers of the Sun, life ends not with a whimper but with a Bang—a violent explosion mechanically perfect . . . we, having set fire to the powder house of our souls, explode (suns within suns and cataracts of gold) into the frenzied fury of the Sun, into the madness of the Sun, into the hot gold arms and hot gold eyes of the Goddess of the Sun!"

These lines, reread now in the light of his act, tell as any suicide note would, not only the motive behind his act, but also illuminate like a flash of lightning, his friends say, what actually took place at the moment just before death.

THE "perfect moment had come," they explain, and with "inward nerves of vision beyond the sentiments of his heart and with no communication with the operations of his intellect," he ended his life with a bang—a violent explosion mechanically perfect!

Neither the young poet nor the girl knew a moment before, according to this theory, what was going to take place. It was a mad impulse of the moment, entirely beyond the control of the intellect. And in that mad moment he took the woman down with him "into the frenzied fury of the Sun, into the hot gold arms and the hot gold eyes of the Goddess of the Sun."

Even the details of the belt-buckle fashioned from a $20 gold piece and the removal of the woman's shoes and stockings are explained in his late writings.

"What is it in the sun I defy?" he wrote, then mentioned a long list of reasons, one of these being "the reproduction of him on the American $20 gold piece."

"The Man in the Moon is as rose-colored as our fingernails," he writes, "as we go out hand in hand into the garden, you and I, to somewhere beyond the sleeping roses, but although you remove your silk stockings and I my silk socks, the star butler with his silver tray never reappears and we are forced to find our way home along the bottom of the lake."

Then he wrote of a "nightmare in the shape of an empty bed in the

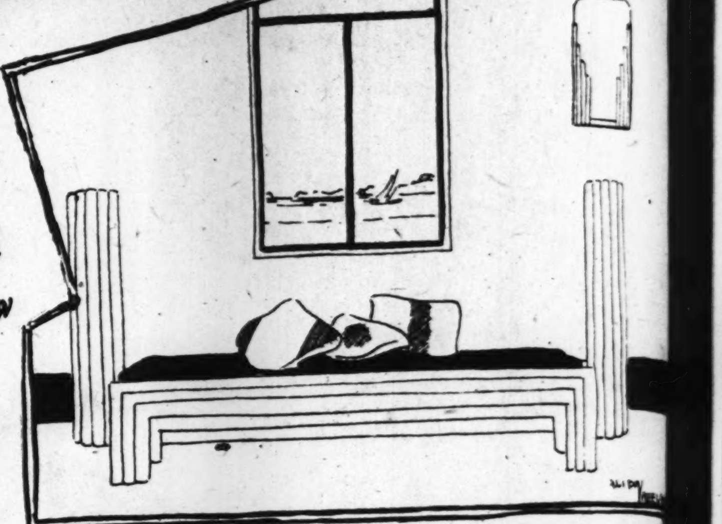
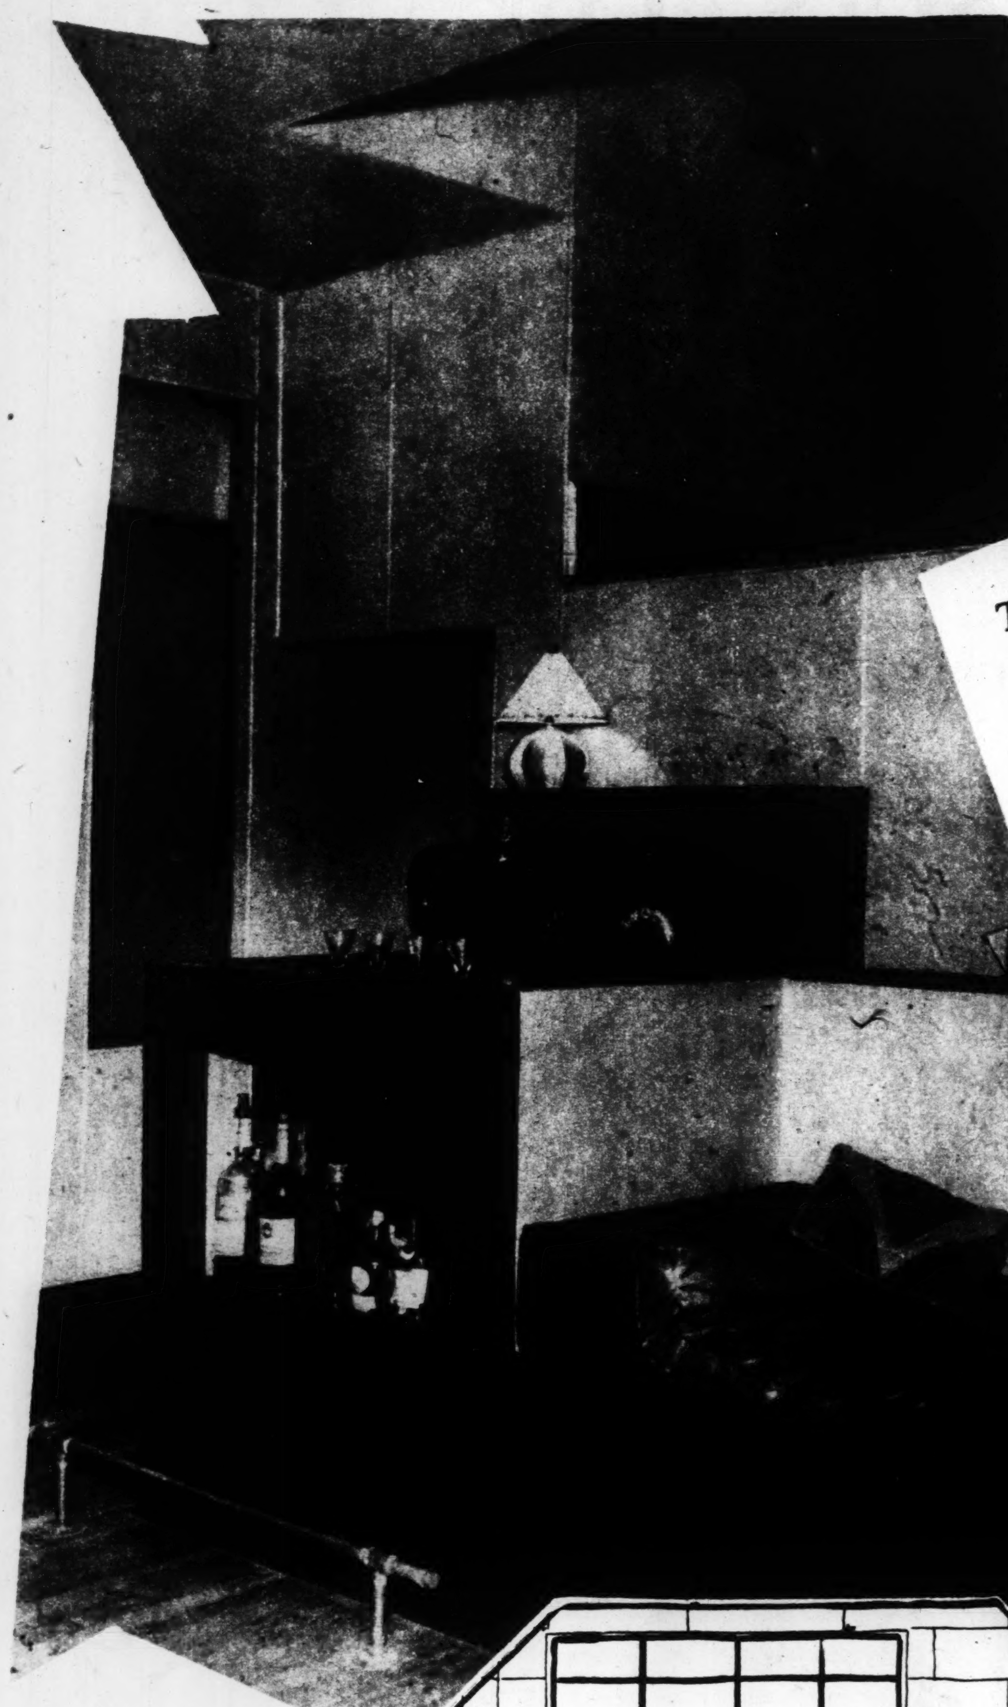
America's First Modernistic Home

Ten Rooms on Nine Different Levels, Porches Like Ship Decks, Cork Walls, a Kitchen in Front, a Combination Couch, Bar and Stairs, Are Some of the Surprises in This New Home Just Built in Long Beach, N. Y.

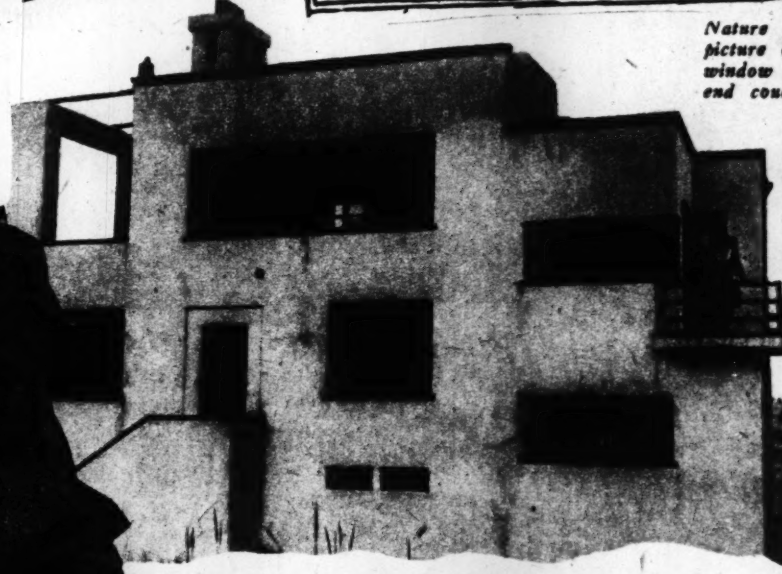


Nature paints a moving picture of the sea on the window behind this book-end couch of red lacquer.

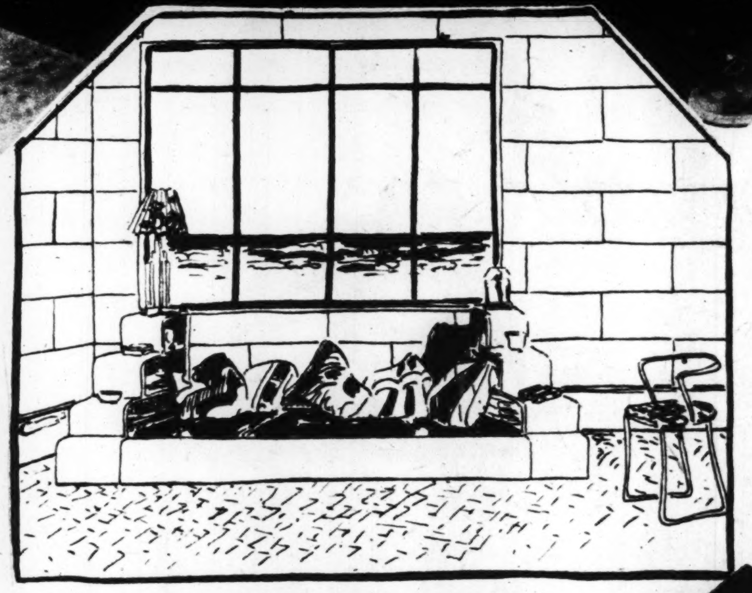


A combination couch, soft-drink parlor with brass footrail and staircase! . . . Aladdin himself couldn't summon these three widely different conveniences any more quickly than they appear here. The stairs are formed by the many levels of the ensemble.

Modern Homemakers Mr. and Mrs. Glendon Allvine . . . "Home is where the art is"—if it's modernistic.

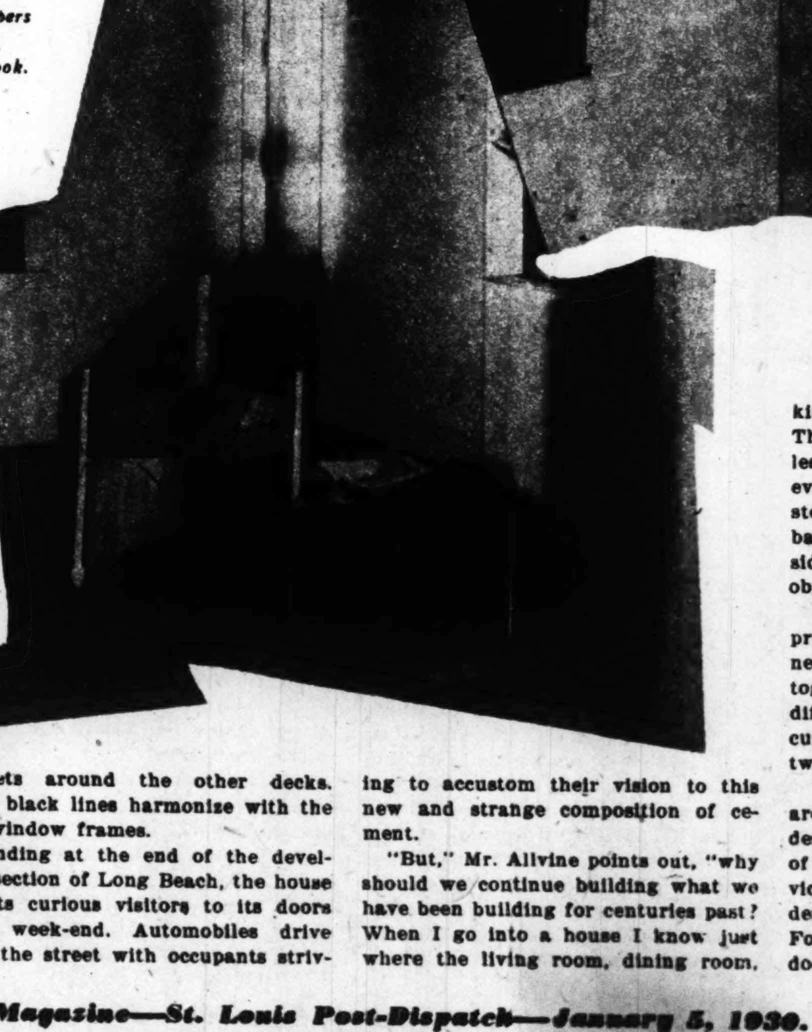


And here's the exterior . . . glistening white walls, enormous windows and a flat roof . . . following no conventional type of architecture, accepting no past standards, except that there is beauty in materials used to the best practical advantage.



Steel piping provides a sturdy framework for this severely plain couch. Does it look comfortable?

This deck-like porch overlooks the sea and is made to order for such modern therapy as sunbaths. The portholes below were taken from a ship and used instead of windows.



A pillar of light, extending almost from the floor to the ceiling, brightens this modern concept of a corner for pipe and slippers and a book.

HALF ship and half house; on the sea, yet stationary, stands America's first modernistic home at Long Beach, New York. At least this distinction is claimed by its creators, Mr. and Mrs. Glendon Allvine, and apparently the claim cannot be argued.

But—Mr. and Mrs. Allvine insist—their home is more than a unique experiment in modern architecture. It is a very livable place and proof enough for them of what they set out to prove—that a home can be built in keeping with modernism's drastic reforms in furniture and fabrics.

Like its fashionable rivals by the sea, it is constructed for all-year occupancy. It is not a summer fancy, a passing whim, to be abandoned after its novelty is worn off. On the contrary, it is Mr. Allvine's idea of what a permanent residence for the modern business man, who enjoys a sociable home life, should embody. Mr. Allvine is the head of the eastern publicity department of a movie company.

Cleverly introduced nautical details help flavor the house with additional individual appeal distinguishing it from other modernistic themes. Being close to the sea, they are in tune with the marine atmosphere. A ship's bell as a breakfast summons is a delightful reminder to the guest of his salty environment and he responds instantly to its call.

The surf is pounding on the sands outside the long row of iron-framed windows facing seaward from his room. From the wall back of his head look two genuine portholes taken from a real ship. Overhead is a sky-blue ceiling with silver stars of various sizes describing the heavenly constellations with the owner's in the center.

After a dip in the ocean one ascends to the sun-deck, the highest roof elevation, and basks in the rays of Old Sol like nature's youngest child, free and unmolested.

"Not a soul around here can get as much use out of his house as I do," remarks the owner, looking down upon his neighbors' roof-tops.

All the air and sunshine and breezes come to the Allvine decks. An aviation cone suspended from the iron flagpole keeps the family informed of the weather prospects and also lures passing aviators into the belief that a fellow flyer dwells below. Frequently they perform stunts for the roof occupants.

This main lounging roof is located above the long stretch of windows in the middle section of the house—or amidships, one might say. It is surrounded by a wall continuing from the house structure. A small superstructure, from which the flagpole extends, helps to break the straight line of the top and at the same time forms the roof of the sailor's bunk beneath. In the rear, a few steps down, is another level affording shelter from strong wind.

At the other end, on a still lower level, is a spacious porch sheltered by a colored awning. At night two real ship's lanterns, green and red, or port and starboard lights, cast their bright rays out to sea from the forward roof corners, fooling the sailors occasionally into the belief that another ship is passing.

IN THEIR original plans the Allvines were assisted by Architect Warren Shepard Matthews. Any attempt to be bizarre was left entirely out of their calculations. Efficient use of all vertical and horizontal space, practical use of all materials blended into one harmonious unit in regard to both color and spirit, was their aim.

Solidly constructed for all-year occupancy, the house's walls and foundations are of cement blocks covered with white cement. Its clear, brilliant whiteness in startling new outlines etched against the blue sky makes the house an easy landmark by land or sea. To give it further emphasis and expression, slabs of black slate composition top the roof walls and the parapets around the other decks. These black lines harmonize with the iron window frames.

Standing at the end of the developed section of Long Beach, the house attracts curious visitors to its doors every week-end. Automobiles drive down the street with occupants striving to accustom their vision to this new and strange composition of cement.

"But," Mr. Allvine points out, "why should we continue building what we have been building for centuries past? When I go into a house I know just where the living room, dining room, kitchen and bedrooms will be found. They all follow a certain more or less similar arrangement that no one ever tries to get away from. So instead of having my kitchen in the back of the house I put it on the street side. Its presence there is in no way objectionable and is most convenient."

Inside, the house is full of surprises. Each turn of the stairs brings new floor levels and more rooms. Altogether there are 10 rooms on nine different levels. Cellar and garage occupy the first level. On the next are two guest rooms and a bath.

Unless one is initiated into all the architectural tricks contrived by the designers to make the house a model of convenience and step-saving devices, he is apt to think himself suddenly the center of a mystery play. For instance, if the clothes-closet door of this guestroom should be open, a human may be reaching down from the level above to wh away a forgotten dressing gown or the house telephone!

This instrument can enter three different rooms, connected by the ingenious arrangement of closets upstairs and down, and a small bookcase in the lower lounge. The woodwork of the bookcase, as well as that of the surbase and door frames, is gold painted, high-lighting the effect of the rich, brown, cork-sheathed walls.

One of the real cozy nooks in the lower lounge is pictured. The modern red-lacquered divan with stepped bookcases and end tables standing in front of the window proves how eminently practical and comfortable many modern pieces are. A box spring and mattress provide genuine comfort either for lounging or for sleeping when guestrooms are overtaxed.

As this room also takes the place of a reception hall, the floor is laid with small red bricks in herringbone pattern. Water and sand from the beach can have no devastating effect on such a surface, while it serves at the same time to harmonize with its general substantial tone. Modernistic red-leather and metal occasional chairs stand out brilliantly against the brown background.

Next to this room is the dining room, almost walled entirely with windows facing two ways. The kitchen opens into it from the other side. An original table plan contrived out of four triangular-shaped tables with red, green and black onyx tops will enable 14 people to dine at once in this comparatively small room.

WITHIN the panels of the staircase are innumerable fascinating openings and cabinets. Books, figurines and lamps carry one's eyes and feet upward with increasing interest to the main upper lounge. Here one finds Mr. Allvine's real stroke of imaginative ingenuity.

A combination couch, bar and staircase! An upper shelf at the bar is used for service. A lower one keeps a reserve supply of glasses and bottles. Another is for books, while the largest and widest makes a comfortable settee. By means of its various levels it is a staircase in disguise leading on to the last and loftiest guestroom, a pent-house furnished with a sailor's bunk.

Neighbors who at first viewed the swiftly-rising edifice with much misgiving and occasional uncomplimentary remarks now recognize its merits. In fact, some have fallen so completely under its spell that they are planning to construct two and three-room apartments in similar style, with balconies facing the ocean. Thus may Long Beach become in the not so distant future a colony of modernistic homes and the cradle of the movement in America.

Possibly the most terse summary of the spirit that moved Mr. Allvine in erecting this house, so ingenious yet not freakish, is that of Francis Jourdain, the French modernist, who said: "To live amidst the remains of the past indicates a lack of understanding as well as a misconception of its teachings. One should not lose sight of the fact that the antique furniture of every period when new was nothing else than modern furniture."

INTERESTING ST. LOUISANS

Robert Laughlin

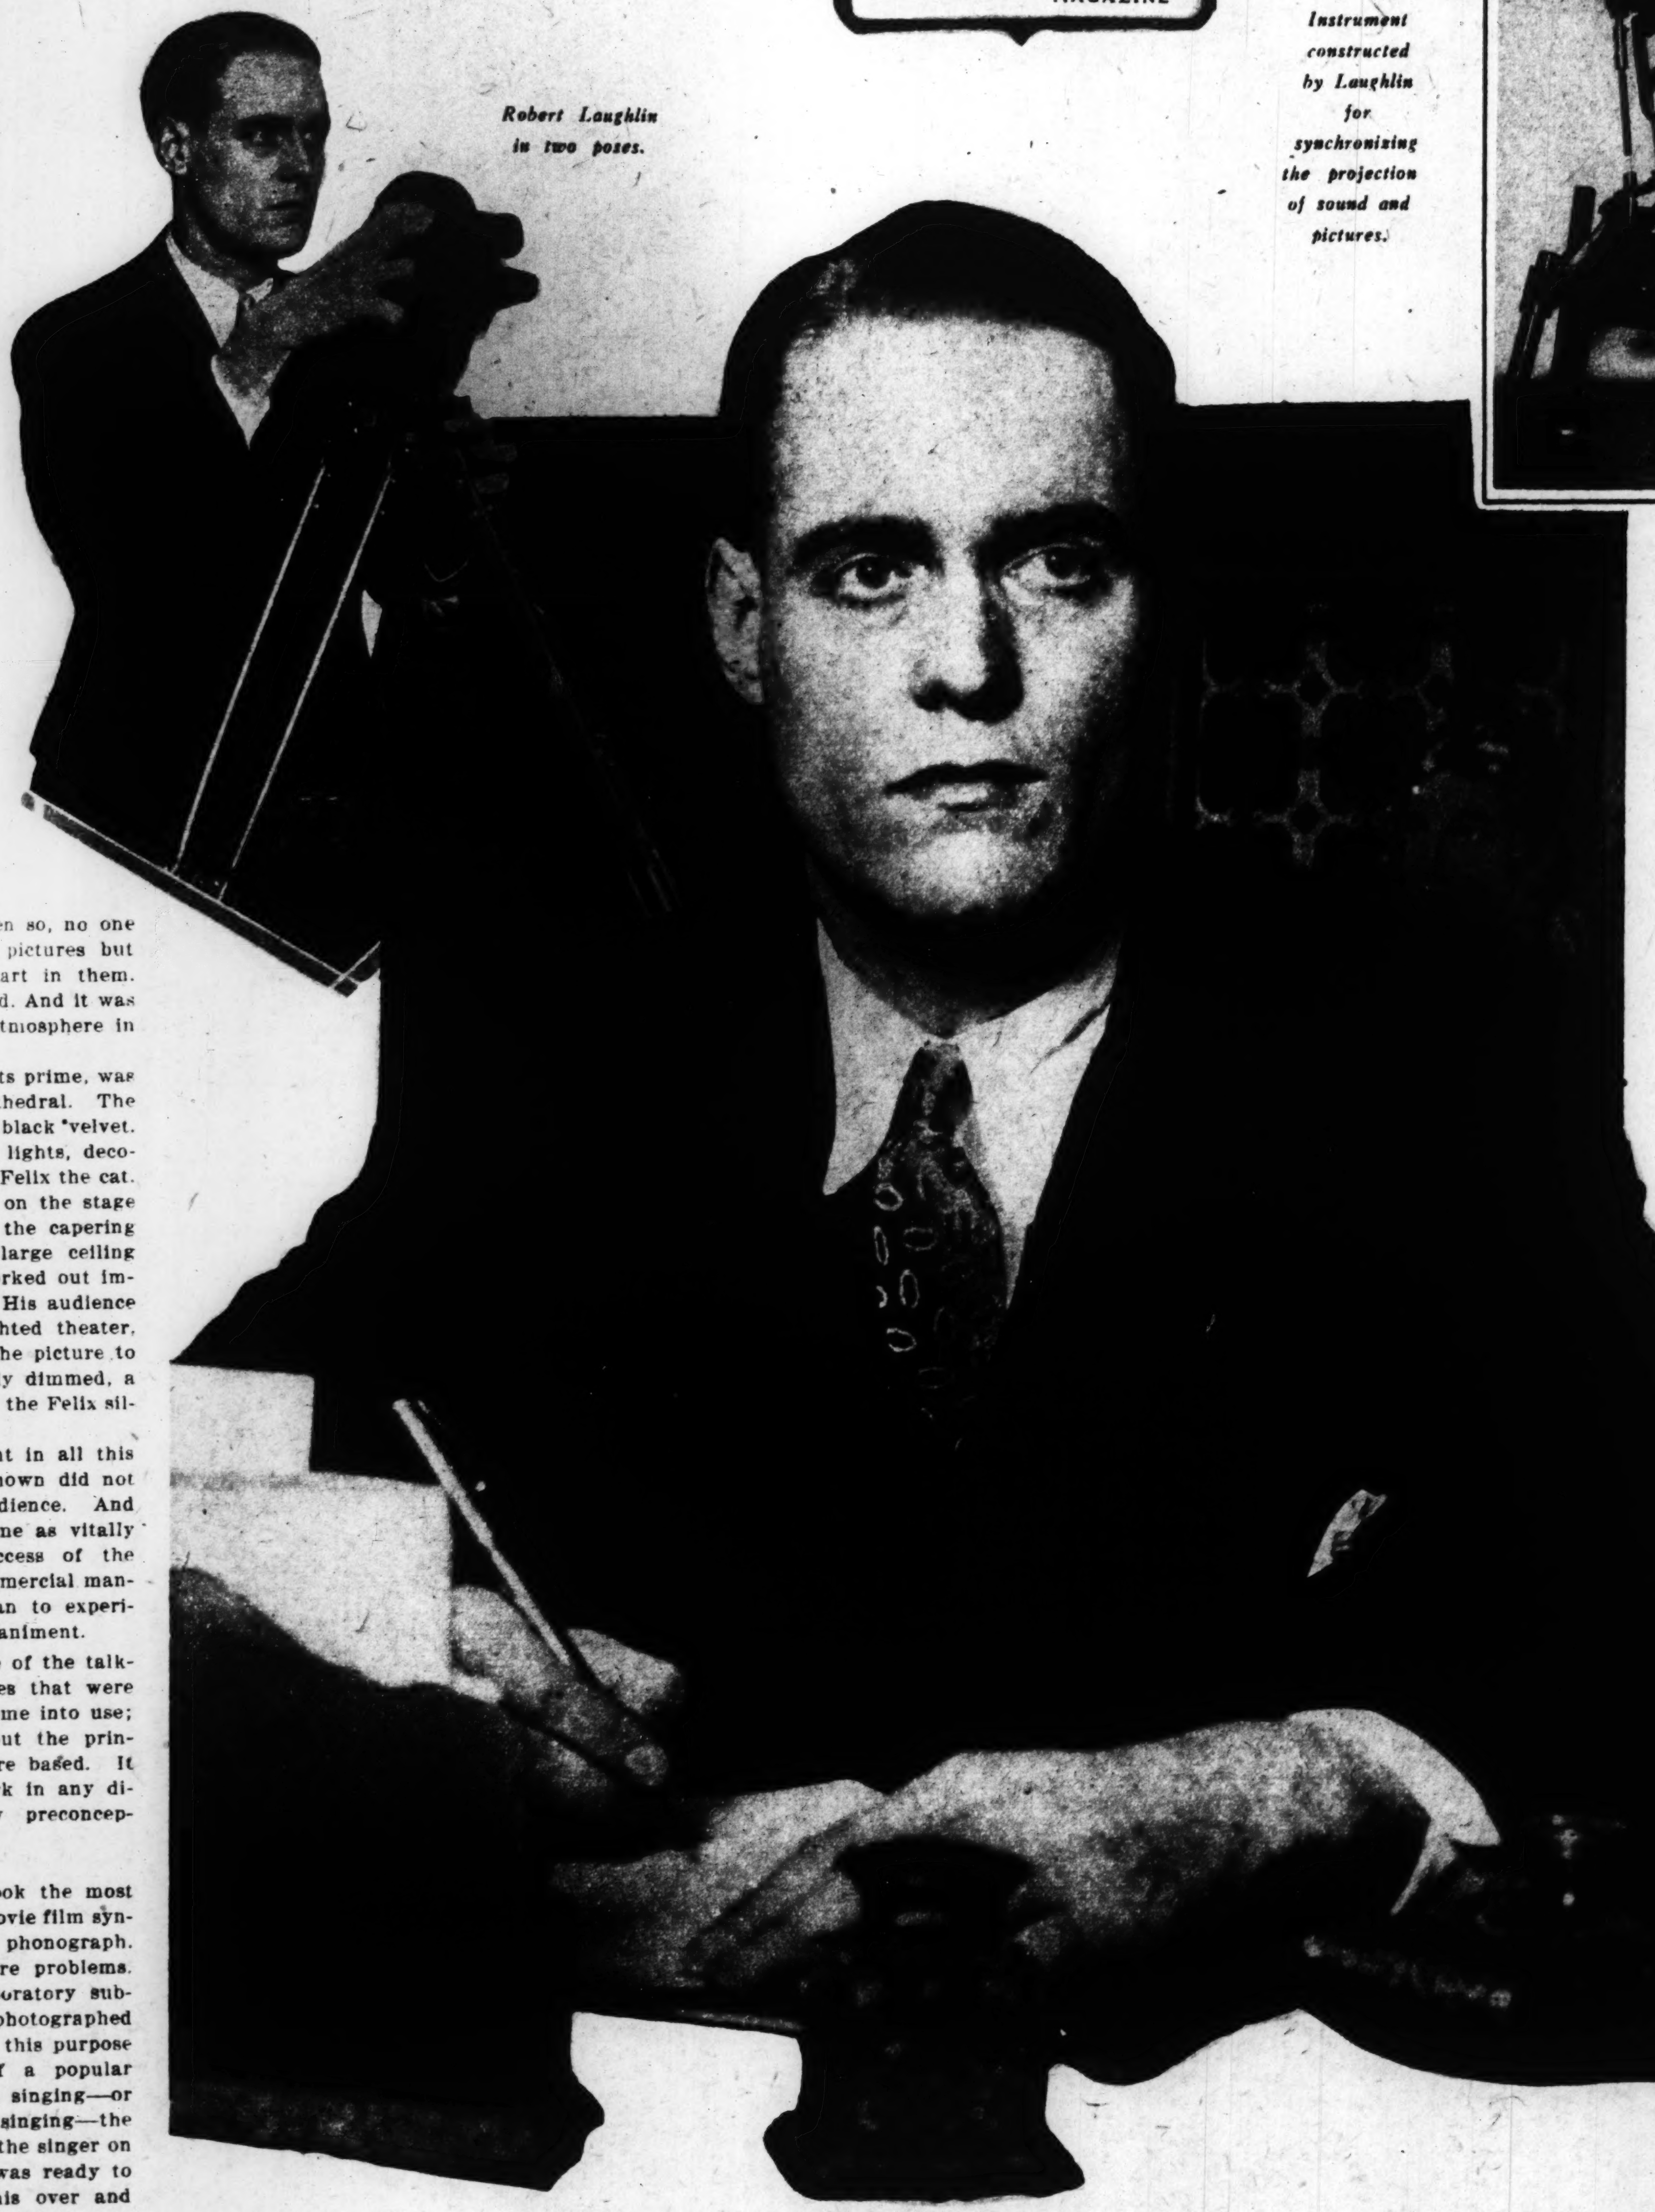
And His Ingenious Experiment in Perfecting Sound

A NEW FEATURE OF THE POST-DISPATCH SUNDAY MAGAZINE

By M. W. CHILDS

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

WHEN young Robert Laughlin invited some of his friends out to his private theater to witness the results of an experiment in movie and sound technique a few years ago, neither they nor he realized the occasion had any special significance. It happened it was the first time that talking movies were shown in St. Louis. They were amateurish, somewhat crude. But the illusion of sound was added to the picture on the screen. And this at a time when the talkies were little more than a vague conjecture. Laughlin's hobby, beginning with random experiments with a box camera, had led him to push experimentation further than probably almost any other amateur in the country.



Robert Laughlin in two poses.

His experiment with talkies had its origin in a desire to keep his own Felix Theater, in the basement of the Laughlin home, up to date. His hobby has since grown into a commercial venture.

It was no more than a rather complex plaything at first. Laughlin had a financial interest in several motion-picture houses in St. Louis. Too, he had always played around with still photography. Movie photography followed logically. He bought one of the first amateur motion-picture outfits sold in St. Louis.

For a time he did just what the average amateur does. He shot thousands of feet of film. Films of his family, friends, travels. Gradually he grew more skillful with the camera, improved his captions, fitted them into the film more adroitly.

But he found that even so, no one was interested in these pictures but those who had taken part in them. Others were frankly bored. And it was not for lack of proper atmosphere in which to show his films.

The Felix Theater, in its prime, was a miniature cinema cathedral. The walls were draped with black velvet. Inset were frosted glass lights, decorated with silhouettes of Felix the cat. The silver-cloth curtains on the stage were also adorned with the capering Felix, and so was the large ceiling chandelier. Laughlin worked out impressive lighting effects. His audience came into a brightly-lighted theater, and as they waited for the picture to begin the lights gradually dimmed, a red glow appeared behind the Felix silhouettes.

But there was no point in all this setting if the pictures shown did not interest his invited audience. And Laughlin was by this time as vitally concerned with the success of the Felix Theater as any commercial manager could be. He began to experiment with sound accompaniment.

He had never seen one of the talking motion-picture devices that were then just beginning to come into use; he knew very little about the principles on which they were based. It was thus possible to work in any direction, unhampered by preconceptions.

HIS first attempt took the most obvious form—a movie film synchronized with a phonograph. But even here there were problems. Since there were no laboratory subjects available, Laughlin photographed himself. He selected for this purpose a phonograph record of a popular song. Then he practiced singing—or making the motions of singing—the song exactly in time with the singer on the record. Finally he was ready to film himself. He did this over and over until the result satisfied him.

Next it was necessary to devise some method of synchronizing the playing of the phonograph record and the film. This was accomplished very simply in the first stages. Laughlin figured out a starting ratio between the first foot of film and the first groove of the phonograph record. He attached to the phonograph console a simple electrical device designed to make a slight buzz in the projection booth every time the record went around once. He was now ready to produce his first crude talkie. The phonograph was behind the screen. Laughlin worked the projector by hand in these first trials. He had figured out that one revolution of the phonograph console was equivalent to one turn of the crank projector.

That first "talkie" was surprisingly good. Laughlin revived it the other night to compare it with his later talking pictures. And this first one did not suffer too much by contrast. To all intents and purposes one saw Robert Laughlin singing a popular song.

By this time the Felix Theater had greatly broadened its scope. Laughlin had acquired two standard-size projectors so that he could show regular-size film and thus choose his programs from the entire range of commercial films.

Too, the talkies had made their first official appearance at a St. Louis theater. Laughlin saw them and talked to the operator, explaining his own experiments in the same direction. He learned that on the commercial machine the projector and phonograph console were both geared to the same motor. This was an obvious improvement over his own device.

Experimenting over a number of weeks, he perfected his own talking-picture machine so that it would run at a click of the button. It was not easy. He tried gearing the projector and the phonograph console in a number of ways. None was entirely satisfactory.

Finally he hit upon the idea of separating the two entirely. He supported the console for the records on a separate pedestal, balanced it on springs and then geared it to the projection machine from a slight distance. He felt that this removed much of the vibration which contributed to the scratching noises that marred the talking films. He had previously wired his theater so that the sound from the phonograph-tone arm was carried to loud speakers behind the screen. Too, he had made a half-dozen films—they were really photographic accompaniment to phonograph records he had selected. Films of attractive girls.

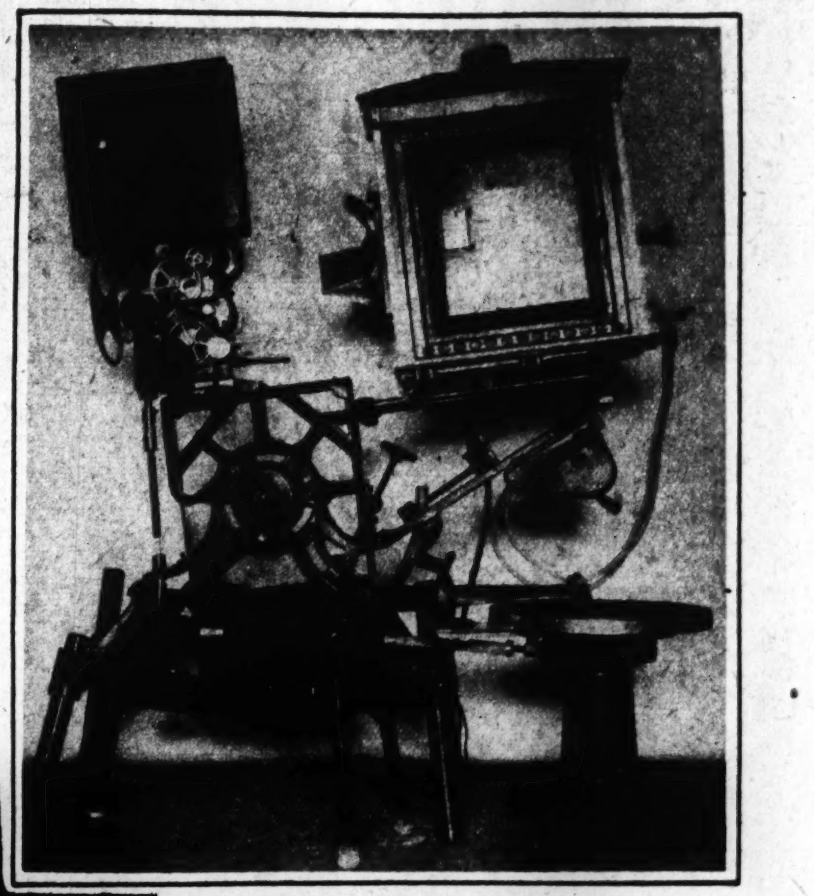
The one-man Felix Theater was now the most up-to-date in St. Louis. Laughlin seated his guests, retired and things began to happen. There was an organ prelude, the rolling tone resounding through the little theater. The lights grew dim. The silver and black curtains slowly part, a spotlight focussed on them. The moviesque illusion is perfect. He would show a standard film with sound accompaniment from phonograph records. Then one of his own talking pictures. Then a comedy. It was a well-balanced program.

It never occurred to Laughlin that his device might have commercial possibilities. Solving the mechanical problems involved had absorbed him entirely. But one night a friend chanced to bring out to the Laughlin home a professional motion picture operator, who was astonished by the excellence of Laughlin's talking pictures.

"Why, you've got something here that no one else has," he said. "They're crying for talking-picture outfits and yours is superior to most of them, because you've done away with most of the scratching noise."

The upshot was a partnership formed to manufacture Laughlin's device. It was so essentially simple that it could be made and installed for $1250. Which was a big advantage at the start. For the price asked by the leading company making a talking-picture device was then about $20,000.

For a time the company prospered. Orders came in much faster than they could be filled. Laughlin applied for patents on certain features of his machine. Soon, however, a number of obstacles developed. As the basic patents had long since run out, a number of other firms began to make talking-picture machines.



Instrument constructed by Laughlin for synchronizing the projection of sound and pictures.

And Laughlin, like many another inventor, discovered that at least some knowledge of business is necessary in the promotion and sale of an invention. It was a costly lesson. He had risked $5000 of his own capital. Nearly all of this went. And, largely because Laughlin was so busy speeding up the production of machines and trying to improve his device, he had no chance to check up on the way in which the business was being handled. Subsequently the company was reorganized on a sounder basis and with a larger capital.

At about the same time he lost the Felix Theater. The Laughlin home on the Lackland road was sold to Clarence Howard, former president of the Commonwealth Steel Corporation. Laughlin assumed, of course, that he would have to dismantle the theater. But Howard requested that it be left intact and he paid Laughlin what it had cost to equip it.

BEFORE he went in for movies Laughlin flew an airplane. That was in 1922, when flying was still something of a haphazard business. He was a freshman at Washington University then and when a promoter came along with a suggestion that he buy a plane and go into the aviation business, he was more than ready, after he had gained the consent of his father, Randolph Laughlin, to quit school.

It soon developed, he says, that the business proposition, which had been made to sound so attractive, was simply a part of the plan to induce him to buy a plane. With the plane went an agreement to teach Laughlin how to fly. They did this rather sketchily then. When he had had three hours of dual instruction, with a pilot in the second cockpit, his instructor told him to take the plane up alone. He got it up all right, but once in the air he grew gravely doubtful as to his ability to bring it down. Twice he circled the field, dropped low, got the buck and climbed again. The third time he brought the plane down to a perfect three-point landing. A solo flight on three hours' experience still stands as a record at the training field.

Ever since he can remember, machinery has fascinated him. He is working now on certain phases of what has become the principal talking-picture technique, that in which the sound is actually on the film as distinguished from that in which it is necessary to have accompanying records. As soon as the Laughlins buy a new home he intends to have a theater of his own again.

"It's the thing that interests me, you see," he says. "I don't care about anything else very much. I rarely read anything, usually only detective stories. I go to the movies quite a bit, but it's chiefly because I'm interested in the recording and the photography. There is one screen star I like, though. That's Greta Garbo. I'm going out to Hollywood soon, and I've arranged to meet her. That's one of the reasons I'm going."

He talks in a rapid, incisive manner, chiefly of his work, his interests. He is clean-cut, thin, but his build is athletic, reminiscent of the days when he was a high-school track star. And he is 27 years old.

The SIX who WON BACK LIFE from a HURRICANE-SWEPT SEA

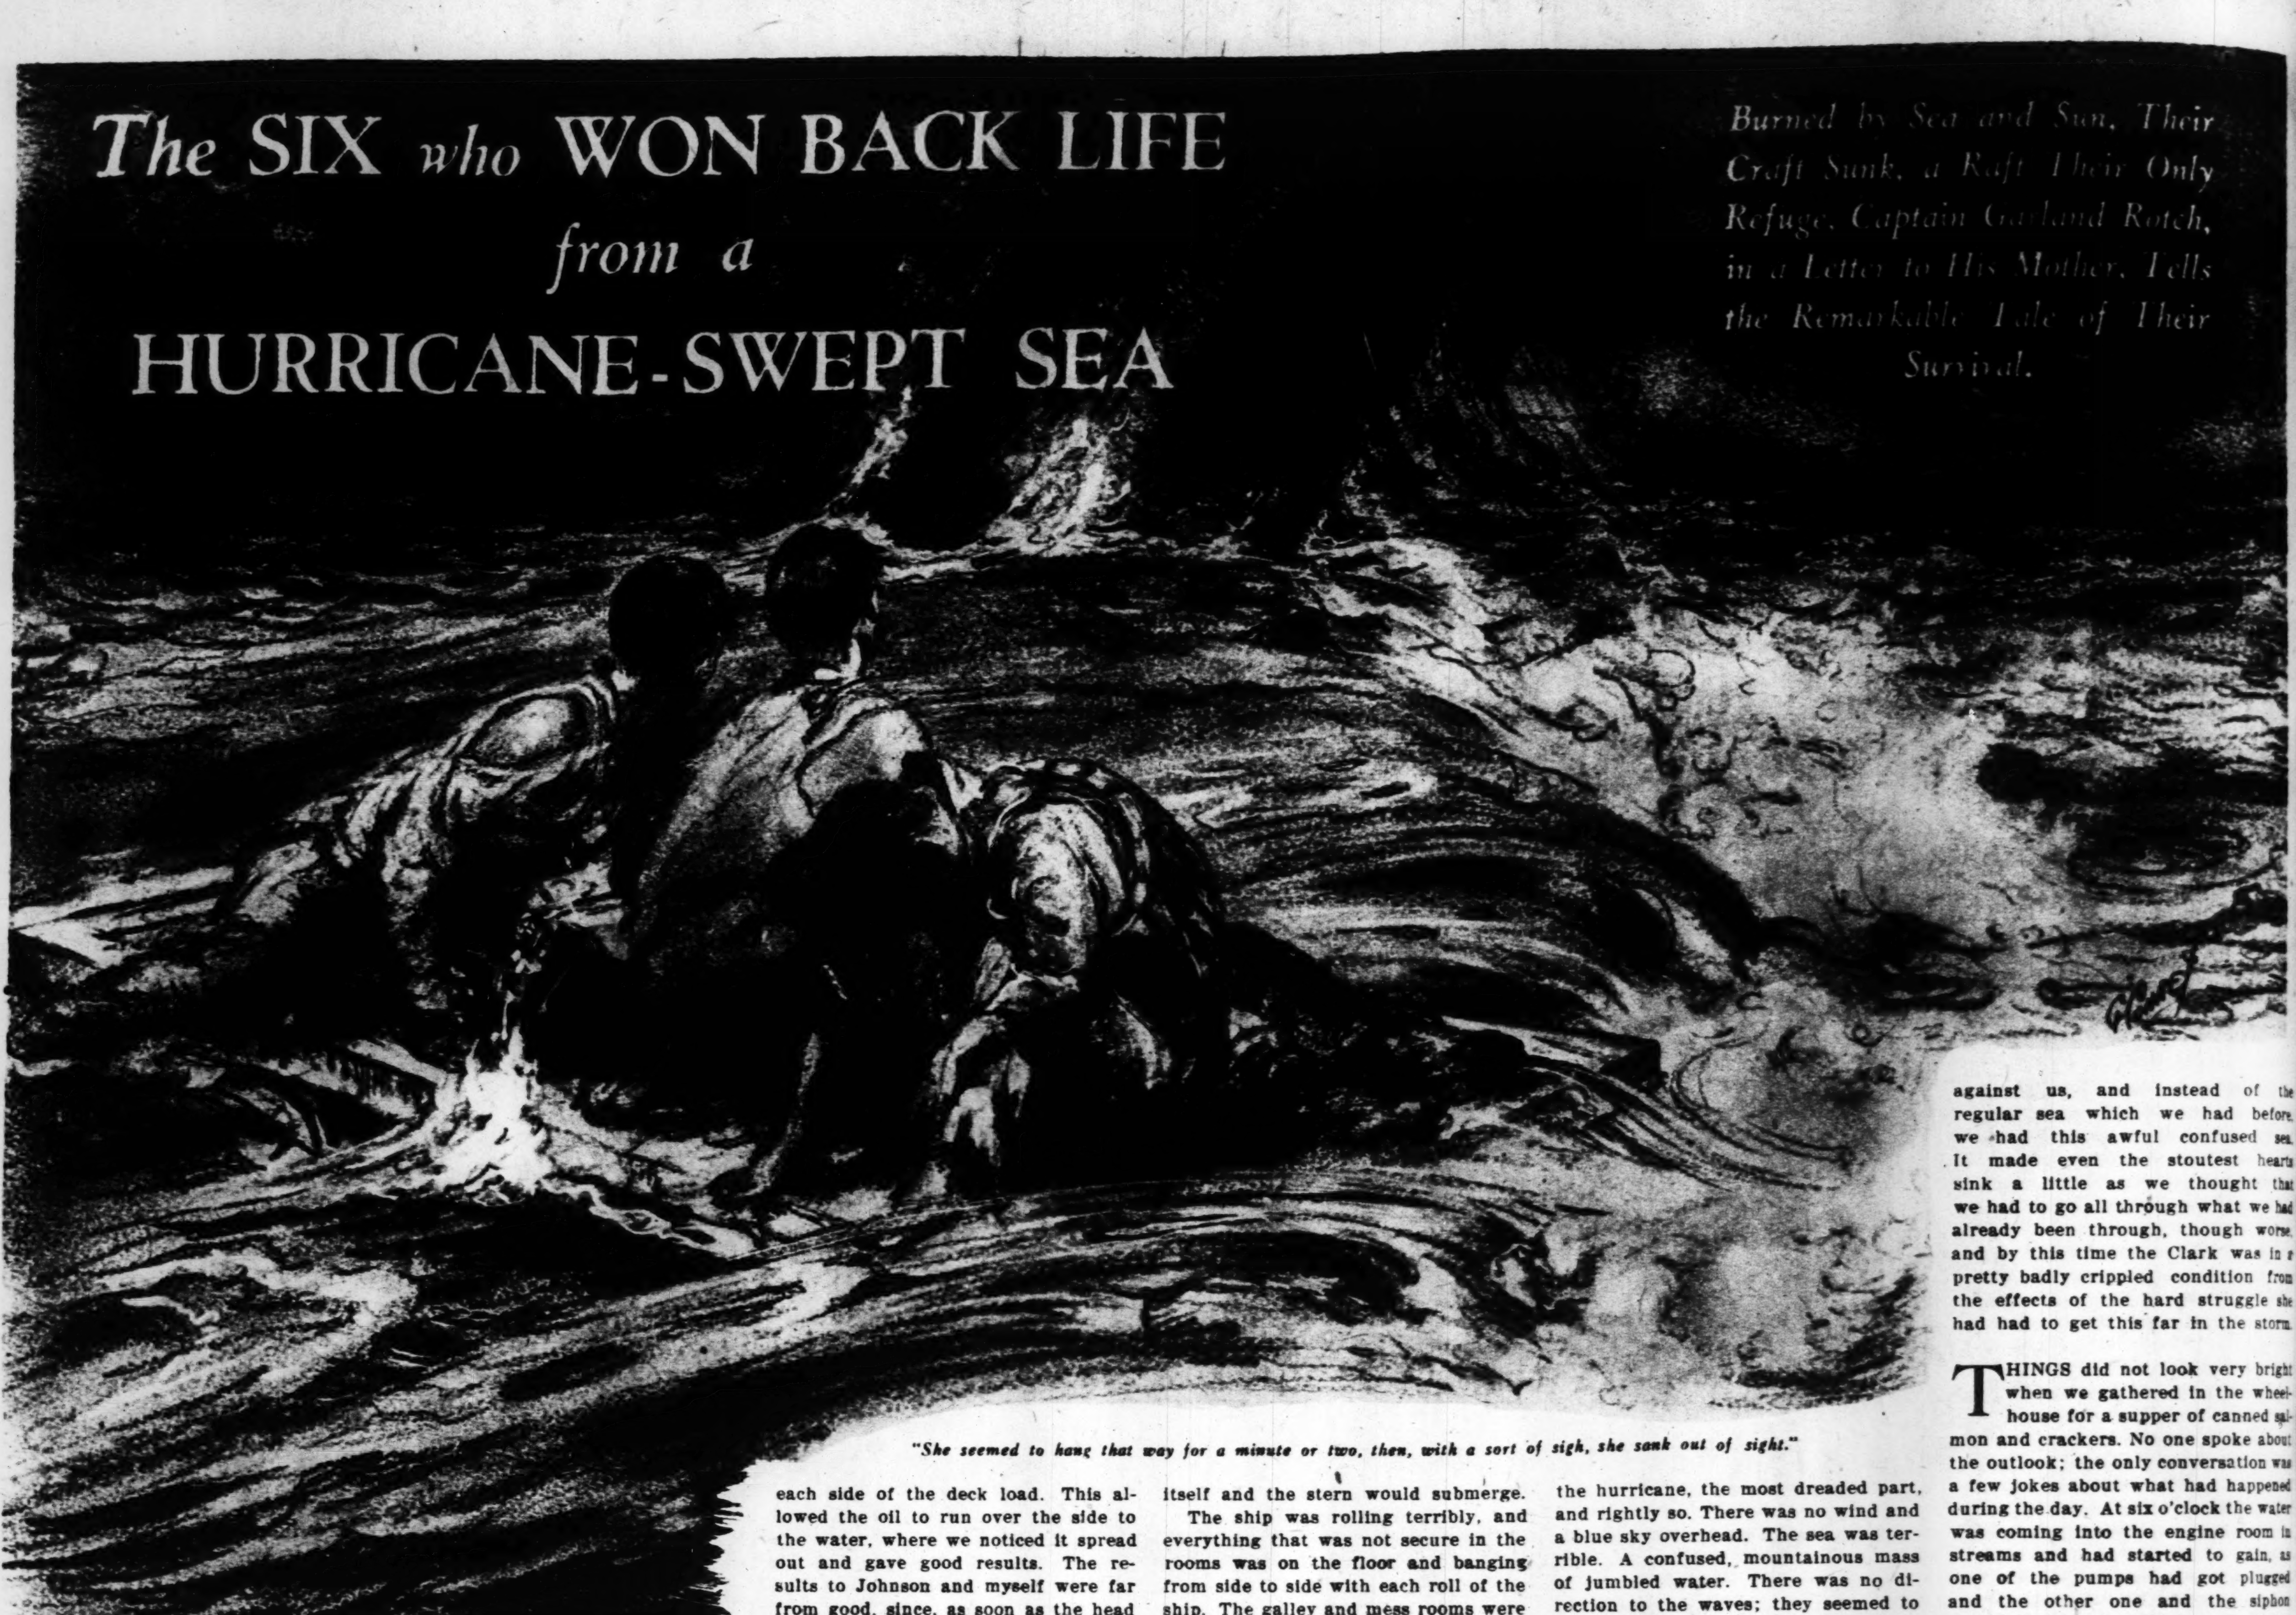
Burned by Sea and Sun, Their Craft Sunk, a Raft Their Only Refuge, Captain Garland Rotch, in a Letter to His Mother, Tells the Remarkable Tale of Their Survival.



"She seemed to hang that way for a minute or two, then, with a sort of sigh, she sank out of sight."

CAPTAIN ROTCH, the writer of this adventure, has followed the sea since 1904. He entered the United States Navy at the outbreak of the World War, serving as a Lieutenant Commander on the transport Ekonk. After the war he returned to the merchant service. He was Chief Officer aboard the S. S. Admiral Clark, carrying a cargo of oil from Port Arthur, Texas, to the Argentine, when it was caught in a hurricane and sunk off the Cuban coast. The story of the tragedy is here related in a letter written by Captain Rotch to his mother after he had been rescued from a raft and taken aboard a Swedish bark. This article is printed in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine by courtesy of the Atlantic Monthly, in which it first appeared.

By CAPTAIN GARLAND ROTCH

On Board Swedish Bark Tana,
Bound for New Orleans.

DEAR MOTHER: Well, mother, the black sheep came very near to going for good this time, but, as is usually the case, the bad penny turns up but the good, honest dollar is lost.

I suppose you know by this time that the Clark foundered in a hurricane off the coast of Cuba. To the best of my knowledge there were but six of us saved. Until we arrive at New Orleans we shall not know for sure. I don't see how there was any chance for the rest, but after you have heard my tale you will see that you never can tell.

We jumped as the ship sank, caught a raft, and were adrift on it for seven days, without anything to eat or drink, before we were picked up by the Tana two days ago in pretty bum shape. I feel pretty well now, though still very weak. My feet are badly burned from exposure to the action of the sun and salt water. I cannot walk very well or wear shoes, but they are doing nicely. I will try and give you a more detailed account of what happened.

On the morning of Wednesday, the sixteenth, I came on deck at four and found that the wind was blowing fresh from the northeast, though not hard enough to warrant calling the Captain. By seven it had reached the strength of a strong wind and I called the Old Man. He had a great dread of a hurricane and always was imagining that there was one brewing, and as soon as he came on deck he was sure that we were going to encounter one of those dreaded storms. Don't construe this to mean that the Skipper was at all afraid, as he sure had more nerve than most men, and did not know the meaning of fear for himself, though he was always afraid of losing his ship through one of these storms. I told him when he came on deck that I did not think we were going to encounter a hurricane, as there were none of the signs which usually precede these storms. Nevertheless he fished out all the charts and books that had any bearing on hurricanes and started to study the weather carefully.

The Skipper always took me into his confidence a great deal, and this day he asked me to stay on deck after I had had my breakfast and help him decide what it was we were running into. At eight o'clock it was blowing a moderate gale and the sky had a hardy, windy look. The barometer had fallen a bit, but not more than would be expected for the weather we were in then. There are certain signs which usually give warning of the approach of a hurricane, but this morning there were none of these. The weather indications were the same as those of an ordinary heavy gale of wind. By ten-thirty the wind had not shifted and the glass had started to fall very rapidly, and after arguing the pro and con we decided that it was a hurricane that we were running into, and that we were in the track of the center, the worst place to be. Our only hope lay in letting her go off and run before the wind, and endeavoring to cross the storm's path. This we did.

BY NOON it was blowing very hard and a heavy sea was starting to run. We had five hundred barrels of fuel oil stowed on deck and the seas had started this several times, but each time we had relashed it, only losing a few barrels. We had a good dinner under difficulties and everyone felt confident.

At one, I went to the chart room and the Skipper asked me if I could get some oil on the water, as the seas were starting to roll dangerously across the decks. I called Johnson, the second mate, and taking axes we crawled down on the deck load and stove in the heads of two barrels on each side of the deck load. This allowed the oil to run over the side to the water, where we noticed it spread out and gave good results. The results to Johnson and myself were far from good, since, as soon as the head of the barrel was stove in and the oil exposed, the wind caught it up and blew it all over us, until we were just covered with oil from head to foot. We did not get it off until we were taken on board the Tana.

After that, we kept barrels stove in and oil running into the water until the seas were breaking over the ship so that we could not get down to the decks to break in any more barrels. We then started pumping it overboard from our own fuel tanks. We had splendid results from this oil, and I am firmly convinced that this was the only thing that kept the Clark afloat as long as she was.

BY THREE, the hurricane was at its height. Mother, I wish that I could describe it to you, but I can't. I don't believe that any man could describe it so as half to do justice to the scene. The wind was terrific; that God could turn loose such a burst of fury was unbelievable. You could not face it and breathe. The wind would force the breath back into your body. To move without holding on to something was impossible. In going along the decks it was necessary to hold on to something all the time. The wind would pull and haul at you like a thousand demons trying to pull you away from your hold and drag you overboard. You could not see a hundred feet for the spray, which would whip from the crests of the waves and hurl through the air with the speed of rifle bullets. The force of the flying spray was such that it appeared to be lying in layers or a sort of strata in the air. The seas were like mountains, and it seemed as they towered above the little Clark that they were huge overhanging cliffs of water that would cave down and overwhelm the little ship. They were of such size that the ship would be on one side of a sea at a time—that is, you could look ahead and see the trough ahead of the ship and then look back and see the crest of the same sea far astern. The little boat rode them wonderfully; the oil on the water kept them from breaking dangerously, and the Clark would seem to slide out from under the towering masses of water just in time. It was wonderful to watch her. Many times I held my breath, thinking that surely one of the seas must break entirely over her. She was taking very heavy water during this time. The deck load was a jumbled mass of flying barrels and it was impossible to get down to try to do anything in the way of securing it. The water would make a clean sweep over the decks, hiding the entire forward end of the ship from view, then the bow would clear itself and the stern would submerge.

The ship was rolling terribly, and everything that was not secure in the rooms was on the floor and banging from side to side with each roll of the ship. The galley and mess rooms were a wreck.

About three, Johnson and I were going aft over the top of the house, and when passing the galley skylight we thought a cup of coffee would warm us up a little. As, with all the water on the decks, it was impossible to go through the doors on the main deck, we decided to go down through the skylight. A ventilator had fallen on the skylight and we had quite a time removing it. While we were working removing the ventilator we thought we heard someone calling. After we had the skylight opened what do you think we saw? The colored steward and the three colored cooks all on top of the galley stove and praying just as hard as they could. The galley was half full of water and everything in it was adrift except the stove. Such a mess—pots and pans, tables, bits of wood and other debris. And amid all this, the darkies on the stove with their life preservers on. I couldn't help it, and neither could Johnson—we just roared. It was so funny.

The condition of the galley doomed our hopes for hot coffee, so we hauled the blacks out of the galley and put them in the wheelhouse, still with the life preservers on, as they refused to part with them.

Captain and Mrs. Garland Rotch, with the life-belt covering which was used as a sail and the cork used as an oar.

At four, we were in the center of the hurricane, the most dreaded part, and rightly so. There was no wind and a blue sky overhead. The sea was terrible. A confused, mountainous mass of jumbled water. There was no direction to the waves; they seemed to come from everywhere. Sometimes they would come together with an awful roar and a mountainous mass would drop bang. The poor little Clark was under water all the time. She had no chance. There was no way for her to ride seas coming from all four or five directions at once. She fought gallantly to stay above water.

Just as we started to enter the other side of the storm, to fight our way out of what we had just come through, the steering engine blew a flange and we had to steer by hand. It was a hard job, as the hand gear was on top of the after-house and exposed to the weather. There was no compass aft at the hand gear, and we steered the ship by the sheets of spray that the wind whipped from the crest of the waves. We just kept these sheets at a certain angle with the ship. She did fine, and in about a half-hour we had the engine fixed and were steering by steam again.

The trip out through the storm was terrible. It seemed as if every storm in creation was blowing against us, and instead of the regular sea which we had before we had this awful confused sea. It made even the stoutest hearts sink a little as we thought that we had to go all through what we had already been through, though worse, and by this time the Clark was in a pretty badly crippled condition from the effects of the hard struggle she had had to get this far in the storm.

THINGS did not look very bright when we gathered in the wheelhouse for a supper of canned salmon and crackers. No one spoke about the outlook; the only conversation was a few jokes about what had happened during the day. At six o'clock the water was coming into the engine room in streams and had started to gain, as one of the pumps had got plugged and the other one and the siphon were unable to keep the water down. At about eight the engineers got another pump going and managed to hold their own until about nine, when a sea stove in the door to the sailors' mess room and a ventilator which passed through this room to the engine room. About this time she smashed the shutters on the Chief Engineer's room, which allowed his room to fill up and run over into the engine room. At this rate it would not take long for the engine room to flood.

I took two men forward with me to try and get a spare door aft for the sailors' mess room. To bring it back, we had to bring it along the booms, as the decks were continually being swept with heavy seas. We had got about halfway aft when a heavy gust of wind blew it from our hands, knocking one of the men down on the decks, where he was washed overboard before he could get to his feet. The other man and I took the Captain's bedding and went into the mess room to try and plug the hole in the ventilator with the bedding, but it was impossible. The mess room was full of benches and barrels. Every time a sea would come over, it would fill this little room full of water. There we would be—barrels, men, bedding, benches, and the place full of water. We were washed out twice. The third time I was washed right around the stern of the ship, and climbed up from the decks on the other side of the ship. The sailor I never saw again. I don't know what happened to him. It was impossible to fix the windows in the Chief Engineer's room. I tried, but could not stand on the decks, as the seas were coming over one right after another. We had no material to use to board up or plug them.

AT TEN-THIRTY the water was up to the dynamos and the lights all went out. Just previous to this, I had been down in the engine room, and I wish that I could describe the sight to you as I saw it. There was about six feet of water in the engine room. It was washing from one side to the other, with the roll of the ship. The engineers, stripped to the waist, were working around one of the pumps. I remember just as I came down the first assistant engineer was diving down under water to get at some part of the pump. The heavy rods and cranks of the engine were running in the water, churning and splashing the water all over; bits of board and refuse would float in to the engine and be smashed to pieces and thrown all over. The noise was deafening. When

The Blue Goose Found After a 200-Year Search

J. Dewey Soper Tracks This Queer and Coveted Bird to Its Lair in Baffin Land.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

OTTAWA, Canada.

The female Blue Goose on its nest.

THE longest wild-goose chase in history is at an end. J. Dewey Soper, distinguished young Canadian scientist and explorer, has come out of the sub-Arctic North with the secret of the Blue Goose's nest. He has succeeded in answering a question that has puzzled naturalists for two centuries. But it has taken him six years of lonely, perilous searching over most of Baffin Land's enormous area.

Every spring the blue geese, which are not blue at all but a distinct gray, with white heads and necks, fly north from their winter homes in Louisiana and farther south. They had been traced as far as the Canadian border. But once across it they dropped out of sight. They seemed to be swallowed up. Where they built their nests and hatched their young remained one of those questions capable of setting a gathering of ornithologists by the ears. In fact, until a few years ago a great many scientists contended that there was no such bird as the Blue Goose, that it did not exist as a distinct species, being merely a kind of branch of the family of snow geese.

But Soper, like a master detective, with all of Baffin Land as the scene of the pursuit, has unearthed the private life of the Blue Goose and has proved beyond all doubt that it is a distinct species. He started in 1923 as a member of the Canadian Government Arctic Expedition. He had other objectives, too, as the ornithologist of the party that each year approaches close to the Arctic Circle for study and investigation. But the primary one was the mysterious goose. He had no particular reason to believe he would be successful, for numerous parties in the past had searched in vain.

He did have a tangible clew. From the Eskimos and from other sources he had information that the bird probably nested on the southeastern shore of Netilling Lake, in the interior of Baffin Land. Soper started out. He explored great areas where no white man had ever gone before. But with the close of the momentary summer of the North he was forced to rejoin the expedition. Not a sign of the Blue Goose had he seen.

In the spring of 1924 he went back to Baffin Land and made a second expedition to Lake Netilling, and this time he traversed for a long way the unexplored Koujuak River.

DURING the following winter he made long journeys along the coasts by dog sled, sometimes alone, sometimes with two or three Eskimos. He even crossed the whole of Baffin Land, to the western shore of Fox Basin, north of the Arctic Circle.

Again in 1926 he set out, this time from Pangnirtung, on the east coast of Baffin, and thence to Cape Dorset, at the southwest extremity, 500 miles by dog team. He saw Indians and Eskimos who had never seen or heard of the white man. He traveled over hundreds of miles of barren, lonely country. He got together invaluable data, photographs, maps, collections of rare flora and fauna. And in July of 1926 Soper collected two moulting blue geese. He found them in company with a number of snow geese. He was closer than he had ever been before. For hitherto he had seen the blue geese only in migration. But he was still, to all intents and purposes, just as far away as before from the Blue Goose's nest.

Back to Baffin he went for the fourth time in the summer of 1928. The winter he spent in traversing and mapping Fox Land and the west coast of the island. He was ready in the spring of 1929 for his last and most determined search for the Blue Goose.

Soper left Cape Dorset on May 17 with five Eskimos and provisions and equipment for a three months' camp. They finally established camp on a tundra river near Fox Basin and called it Camp Kungovik, the Eskimo name for blue goose. There was a period of increasing discouragement for Soper. In ever greater numbers geese flew over Camp Kungovik, snow geese and blue geese. But they flew right on. Soper sent three of the Eskimos back with all of the dogs and sledges. His only link with civilization was a canoe.

THEN on June 5 a flock of 34 geese alighted. Through his powerful field glasses Soper identified 24 of them as the blue species. During the next few days others came and the proportion of blue to snow geese was constantly increasing until on June 14 and 15, when the heaviest migrational waves came over, only one in every 21 was a snow goose.

It only remained to wait a few days until the nests had been built and the eggs laid. Soper was able to watch the whole process. He found the largest collection of nests on a spot he had crossed at least twice before in the course of his wanderings.

J. Dewey Soper.

The nest of the Blue Goose, he discovered, is formed of soft moss and down. It contains from one to five eggs of a dull-whitish shade. Through patient effort he was able to approach close enough to photograph the birds on their nests. And he had no trouble in gathering an ample collection of eggs, nests, goslings and mature specimens. He made an attempt to bring four goslings out alive, but they died on the third day after capture, even though Soper kept them during the coldest part of the nights in his sleeping bag next to his body. He realized at last that in his enthusiasm over his find he had stayed too long. Already there were indications that the Arctic winter was shutting down. Traveling day and night with his two Eskimo companions, he made a perilous week's journey through floating ice. At the nearest outpost of civilization he chartered a small schooner with an Eskimo crew and arrived at Cape Dorset just nine hours before the Arctic expedition's steamer, the Beothic, was due to sail back. If he had missed it he would have had to wait for a year for another sailing.

Arrived at North Sydney, Nova Scotia, Soper gave out the news of his find. When it had been spread abroad, congratulations showered in on him from all over the world, from fellow ornithologists, scientists and explorers. It is probable that many naturalists felt a certain regret that this mystery had been forever cleared up. The mystery of the Blue Goose has always been a source of pleasant speculation. There are, however, still certain phases of its life to be investigated. For example, it is more than a possibility that the Blue Goose is the original non-stop flyer. With some reason for the belief, certain naturalists have put forward the theory that when it leaves the marshes of Louisiana in the spring for the lonely nesting spot on Baffin Land the Blue Goose never pauses once in flight.

The Blue Goose was first given a name by George Edwards of London in 1750. He represented it in his work, "A Natural History of Uncommon Birds," as having a bright blue wing. Blue geese were bred in captivity for the first time a few years ago at the National Park Zoo in Washington. And for this achievement the Jardin des Plantes of Paris presented the Smithsonian Institution with a gold medal.

The specimens that Soper brought back are being prepared for those few museums that will be fortunate enough to get them. And Soper is taking a vacation, after his arduous quest for the Blue Goose's nest.

A MAN FIGHTS a TIGER on EQUAL TERMS and WINS

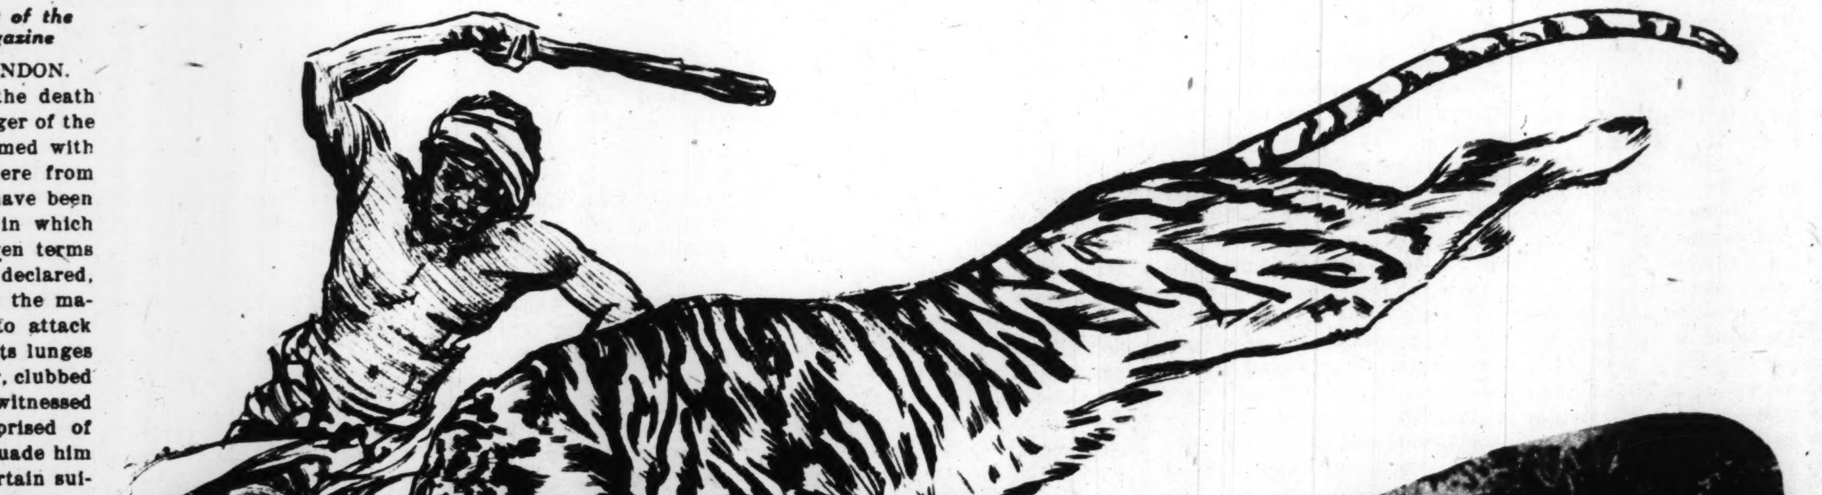
LONDON.



REPORTS of a duel to the death between a man-eating tiger of the jungle and a farmer armed with a stick have just reached here from Poona, India. It is said to have been the first instance on record in which a man has met a tiger on even terms and won. In this case, it is declared, the man actually sought out the marauding beast, provoked it to attack him and then, side-stepping its lunges in the manner of a bullfighter, clubbed it to death. His feat was witnessed by fellow-villagers, who, apprised of his intention, followed to dissuade him from what promised to be certain suicide and arrived just in time to see the combat and the victory.

Ghoya Marange is the dusky hero of the story. Marange, according to the tale, was the owner of a farm just outside a village in the vicinity of Poona. All through the spring and summer his cattle and sheep were preyed upon by a tiger until the farmer was driven to desperation. He set traps and attempted to poison the marauder, but the beast always got away, and usually carried one of the farmer's domestic animals along with it.

Finally, the feud took on almost a personal aspect. It was no longer a case of a roving beast despoiling a man's herd, but of a peculiarly sinister and shrewd monster which took delight in torturing an enemy and had singled out Marange as his victim. Marange, defiant, told the villagers that the tiger had but little longer to live.

But when the ruses employed by the Hindu failed to outwit the tiger the villagers began to taunt him.

"The tiger is stronger than you," they said. "He is the reincarnation of your worst enemy. He will surely ruin you and in the end, perhaps, eat your wife and children. No, you will never overcome the tiger. He is too smart for you."

This kind of talk irritated Ghoya. It enraged him. He hated the beast with a flaming hatred of the sort that human beings frequently lavish upon one another but seldom upon a beast of the forest. Then, before he could do anything about it, the marauder descended upon his herds again, killed one of his milk cows and carried off a goat.

Ghoya knew what the villagers would say before they said it, but they said it anyway, and the jesting words drove Ghoya into deeper indignation.

One day he went abroad in the village, announcing to all who might hear that he would challenge the beast to mortal combat. He would seek out the tiger in its jungle habitat and, scorning the use of firearms, would beat out its brains with a club.

Indian family with a slain tiger.

His friends began to get alarmed then. They felt they had probably carried the jest too far and advised him to give up his insane idea that he could club a tiger as he might a dog. The big cat would charge upon him with the speed of a running horse, they reminded him. What chance would he have to use a club? With one rake of its dagger-like claws it would rip him open. But the farmer wouldn't listen to reason. He would show them. So when the tiger added insult to injury that same night by raiding his farm and killing a prize bullock, Ghoya went into the bush and cut himself a stout club.

The next morning word was passed around the village that Ghoya had gone into the jungle to hunt the tiger. A crowd gathered in alarm and set off to trail him. They would dissuade him if possible and, in any case, they would be near to give him their help.

When they came in sight of him, Ghoya had stopped at a clump of brush beside a stream. His dog was barking savagely. They suspected that the farmer had at last come up with his quarry and stood back to watch developments. Nobody relished the idea of trying to interfere now with an angry tiger in the bush, ready to spring.

Ghoya had spotted the beast asleep. It was enjoying a siesta after feasting on its kill of the night before. He shouted to arouse it, and when it still remained apathetic, he pelted it with a stone.

Thus aroused, the man-eater snarled, advanced threateningly and then rushed its assailant. The young Hindu stood his ground, waiting, with club poised. The observers did not expect to see Ghoya survive that charge, but when the beast's feet left the ground he stepped nimbly to one side and caught the beast on the head with a full swing of the club.

The tiger, stunned a bit, dropped to the ground, recovered quickly and came at him again. Again the farmer dodged its spring and delivered a blow, but the beast came nearer this time and raked his cheek with its claws. A third time it sprang at him, its claws tearing through the flesh of one arm, but again the farmer got in a solid blow with the club.

Finally, it seems, the beast wavered in its attack and Ghoya seized the opportunity. He rushed upon it, raining blows upon its skull with the club, and beat it to the ground. A few more blows and the job was complete. Ghoya Marange went down in Poona history as the first man who had ever slain a full-grown tiger with a weapon no more deadly than a club.

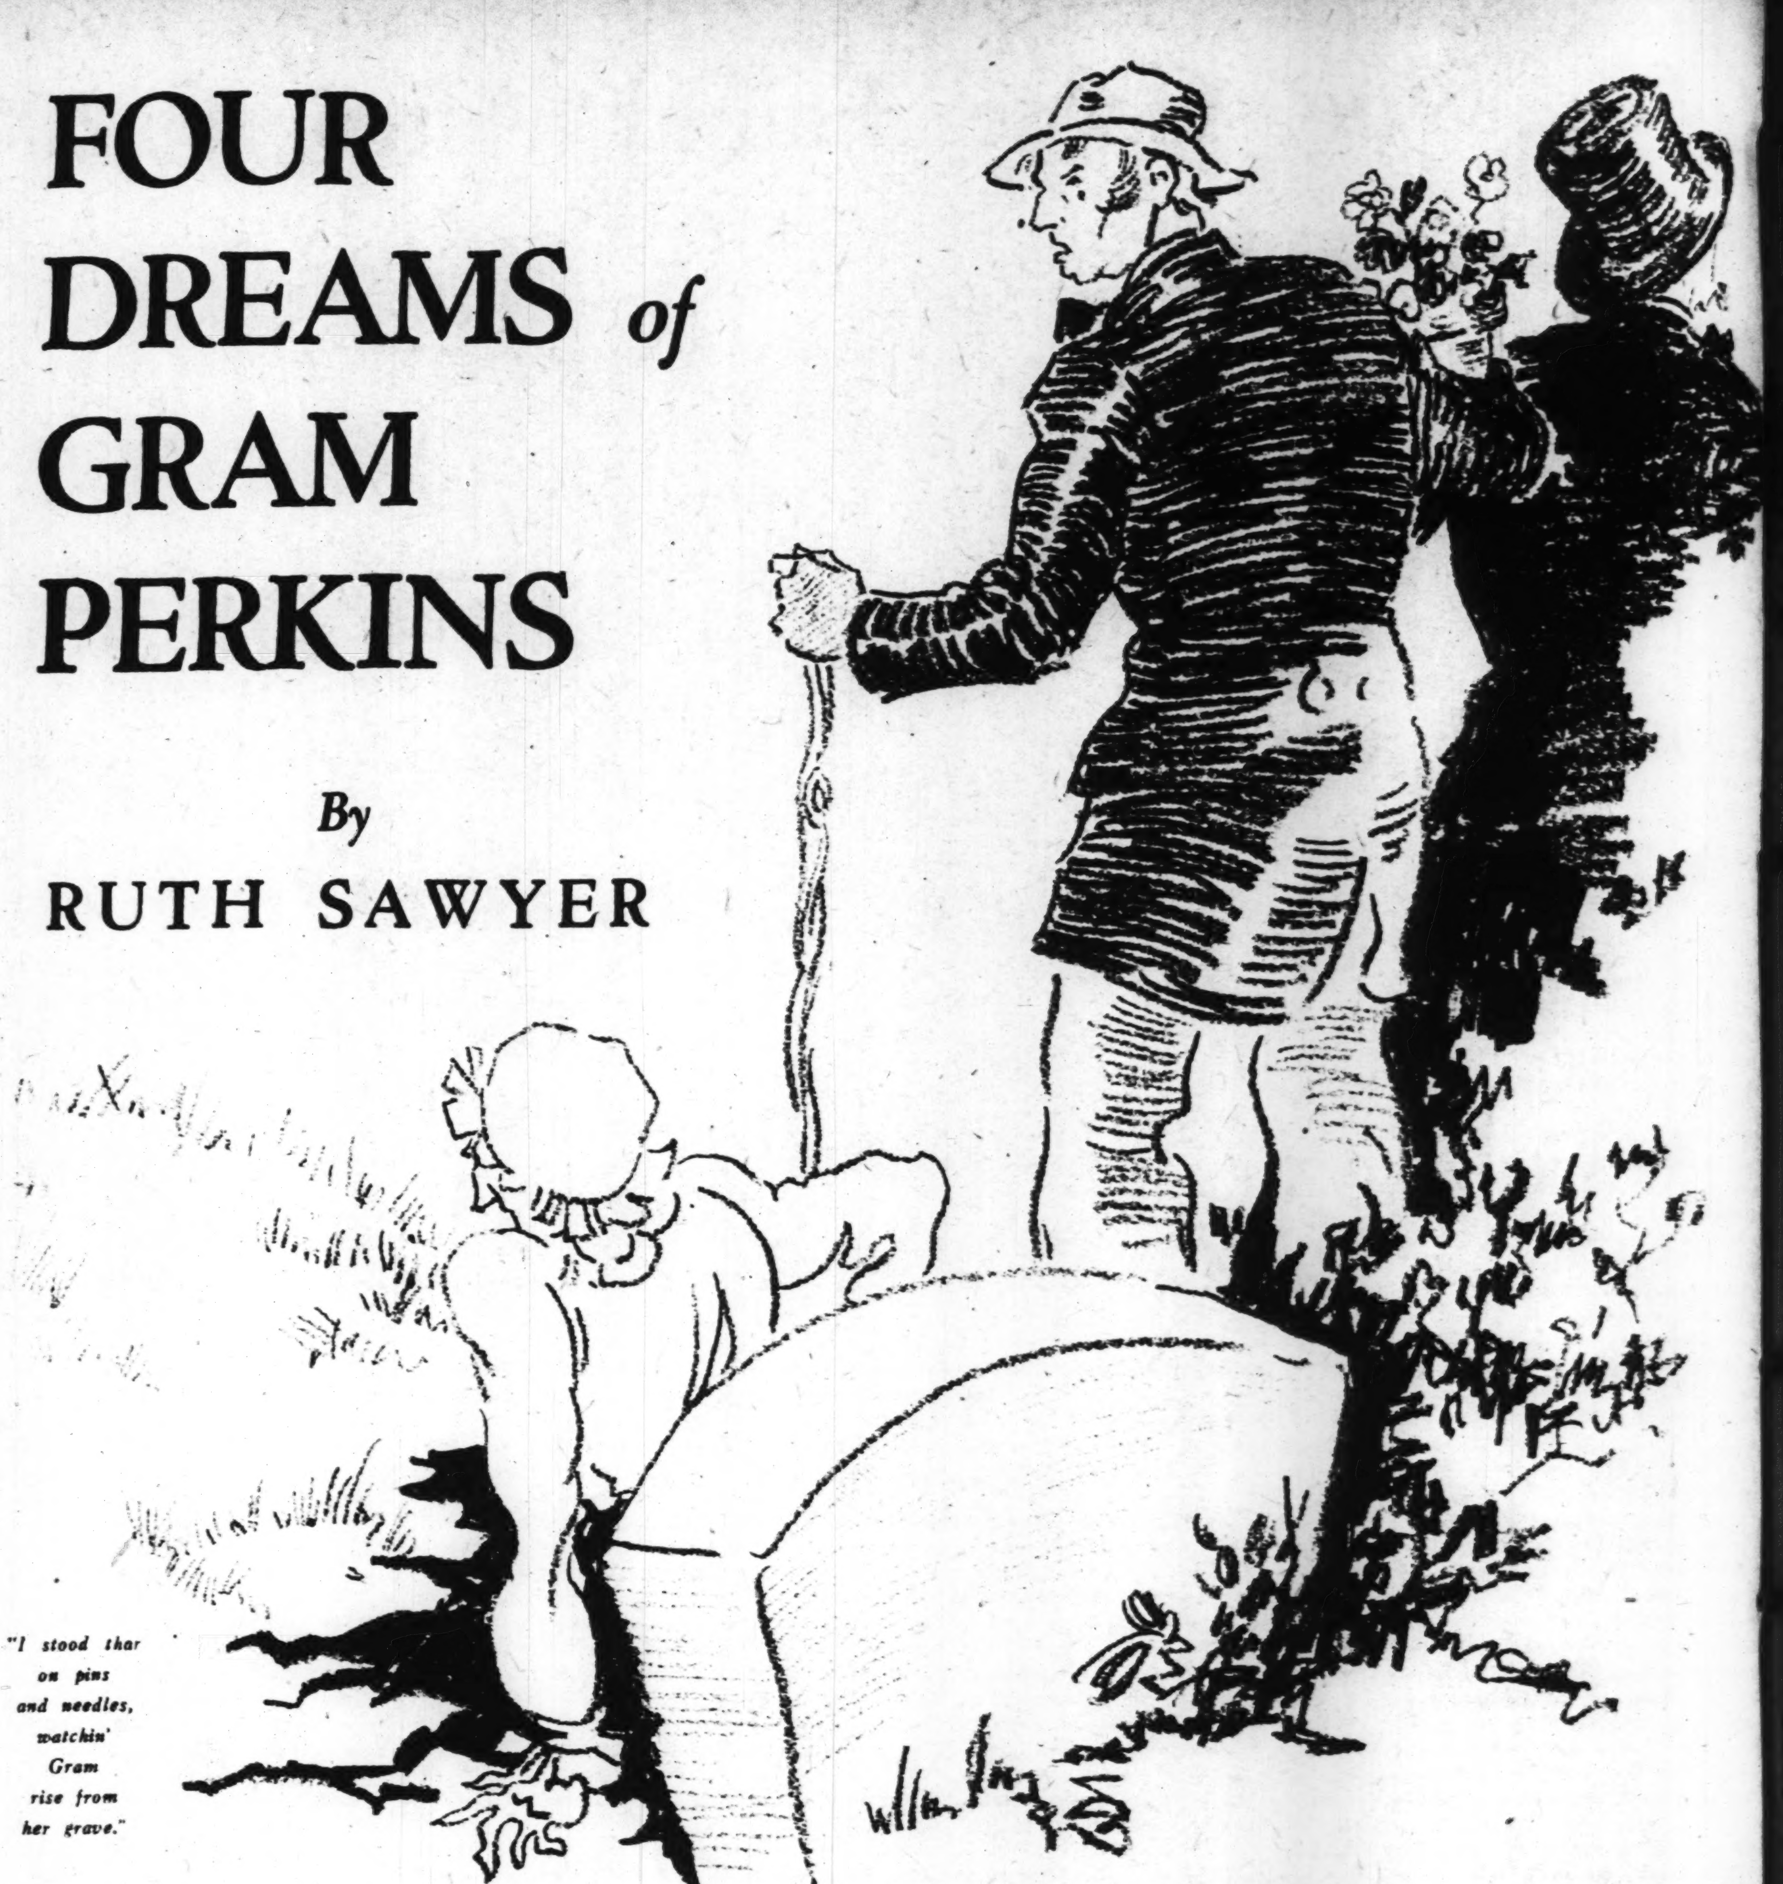
FOUR DREAMS of GRAM PERKINS

By RUTH SAWYER



"I stood thar on pins and needles, watchin' Gram rise from her grave."

GRAM PERKINS was not my grandmother. I had good reason to believe that she had died and received Christian burial a half-century before I first set foot in Haddock harbor. Neither were the dreams of my dreaming; so my connection with her was always remote and impersonal. Nevertheless, I came to know through her all the horror and the fascination of a perturbed spirit.

For those who may not know the harbor, let me explain that it bites into the northern stretch of Maine coast. Summer resorters are still in the minority, and peace and beauty serve as perpetual handmaidens to those few exhausted, nerve-racked city folk who have found refuge there. I was there only a few days when the immortal essence of Gram Perkins confronted me. Perkins is a prevailing name at the harbor. A Perkins peddles fish on Tuesdays and Fridays. A Perkins keeps the village store, in whose windows are displayed those amazing knick-knacks somebody or other creates out of sweet grass, beads, birch bark, and sealing wax. A Perkins is framed daily in the general delivery window of the postoffice, and his brother drives the one village jitney.

It was Cal Perkins of tender years who indirectly introduced me to the mysterious dreamer of the dreams. Cal took me on my first scaling of the blueberry ledges. Standing like Balboa on the Peak of Darien, he swept a hand inland and said: "Somewhars, over thar, lives Zeb Perkins. Hain't never laid eyes on him myself, but Pa says you doan't never want to hear him tell of them four dreams he's had of Grandmother Perkins. Woan't sleep ag'in fur a month ef you do."

The dreams of Grandmother Perkins are a tradition at the harbor as the "Three Hairs of Grandfather Knowitall" are in Eastern Europe—only with a difference. Natives in the Balkans pass on their story for the asking; whereas in Haddock harbor they evade all questions leading to Gram Perkins.

One day Cal took me to the cemetery and showed me the Perkins monument. It was a splendid affair in two shades of marble with a wrought-iron fence and gateway, and all about it were the headstones marking the graves of the separate members of the family. I read the inscription on Gram Perkins' stone:

Sara Amanda Perkins
Beloved wife of Benjamin Perkins,
Sea Captain
1791-1863
May she rest in perfect peace!

"Wall, she didn't!" Cal hurled the words at me as he catapulted through the gate, shaking all over like the aspen back of the lot. I caught a final mumbling: "Never aim to stop nigh her. Pa says I might git to dreamin', too."

HERE was distinctly unpleasant food for thought. Already she had a firm grip on my waking hours, and there was no relish to the idea of her haunting my sleeping ones. The manner in which she possessed the town was astounding. She lurked wherever one went, popping out with the most casual remark when one was buying a pound of butter or a pint of clams. And yet, for all the daily allusions and innuendoes, one never got at the heart of the matter; one never rightly understood why Gram Perkins was and yet was not five feet below the sod. As for the dreamer of the dreams, one never found him clothed in anything more solid than words.

I questioned Peddling Perkins one Friday when he came to our house with the makings of a chowder. "Tell me," I began, "where does Zeb Perkins live and what relation is he to you?"

He paused in his weighing. The scales hung from a rafter in his cart and worked somewhat mysteriously. He might have been weighing out the exact amount of relationship he cared to claim. "Fûr as I can make out he's sort of a third cousin."

"Did he ever tell you about those dreams?"

"No, ma'am!" He fixed me with a forewarning eye. "What's more, he hain't never goin' to. I seen Scip Perkins—time he told him. Scairt! Never seen a feller so shook up in his life. Didn't take off his clothes and lay good abed fur a week. No, ma'am!"

I questioned the post-office Perkins one day: "Do you happen to know what Zeb Perkins dreamed about his grandmother?"

"Dreamed! Gosh, what didn't he dream? Think of anything a sensible woman, dead and buried fifty years, stands liable to do and you wouldn't have the half of it." He finished, snapping his teeth together to signify that he had gone as far with those dreams as he intended to go—for the present, anyway.

A few days later I took the matter to the village store. I even bought a chain and earrings of sealing wax to make my going seem less mercenary. "Those dreams of Gram Perkins," I ventured, "how did they happen and do they belong entirely to Zeb?"

"They do, God be praised!" Whereupon the storekeeper retired behind the necklace for a good two minutes, and then partially emerged to whisper, "No one's layin' any claim at all to those dreams but Zeb. And I've always thought myself if he hadn't had them, no knowing what he mightn't have had."

FOR two recurring summers I stayed fixed at this point. And then came a spring when I slipped off early to the harbor for trout. The Perkins who drives the jitney met me at the wharf as I stepped from the Boston boat. "Hain't a summer resorter nor a bluejay here yit," was his greeting. "Weather's right smart — nips ye considerable." And it did. The water in the brooks was so cold my fingers remained stiff and blue all day. But the fishing was good, and in the end I caught something more than trout.

A morning came with a southeast wind. Up to that I had lost almost no flies, so I started out with little extra tackle. The middle of the morning found me a mile deep in an alder swamp, bog on one side and piled-up brush on the other. It was what you would call dirty fishing, and in half an hour I had lost every fly and leader I had with me. There was nothing to do but put up my rod and go back. In an effort to strike higher ground I came into what was new country to me. A trail led up toward where I judged the blueberry ledges would be, and climbing for a mile or so I suddenly broke through into a clearing and a wagon road. A grayish house stood beside the road. A thin spiral of smoke curled out of the chimney. On a split stake, even with the road, teetered a sign reading:

HAND-MADE TROUT FLIES
FOR SALE HERE

I attacked the door without mercy. A moment's knocking brought the sound of stirring from within, and the door finally creaked open, displaying the oddest cut of a little man in a wheel chair. He blinked at me like some great nocturnal bird, and soon there was an intelligent wag of the head—more at my clothes than at me.

"Come in. Doan't gin'rally git lady fishermen. Hearn tell they git 'em down to the harbor lookin' jes' as he-ish as the men." He rolled his chair backward from the door, beckoning me to follow. I could hear him repeating the last of his words under his breath as if by way of confirmation: "Yes, sir, looking jes' as he-ish as the men."

He led me into a room that might have been identified even in the uttermost corner of the world as having been conceived and delivered in the State of Maine. An airtight stove centered it, and on its pinnacle stood a nickel-plated moose at bay. There were half a dozen pulled-in rugs: fruit pulled in; red, yellow, and purple roses pulled in; a rooster pulled in; and other things that defied the imagination. The two window sills were gay with geraniums and begonias. Crayon portraits paneled the walls, and between each portrait hung a hair wreath. Fronting the door was a shower of coffin plates, strung together with a fish line. A large colored print of a clipper hung over the mantel, while all about hung trophies of the South Seas—strings of shells and beads and corals. But the most amazing exhibit was the feathers: peacock, egret, flamingo, pheasant, turkey, and cock tails, yellowhammer and bluejay wings, breasts, crests and what not. The work bench was littered with tiny feathers, partridge and guinea fowl, and spools of bright silk. He brushed all these aside and reached underneath to a drawer, bringing out a handful of trout flies. It took no close scrutiny to tell their exquisite workmanship.

"Pick out what ye want. Swamp back yonder jes' eats 'em up, doan't it?" And he smiled an ingratiating, toothless smile.

I made my selections, slowly, studying the little man more than the flies. His head was as bald and pink as a baby's. His lips were tremulous, and his eyes showed that pale blue opacity of the very old or very young. It was his hands that held me confounded. They were twisted like bird claws. How they could have ever taken wisps of feather and fine lengths of silk and wound them into the perfect semblance of tiny aerial creatures was more than I could conceive. He caught at my wondering and with a burst of crowing laughter he held the claws closer for inspection. "Handsome, hain't they? Cal'ate I worked 'em steady as most folks work a good pair. Can't stand wet nor cold, no better 'n Gram Perkins could in hern. Good days she was the smartest knitter in the country."

SO HERE was another Perkins. I aimed my habitual question at him, expecting no better results. "Tell me, do you know anything about those four dreams?"

He sat a moment, motionless, in what one might have termed a vainglorious silence. He sucked his lips in and out over those vacant gums as if he found them full of flavor; then he suddenly burst into the triumphant crow of a chanticleer. "Yes ma'am! Cal'ate I do know them dreams—seein' I dreamed 'em. I be Zeb Perkins!" He said it with as sweet an unction as if he had announced himself King of the Hejaz. In a flash the room stood revealed anew. It spoke aloud of Sara Amanda Perkins, beloved wife of Benjamin Perkins, sea captain; of his clipper, of the relics of his voyages, of her handiwork in rugs and wreaths. The very begonias might be slip grandchildren of the ones she had planted. Here, indeed, was a stage set for those dreams. Here sat Zeb Perkins, playwright and stage manager, picking excitedly at his pink head, eternally ready to ring up his curtain. He caught my eye on the wreaths.

"Them little tow-headed fergit-me-nots belonged to her first son as died a baby. She set a terrible store by him. Them black-eyed Susans come from her sister Ida, my great-aunt Perkins. See them coffin plates. Ye'll see every one of them was copper, nickeled over, every one but Gram's. Hers was solid."

THERE was a wealth of information conveyed in that last word. I had been standing until now. One of Zeb's claws waved itself away from the coffin plates to a chair: "Set, woan't ye? Ye'll see them rockers under ye are worn as flat as sledge runners. That was Gram's chair; and we wore them rockers off luggin' her 'round. She was all crippled up, Gram was, same as me; only in them days there warn't no wheel chairs."

The chair was all Zeb claimed. There was no more rock to it than a dray sledge. From the chair his eyes flew to the crayon portraits. "Look at them! Look at Marm—Then look at Gram. Why, there was nary a thing Gram couldn't do, for all her crippled-upness. Bake a pie, fry a batch o' doughnuts, clean up the butt'ry. But Marm, seems like she was born fretty and tired. Made ye tired just to watch her travel from the sink to the cook stove. She'd handle a batch o' biscuits like she never expected to live to see 'em baked. Jes' lookin' at 'em, can ye make out a difference?"

I did and I could. In spite of everything the artist had done to obliterate all human expression, he had mastered the single point of difference. One face sagged utterly, the other looked out with sharp alert eyes on a world that interested her immensely. There was a grim humor about the mouth, and a firmness that spoke a challenge even at the end of a century.

"I tell ye," Zeb's eulogy was gathering momentum. "We boys set a terrible store by Gram. She was cuter and smarter tied to that chair than Marm was on two good legs—hands to match 'em. Golly! How sick boys git bein' whined at. Didn't make no odds what we done — good or bad — Marm al'ays whined, but Gram — she stood by like she'd been a boy herself. She'd beg us off hoein' fer circus and fair days and slip us dimes for this or that. Cal'ate she's slipped us enough nickels and dimes to stretch clean to the upper pasture. Pasture! Golly! When we was up thar, hot days, hayin', she'd al'ays mix us a pitcher o' somethin' cool—cream o' tartar water or lemon and m'lasses. When she had it ready she'd take a stick and tick-tack on the wind'y. She could whistle, too; whistle through them crooked fingers o' hern like a yaller-hammer. She'd whistle whenever she wanted to be fetched anywhars; then one of us boys would come runnin' and heave her to wheresomever she aimed to go—kitchen to butt'ry—butt'ry to settin' room—settin' room to shed."

Zeb stooped here and illustrated. He put two of his crooked fingers to his mouth and shrilled out a thin, wailing note as eery as a banshee's.

"THAT'S the way she done it," he continued. "And Marm would fuss and fret and say she didn't see why the Lord 'lowed a little crippled-up body like Gram's to stay so chock full o' spunk. Some days she get sort o' vengeful, Marm would, and tell Gram she'd better quiet down decent, or more'n likely she'd never rest quiet in her grave after she died."

A hush fell on the room. There was a baleful light shimmering through Zeb's dull eyes, his claws began a nervous intertwining. "Wall . . ." he broke the silence at last. "Gram died. Night afore she died seems like she got scairt. She grabbed us boys one after another and made us all promise we wouldn't bury her twell we were good and sure she was dead. 'Keep me five days—promise me that,' she kept a-sayin'. And we promised. Recollect it didn't seem to me then as how, Gram could die—so full of smartness and spunk. Even after old Doc Coombs come and pronounced her, seemed like she'd open her eyes any minute and ask us boys to lug her somewhars. 'Stead o' that she lay so quiet seemed like I could hear Doomsday strike."

The air about us became suddenly supercharged with something. Was it that ravenous desire for life that must have consumed Gram Perkins? Under their glass domes the hair wreaths seemed to move as if fanned by a breath. The feathers about us swayed. The rooster in the pulled-in rug seemed to pulse with life and a desire to crow. A crowing shook the room, but it came from Zeb.

"HOT! Golly, Gram died in the sizzlingest spell, middle of August, folks can remember. Didn't embalm in them days, so 'twas ice or nothing. We drew lots for shifts—us boys. Ben and Ellery drew day; Sam and me night. Mebee we didn't work! Lugged in hunks from the ice house to the shed; thar we cracked it and lugged in dish pans to the settin' room. Crack—lug—mop—lug—crack. Five days! It's been a powerful sight o' comfort since to know we kept Gram's promise. Then come the funeral — smart one. Slathers o' flowers and mourners and hacks. Cal'ate you've seen the lot whar we buried her?"

At the mention of burial a sense of enormity made me shudder. I was beginning to realize that the further Zeb progressed in the matter of the obsequies of Gram Perkins the more alive she became—At that moment she possessed the house—every crack and cranny in it. She possessed Zeb, and she possessed me. I found myself straining my ears for the rattle of dishes in the butt'ry or the sharp thin note of a whistle. Zeb's ear was cocked as well as mine.

"Them dreams," he said, pulling himself together. "First one come fifteen years after Gram died. All was gone from the harbor by that time but me. Ben took the pneumony and died quick. Ellery got liver complaint, turned yaller as arnicy and thinned to a straw. Sort o' blew away, he did. Sam—he got trampled on by a horse. That left jes' me. Night after I buried Marm I come back here and had my first dream. I was young ag'in. Boys back, Marm back, all of us settin' thar at Gram's funeral. Parson was a-prayin'—had been fur a considerable time. I could hear Nate French fumblin' fur his tunin' fork, so's to lead the departin' hymn when plain as daylight I heard a whistle. Yes, ma'am. Then I heard a tick-tack — like Gram was knockin' on some wind'y. Kept hopin' she'd quiet down when out shot another whistle—clear above the parson's prayin'. Nobody but me seemed to notice, so I got up gingerly and tiptoed over to the coffin and raised the lid.

"Thar she was—fixin' fur to tick-tack ag'in. I grapped her fingers quick and shoved 'em back whar they belonged. Then I leaned over and whispered, loud as I durst, 'Lay still, Gram. Parson's nigh through and we'll be movin' along shortly. Folks'll be passin' 'round in a moment to view the remains. Fur the Lord's sake, close your eyes and act sensible.' Wall . . . that fixed her. She gave me a wink so'd I know she'd act right, and I tiptoed back to my place. They was all still a-prayin'—kept right on a-prayin' twell I woke up. Three years later, come November, I had the second."

ZEB shivered, and so did I. I wanted that second dream and yet I did not want it. Had I chosen I could no more have stayed it than one could have held back the second act of a Greek tragedy.

"We was on our way to the cemetery." Zeb's voice lifted me free of all choice in the matter. "I was ridin' outside the first hack, bein' the youngest, and I was thinkin' what a fine day it was fur that time o' year. Sort o' funny, too, fur Gram died in August and here it was November and we was jes' gettin' to bury her. I was lookin' at the hearse when it happened. Hearses was different in them days, black urns at the four top corners with black plumes stickin' out and a pair o' solid wooden doors behind. Above the poundin' of the horses' hoofs I heard a hammerin' on them solid doors. Bang . . . bang . . . plain as daylight. Old Jared Sims was drivin' and I didn't want he should hear so I sung out, 'Cal'ate they're shinglin' the Coombs' barn.' He turned 'round in his seat to look.

he propeller would lift out of the ater, the engine would go at an wful speed and by the noise ould appear to be going to ieces. It was a sight I shall ever forget.

When the water had reached he dynamos the pumps were also overed, and there was nothing ore that the engineers could do n the engine room. They came ut on deck, but left the engines unning. They were a brave lot nd stuck by their posts as long s they could. At a quarter to leven a fusible plug blew out on he port boiler and the steam was hut off the engine. She was settling fast by the stern and everyone knew it was all over. A heavy ea swept over the whole afterhouse, taking both boats.

The little Skipper was game to he core. He and I went into the hart room. I lighted my pipe and e a cigarette, and then he turned o me and said: "This is hell, Rotch, isn't it? Just as we start o get out of the gale, the ship oes down." I wasn't going to et him have anything on me, so took a couple of puffs of my ipe and said, "Yeah," just as unconcerned as I could. It was funny I didn't feel the least bit worried or afraid. I told the Skipper hat I thought the best thing to o would be to go forward, and if he bulkheads would hold she might float with her bow out of ater. This was the only chance e should have, as the boats were one. He couldn't think of anything better, so he ordered all hands forward.

Going forward we had to climb along the booms, as the decks were impossible, with the remains of the deck load and the heavy seas washing over. It was hard work going along the booms. The man ahead of me was washed overboard. What was left of us got forward all right. The sailors put on their life preservers. The officers had none, as theirs were under water, the sailors and firemen being berthed forward.

THE Old Man was pretty badly broken up and stood off to one side, looking aft all the time. I mustered what was left of us and gave them a talking to. I told them if the ship started to go to watch and jump before she went too far and they were caught in the rigging. Those who had no life preservers on would have to trust to catching some bit of floating wreckage. Those that had life belts on, if they saw anything floating on the water, were not to catch it, as it might be the means of someone else being able to find something to support him.

All of a sudden, we felt her start to go down under our feet. We turned and ran forward. We had gone as far as the foremast when a big sea swept over us. I clung to the winches around the foremast while the skipper ran on a little further and jumped up on number one hatch and held on to the booms: After the sea had passed, we started forward again with the Old Man a little ahead of me.

By this time the ship was fast getting to a position nearly vertical. I looked over to the other side and could see them starting to jump over the side. I shouted to Johnson that I guessed it was time for us to go as well, so we kicked off our boots and jumped.

On deck we had had a raft that we used for painting the side of the ship. As soon as I struck the water, I started to swim for the surface. As soon as I reached the surface the first thing that I saw was something dark on the water, and reaching out I put my hand on this raft. Johnson came up close beside me and we both climbed on to the raft. I did not have to swim.

AFTER I had climbed on to the raft, I turned to have a last look at the Clark. She was standing on end, perfectly upright in the water. Her bow was about thirty feet out of the water. She seemed to hang that way for a minute or two, then, with a sort of sigh, made by the noise of the air rushing out of her, she very slowly sank out of sight. Mother, it was a weird sight to see that little boat sink, and it hurt. She was a good little boat and I had had some good times on her. We had a fine crowd of men, as they showed when it sank. There was no excitement. Those that went went as a sailor should go.

After the little boat had gone, I turned around to see who else was on the raft with us, as when I climbed on I noticed that there were two others already on. They proved to be the third assistant engineer and an oiler. The oiler had on a life preserver and it made me so darn mad that I just kicked him off the raft. I thought of all those who had no life belts, and here was one of the men I had told not to use anything that was floating around, but to leave it for someone without a life belt. I shook my fist at him and told him not to come anywhere near the raft. He floated around for a while, and once when my back was turned Johnson let him on, and when I discovered it, there was no chance for anyone else to be around, so I let him stay.

We had not been on the raft long when we heard someone shouting and could see someone in the water. Johnson and I swam out and picked up the colored steward. He was just about all in. Soon we heard another call and we swam out again, and picked up a sailor. He, too, was just about all in and was very hard to help back to the raft. He had on oilskins and sea boots and they were full of water. We kept a sharp lookout for anyone else, but we could see or hear no one.

After Johnson had let the oiler back on, that left six of us on the raft. Johnson (the second officer), the third assistant engineer, the steward, the oiler, a sailor, and myself. Now, Mother, to appreciate our position you must picture our raft, which was nine feet long by four feet wide. Not as wide as your bed and only three feet longer, with six men on it. Nothing to eat, nothing to drink; in fact there was nothing on the raft but ourselves and what we stood in, which was not very much. None of us had on shoes except the sailor, who had boots. The most of us were clad in only shirts and trousers. There was just room for four to lie down at a time, and they had to fit right in. The others had to sit way on the end. There was no turning in your sleep unless everyone turned at the same time. The raft was only four inches out of the water, so the water was washing over it all the time. We were never dry at any time that we were on the raft. If anyone did any restless tossing in his sleep at night, overboard he would go. The steward did go overboard one night.

Thursday morning broke, and we were all glad to see the sun and feel its warmth. It was still blowing pretty hard and quite a high sea was running. About all we did that day was to hang on and to keep the raft from turning over.

FRIDAY morning at daybreak we all started to keep a good lookout for ships, as the question of getting picked up was starting to come home. We saw nothing that morning. Sitting around doing nothing, I commenced to brood over our outlook, and, catching myself, I thought that would raise Cain with our spirits, so decided to put everyone on watch, and try to give everyone something to do. There was a little breeze and it would blow us on the Mexican coast, if we could last that long. I figured that it was about 250 miles away. We took the cover off the life belt that the oiler had on and decided to use it for a sail. We tore some strips from the raft and made a small mast and yard to spread the sail on. The blocks of cork that were in the life belt we used for paddles to steer by. This kept two of the men busy all the time steering and was something on their minds. The trousers of the suit of oilskins that the sailor had on we used to make caps to protect our heads from the strong sun. To make these we just cut off sections from the legs.

This kept us busy all day and it was wonderful how fast the time passed, and everyone was in good spirits. It was a woefully small sail and did not move the raft very fast, but it was more for the moral effect that it had that I had it done. We were now divided into three watches of two men each, so that two men were always doing something and the others were resting. The two men were paddling and steering. We kept time by the sun in the day and the position of the stars at night.

Saturday at daybreak we saw a large steamer heading to pass close to us. We all got excited and happy with large visions of food and drink. We started to paddle toward where she would pass us. We figured that it was about six in the morning and that they would have fresh coffee made, and we made joking remarks about it. She passed about half a mile from us and kept going right on. They had not seen us. She passed so closely to us that we could see the man at the wheel. We whistled and would all get together and holler at once. I don't see how they missed us, as we had a man waving a shirt all the time. She was an old tramp, and the officer was down having his coffee, I suppose. Her name was painted out, or we could have read it.

IT WAS a keen disappointment, as the pangs of hunger and thirst were beginning to make themselves felt. Our bodies were lame from sleeping on the salt boards, and sore from the salt-water sores which were commencing to come out all over our bodies, and especially on our feet.

You see, I had read somewhere that the pores of the skin would absorb water into the system and that people without water should keep their body wet and that the skin would absorb a lot. We kept our bodies wet with salt water all the time we were on the raft, and I think that this is the only thing that saved our lives.

Saturday we had a small rain squall. It did not last very long, but we all opened our mouths and tried to catch what we could. We spread out the oilskin coat and caught just enough for a mouthful apiece. It was dirty and oily, but it did taste good. That was all the nourishment that we had all the time we were on the raft.

Sunday morning we saw smoke of a steamer, but it did not come anywhere near to us.

The waters around the raft were alive with fish, and we used to use all our spare time trying to catch them with our hands.

The nights were the worst part of all. When we lay down to sleep the water would be washing over us all the time. Those that had the weather side had the water splashing in their faces all the time. Imagine trying to sleep with water splashing in your face.

Monday we started in to fish in earnest. By luck we caught two. One of them jumped right on to the raft and we caught it before it could flop back into the water. These we skinned and hung up on our raft in the sun.

During the afternoon it was very warm and we suffered a great deal from the heat and thirst. Hunger by this time had ceased to bother us at all. Only the first two days did being hungry bother us. Of course we would not have turned down a turkey dinner. They say, though, that hunger ceases as soon as thirst sets in. I guess it does. We kept our clothing good and wet and that helped some. The men wanted to eat the fish, but I would not let them, as eating would increase the desire for water.

Tuesday morning I was sitting in the bow of the raft looking aft and thinking. Everyone else was asleep except the steward and the oiler; they were paddling at the stern. My eyes happened to look astern and I saw a great big shark following us. He was swimming up to the raft. He looked to me to be about fifty feet long, but afterwards when I compared his length to the raft he must have been between fifteen and twenty feet long. I did not say anything to the men, as I hoped he would go away and not be seen by them, as a shark at that time was not the best thing to keep up the spirits of the men. When he reached the end of the raft he curved in and passed close to the side where the oiler was paddling. When he saw the shark he was putting his paddle into the water and could have touched it. He gave a cry of terror and, jumping up, rushed for the other side of the raft. It was fortunate that I was awake and watching, because I jumped for the opposite side just in time to balance the raft. He would have overturned it and had us all in the water at the mercy of the shark. The shark swam around the raft for about half an hour, and we kept very quiet, you may be sure.

THE afternoon was very hot, and thirst started to tell severely. Our mouths and tongues were badly swollen and we could only talk with an effort. I had to watch the steward and the oiler. They were dipping their fingers in the water and sucking them. That was the worst thing they could do, as it made them worse and was liable to drive them insane. I had spoken to all the men about this when we first were on the raft. As soon as I caught them doing it, I told them plainly that I was not going to jeopardize the lives of everyone on the raft by having one of them go insane. I told them that the first man I caught doing it I would throw overboard as protection for the rest. That kept them in their place for a while. Then the oiler thought I was asleep and I saw him dip his hand into the water and drink out of it. It made me mad, and I jumped up and started for him. He went down on his knees and whimpered like a dog and begged that I give him another chance. I told him I would give him one chance, but that was all; then he would go overboard. That kept him straight; I did not see him do it any more.

The night relieved us a lot. A breeze sprang up and cooled the air a lot, though it kicked up a little chop which made it awfully sloppy on the raft. I remember how mad I got at Johnson. He was sleeping huddled close up to my back, the sailor and engineer sleeping with their heads on our hips. I had the weather side and every little chop would go right into my face. I stood it as long as I could, and when I woke the others up so we could turn over there was an awful holler.

WEDNESDAY morning we saw a sailing ship heading to pass not far from us. Everyone woke up and we started to paddle for her. My, how we worked with only those small pieces of cork for paddles. In our exhausted condition it seemed as if they weighed a ton. It was discouraging work, as the raft barely moved. She passed about two miles from us and continued on her way. They had not seen us. Mother, I shall never forget that hopeless feeling that came over me, and I guess it came over the others. We just lay down in a heap too exhausted to move. The steward had not been paddling; we had had him waving a shirt for a flag. He still continued to wave this shirt. I lay where I could watch her. Mother, probably you can imagine some of the thoughts that were passing through my mind. Suddenly I saw her start to haul up one side of her mainsail, and, having been in sailing ships, I knew that that meant she was going to turn around. That meant another chance for us, even if they had not seen us. They would pass near to us again. We kept the steward waving the shirt and we started again to paddle. It was soon apparent that they had seen us, for they were heading right for us. When she came close they called to us and asked who we were. I stood up and tried to tell them, but I could not talk; my mouth and throat were too swollen. I only made a sort of gurgling sound. They hove to and threw us a line and put a ladder over the side. Two of the men we had to have them hoist up; the rest of us climbed up the ladder.

I was the last to leave the raft. I cast off the line and then climbed halfway up the ladder and turned around and had a last farewell look at the old raft. I had a tender thought for it as I watched it drifting astern. Just as I reached the top and was putting my leg over the rail, I gave out, and if there had not been two men there to grab me I should have fallen back into the water. It was funny; my legs just were no good; I was conscious, but I could not talk. They helped us all to the cabin, where they gave us a small glass of water to wash our mouths with; then they gave us a small cup of coffee and a small square of bread and butter.

They let us rest a while. We could talk then, as the first bit of water loosened up our tongues right away. After a while they took us out on deck and scrubbed us in a big tub. Scrubbed us with regular scrubbing brushes like you use on the floor. Mother, you should have seen Johnson, and I guess I was as bad. They took us out in twos and Johnson and I were taken out together, and as I looked at him standing up in that tub he was a sight. First he was covered with crude oil and looked like a black man. His head was all blistered from the hot sun, and the salt water had made the blisters into sores which were full of yellow matter. His lips were the same; they were just yellow. Then he was so thin I could count every rib in his body. Where his stomach should have been there was only a hollow. He was a terrible-looking thing.

AFTER they had washed us and bandaged our feet, which were the worst part of us, they put us to bed. None of us slept very long; we were too lame and sore and excited . When we got up, they gave us another small cup of coffee and a small piece of bread. That is all they would give us all that day, and yesterday until supper time. They would give us this bread and either coffee or water every hour or so, but no more. Last night we had our first meal.

Our feet are in very bad shape. The engineer's are the worst; he cannot get out of bed. The rest of us hobble around without shoes or socks. Our bodies are all covered with little bubbles. They don't itch, but if you break them they are all full of water.

The Captain is splendid, very simple and religious, and does everything possible for him to do for us.

Well, Mother, luck does not seem to run my way. I have nothing in the world but a shirt and a pair of trousers; even the chronometer is gone. I don't know what I shall do when I arrive in New Orleans.

Don't know yet where you can write me.

Well, good-bye. This little picture shows how we looked to one of the sailors on the Tana when they were picking us up. I took in six inches in my belt the six days and twelve hours that we were on the raft.

Lovingly, GARLAND.

and jes' that minute thar come a regular whale of a hammerin' and the doors of the hearse burst open. Thar was Gram, top of her own coffin, peekin' down low at me and beckonin' fur me to come and git her.

"Mad! I was as mad as a hornet. I went back to that wink she'd given me in t'other dream and seemed like she'd gone back on her word—something Gram had never done livin'. I was off the seat of that hack in a jiffy, runnin' beside the hearse. When the goin' slowed up I stuck my head inside and hollered, 'Ye git straight back whar ye b'long! And what's more, ye stay thar!' Then I begun to whimper like I couldn't stand my feelin's another minute. 'Gram,' says I, 'hain't ye got any heart? Do ye want to disgrace us boys? How'll we cal-ate we'll feel to have the neighbors thinkin' we're tryin' to bury ye ag'in your will? We give ye them five days like we promised—can't ye lay down decent and proper now?' "

AN INTERLUDE followed. I tried to bring back my mind to the reality of life as I knew it to be. I fingered my trout flies and did my best to imagine the still, deep pool below the swamp where I had been on the point of casting when my last leader broke. But the pool and the trout faded into oblivion beside the sterner reality of Gram Perkins. I was on the hack with young Zeb, my eyes fastened in growing perturbation on a pair of solid black doors.

"Jes' started on our January thaw when the next dream took me," broke in Zeb. "We'd reached the cemetery. Grave dug, coffin lowered, folks standin' 'round fur a final prayer. To all appearances everything was goin' first rate. But the sexton hadn't more than picked up his shovel, easy-like, when out comes a whistle, clear as a fog horn. I opened my eyes quick and looked down. Thar was Gram, poppin' out like a jack-in-the-box, lid swung wide open and both hands reachin' fur the dirt the sexton was shovellin' in. Yes, ma'am! Ye never saw dirt fly in all your born days the way Gram made it fly. At the rate she was goin', I knew we'd be standin' thar twell Doomsday, gettin' her buried.

"EVERYBODY else was prayin' hard along with the parson, and he was 'most to the Resurrection. I knew somethin' had to be done quick, so in I jumped. I slapped the dirt out of her hands hard like you would with a child and says I, 'Land o' goodness, Gram, what ails ye? We've fetched ye along to what the Bible calls your last restin' place. All we boys is askin' of ye now is to keep quiet and rest twell Jedgment day.'

"The words warn't more'n out afore I knew I'd said the wrong thing. She didn't lay any more store 'bout this eternal restin' than what ye would, settin' thar fingerin' them flies. She gave me the most pitiful look ye ever saw on a human face. It said, plain as daylight, 'Zeb, lug me back home and let me git to work ag'in.'

"Wall . . . I took to whimperin' like a two-year-old. 'Ef ye woan't do it fur the Bible,' says I, 'do it fur us boys Ye've al'ays been terrible proud of us—al'ays wanted we should have jes' what we wanted, and thar's nothin' in the whole o' creation we want so much this minute as to see ye restin' peaceful. Git back in. Close your eyes, fold your hands, git that listen fur the last trumpet look on your face. Hurry, woan't ye? The sexton's shovelin' like sixty.'

"She give me another of them pitiful looks—nigh broke me all up—and she sort o' slid back and slammed the lid down on her fur all the world like one of these cuckoo clocks. I lit out and landed side o' the parson jes' as he said 'Amen.' . . . 'Amen,' says I, thankful-like. 'Amen,' says the sexton. . . . 'Amen,' says the mourners in a roarin' chorus like the sea. And then I swear to ye that way under the dirt I heard Gram sing out 'Amen!' Tell ye I woke up in a sweat!"

"Cold sweat?" I asked. It was all I could think of.

"Cold as a clam, dripped with it."

"That makes three."

"Three!" Zeb tolled it out like a passing bell. "All bad enough—the fourth, worst of all. Ye wait."

I waited.

"THREE years I lived comfortable in my mind. Seemed like that last Amen had settled things. Then May come along. I'd been slippin' some of them geraniums to take up to the cemetery Memorial day. I could still walk some—slowly, but git about — and I went to bed mighty real happy at the idea o' fixin' up Gram's grave. Right on top o' that came the fourth dream!

"I was swingin' up the road toward the cemetery, and in one hand I carried a pot with the slips in, and t'other held my stick I walked with. Jes' about reached the lot when up comes a jedge from Boston—nice feller — and I asked him to come along and see the view from our place. 'Most famous in the State,' says I. 'Clear days we can see 'most anything.'

"I fetched him through the iron gates and stood him up close to the monument and begun pointin' place out. "Thar's Mount Washington,' says I. 'Some days ye can see the whole Presidential Range. . . . Thar's Katahdin . . . thar's . . .' But I stopped thar dead. I'd caught something move in the grass by Gram's headstone. The next minute out come a whistle, loudest I ever heard. I swung the jedge clear 'round and pointed out to sea. 'Thar's Mount Desert,' says I, 'and thar's Isle au Haut. That's the Rockland boat ye hear whistlin'—consarn it!'

"I LOOKED at Gram. She'd got her head and shoulders clear and she was whistlin' ag'in fur dear life. Then she took her fingers out of her mouth and nodded her head toward our back. Seemed like she was askin' me fur the last time to take her home. The jedge seemed lost in the scenery, and I stepped up to Gram and showed her the geranium slips. 'Look at them,' says I. 'Fetched 'em all the way over to decorate your grave, and here ye be, bustin' loose and cuttin' up. Hain't ye ever goin' to give in and rest in peace?'

"Wall, she never said a word, jes' kept working herself further and further out. I was terrible scairt the jedge would turn round any second and ketch her. Stood thar on pins and needles watchin' Gram rise from her grave. 'Have a heart, Gram,' I begun coaxin' ag'in. 'How'd ye like a city feller like that jedge to ketch a Perkins turnin' ghost like?' . . . Never finished what I set out to say. She looked so queer and upset—so like she wanted to tell me something and didn't know how. I stood thar, geraniums in one hand, stick in t'other, tryin' to make out what it was Gram wanted to tell me. Then it come over me, all of a flash. 'Twasn't she that wanted to git out; 'twas that smart, spunky body o' hern. It was drivin' the sperrit same as a strong wind drives a cloud afore it. She was ready to rest if that doggoned crippled-up, pie-bakin', doughnut-fryin' body would have let her be. But it wouldn't. It was draggin' her out of her coffin, out of her grave, turnin' her loose about the county like no decent sperrit could stand.

" 'I'll fix it,' says I, droppin' the geraniums and grabbin' the stick with both hands, 'I'll fix it so it'll let ye rest quiet twell Doomsday,' and with that I laid on Gram with that stick. I beat her up twell thar warn't nothin' left but a scatterin' of dust on the spring sod. Yes, ma'am! I reduced Gram to dust and ashes like the Bible said had to be."

ALONG sigh swept the stillness of the room. The face of Zeb Perkins underwent a sequence of changes. Triumph had been there, but it dwindled out and sorrow took its place; and then a fear, a tremulous commiseration and, finally, bewilderment. He now looked straight at me. His eyes were dull, fearful. "They doan't understand, them Perkinses to the harbor. They doan't think I ever ought to have done that to Gram."

I gathered up my flies and was halfway to the door before Zeb spoke again. His voice had now grown querulous: "Wall—what do ye think?"

I gave my answer as I slipped out of doors, into the wide spaces again. "I think the trout are going to bite," said I.

Ended His Life "With a Bang!"

center of a tall room. Upon the bed lies one of those pistols. . . . This nightmare has repeated itself more than once. . . ."

His poems, of a languorous and erotic type, were invariably dedicated to his wife, Caresse.

It is impossible to say when Josephine Rotch Bigelow intruded on this married idyll. She had been seeing Crosby frequently since his return from Paris, according to Stanley G. Mortimer, in whose studio the double tragedy occurred.

When Mortimer returned to his apartment on the evening of the tragedy, he found the door locked on the inside. A house detective joined him and tried to force the door. Mortimer finally went for a fire ax and smashed the barrier. What met his eyes has already been told—the bodies of the lovers on a bed in a room off the studio, lying fully clothed side by side, a .25-caliber gun in Crosby's hand, from which two shots had been fired. Crosby had evidently shot Josephine Bigelow first, through the right temple, and then turned the gun on himself. A bottle and two empty glasses were on the bedside table.

Harry Crosby's ancestry, his writings, what he said, what he believed—all these, his friends, and also the friends of the dead woman, point out not as justification for the tragedy but merely offer it as what is to them the obvious explanation of what took place on "the bed in the center of the tall room," at the Hotel des Artistes that afternoon.

"Ten generations of emotional suppression finally exploded with a bang, mechanically perfect, in the life of a single individual of the eleventh generation. The will power and reason of one lone individual was not strong enough to withstand the pressure of the surcharged emotional energy of all his ancestors struggling for an outlet within himself. The explosion was as inevitable as fate!"

With this explanation those who knew them well sum up the life and death of Harry Crosby and of Josephine Rotch Bigelow.

WHO KILLED GERALD BILOXI?

Why the Dead Millionaire in a Library Is a Favorite Subject for Commotion Pictures.

CRIME statistics will show that about three millionaires are being bumped off per 5000 feet of film as compared with about one and one-quarter millionaires before the movies became hysterical. It is a rare library, now, that doesn't yield up a corpse or two when the butler opens the blinds of mornings. Not that anyone is sorry we are getting more murders per mile. It is always a great deal of fun trying to figure out what the characters are saying and who killed the millionaire, and those who crave further mental exercise can try to figure out why he was killed, although this is not so important. Of course, certain people object to this type of film on the ground it teaches children too much about violence, but it should not be forgotten that these children will grow up to take their places in society and probably go to Long Island house parties.

For some time prior to the advent of talking films the movies quit crime altogether and dealt only with robberies, forgeries and bootlegging. However, this dead-millionaire-in-the-library subject lends itself admirably to the commotion pictures. You get the actual shots and the screams of the witnesses and then hear the detectives gurgling over the matter in person. Before cackling movies the drummer used to imitate the revolver report, and while that compared favorably with the present detonation, no drummer could ever fake a yell like Lois Moran yells when she is a guest at a murder.

The killings are generally committed in large mansions where a lot of people are congregated so that the audience will suspect about a score of persons in turn and everybody but the real marksman. The action usually takes place over the week-end when all of the relatives have dropped in for a pleasant time. It would be a refreshing change, and perhaps a more logical plot, if one of these millionaires would rise up some time and slay all of his relatives; but so far no producer has worked this out, and it looks like a tough winter for hosts.

The heroine should not be a native of New York but a resident of some other place, as her journey to the city affords the opportunity for a lot of good noise. A steamship is preferable over a train as it makes more noise, especially when the train has an electric engine. Therefore, the heroine should dwell somewhere on the seacoast. The first scene will show her saying farewell to her parents. It is storming and we get the noise of the rain, thunder, lightning, etc., and a wise director will take the scene near the chicken coop where a few hailstones can rattle on the tin roof.

"WELL, good-by, Dad," bellows Mary. "Mffnnpffnn hope to shee you shoon blawrk—rrk—mffn."

"Yaw bither wide us offen bag here in Pleasant View," shouts the old man tenderly. "Bithnnn awrkk dode fergid loog ub your cousin Oscar subdib mffnnpffn blork mffnn."

"I'll do thad," halloos Mary. "Hfnnf."

"Hfnnf," answers the old man simply.

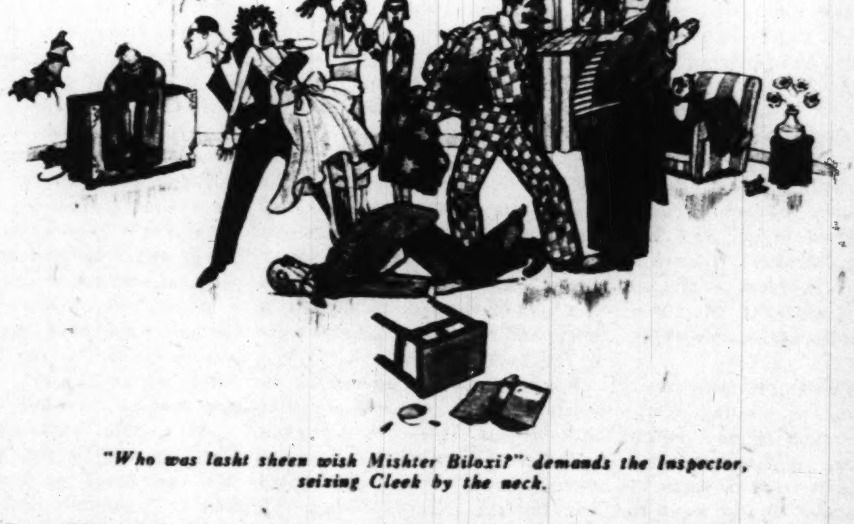
Mary is not an Ojibway at all, but a very attractive white girl. She sawmills a sob and then gets into her taxi, an antiquated vehicle that makes a lot of splendid noise when cranked. On the way to the dock they stumble across a warehouse fire, which presents the opportunity for sirens, clattering fire trucks, shouts, etc., and then come to a grade crossing, where they are in time for a freight train. If the brakeman can be in the caboose playing a cornet solo, so much the better.

The next shot shows Mary's steamer coming into the harbor and whistling as if it carried the American Olympic team or Commander Byrd. It plows into the dock with a resounding thump, whereupon a dozen porters, apparently wearing wooden shoes, clatter over the gangplank with crates of what sounds like broken crockery and automobile bolts. A few airplanes overhead won't hurt.

Mary tramps the theatrical district for several days but is unable to get a job in the Follies, as she can't sing. Utterly discouraged and tired and hungry, she is about to go to a cigarette factory and offer to indorse their cigarettes, when she falls and luckily sprains her ankle. A handsome young man picks her up and carries her across the street to one of those large, imposing residences that has an extra phone extension. He is Harold Swampscott, nephew of Gerald Biloxi, the eccentric millionaire.

"Jush be quide and everything will be alride," thunders Harold. "Wffnn blork sub dee?"

Mary smilingly replies that she could stand some tea, and a little roast beef, too, if there is any; and Harold goes out to the kitchen. Old man Biloxi comes in and asks Mary whether she lives in this precinct, and when she says no, invites her to stick around a while. She replies that she doesn't care if she does, as she can't navigate very far on her bum hoof. But everybody knows right away that she has fallen for this Swampscott rascal.



"Who was lasht sheen wish Mishter Biloxi?" demands the Inspector, seizing Cleek by the neck.

Immediately after supper things get mysterious. A large horde of friends and relatives are on hand and they are all tough-looking. There is a niece who walks around in a daze, carrying an old army sword, a furtive-eyed aunt who keeps a raven for a pet, and a silent, thin woman who darts into her room from time to time to polish up an automatic pistol.

The only respectable-looking person in the house is young Swampscott, but then he is always slipping penciled messages to a shadowy Chinaman who is forever climbing up the sides of the building and crawling out of fireplaces. The servants are shifty-eyed and look as if they had their last place on a pirate's junk off the Malay Peninsula.

IN VIEW of this personnel, nobody should be surprised when old Biloxi is found dead in the library. The library is a dark, dusty, foreboding place, full of cobwebs, spiders and bats, with a screech-owl or two roosting on the chandelier, and how the servants could let the room stay in that condition and keep their jobs is a bigger mystery.

The body is found by Cleek, the butler, who has come in for the ostensible purpose of feeding the owls. He is so surprised at finding Biloxi in the library that he emits a yell of astonishment. The yell is echoed by everybody in the household, and then we hear police sirens and the roar of speeding automobiles. A group of detectives wearing black derbies and cigars troop in, followed by Dazzy Grimes, the amateur criminologist.

"Who was lasht sheen wish Mishter Biloxi?" demands the Inspector, seizing Cleek by the neck. "Dell me de truf, now, or whffn blork fnnhf. Get me?"

"Mish Truesdale, dere," answers Cleek, pointing to Mary.

Mary gives one of her ever-ready yells. However, young Swampscott pushes his way to the fore.

"Free dat girl!" he shouts. "I killed Gerald Biloxi, Mishter Inshpector! I'b riddy!"

"Sha lie!" screams Mary. "I shod hib!"

"Bosh!" shouts the Inspector. "Yug Swampscott is tryig to shield dat girl, and dat butler is tryig to shield dat yug bad! Mffnnhffn uffn wmmpff! Whussa idee?"

"I killed hib!" shouts the maid.

"I killed hib!" booms the gardener.

In view of this teamwork, the police are baffled. However, Mary disappears and this is looked upon as a sure sign of guilt. Then Dazzy Grimes steps forward, twirling his cane.

"Gib me wud hour and I'll hab your burderer!" he roars. "Ride dow, I musht whffnnn uffnn awrrkk biffn."

It would not do to relate how this thing is worked out, as somebody might tell his friends. However, it is better than the book. Suffice it to say that Mr. Biloxi was killed by the aunt because he would never tune in the Johnson Laundry Workers' Steam Quartet.

Mary and Harold immediately decide to get a license, and they take a subway to the City Hall, not only because it is cheaper than a taxi, but it makes more noise. As they emerge on the plaza they are in time to hear a concert given by the 151st Infantry Band. They are driven to the Justice's in a roaring sport roadster, fly away in a tri-engined plane and spend their honeymoon at Niagara Falls.

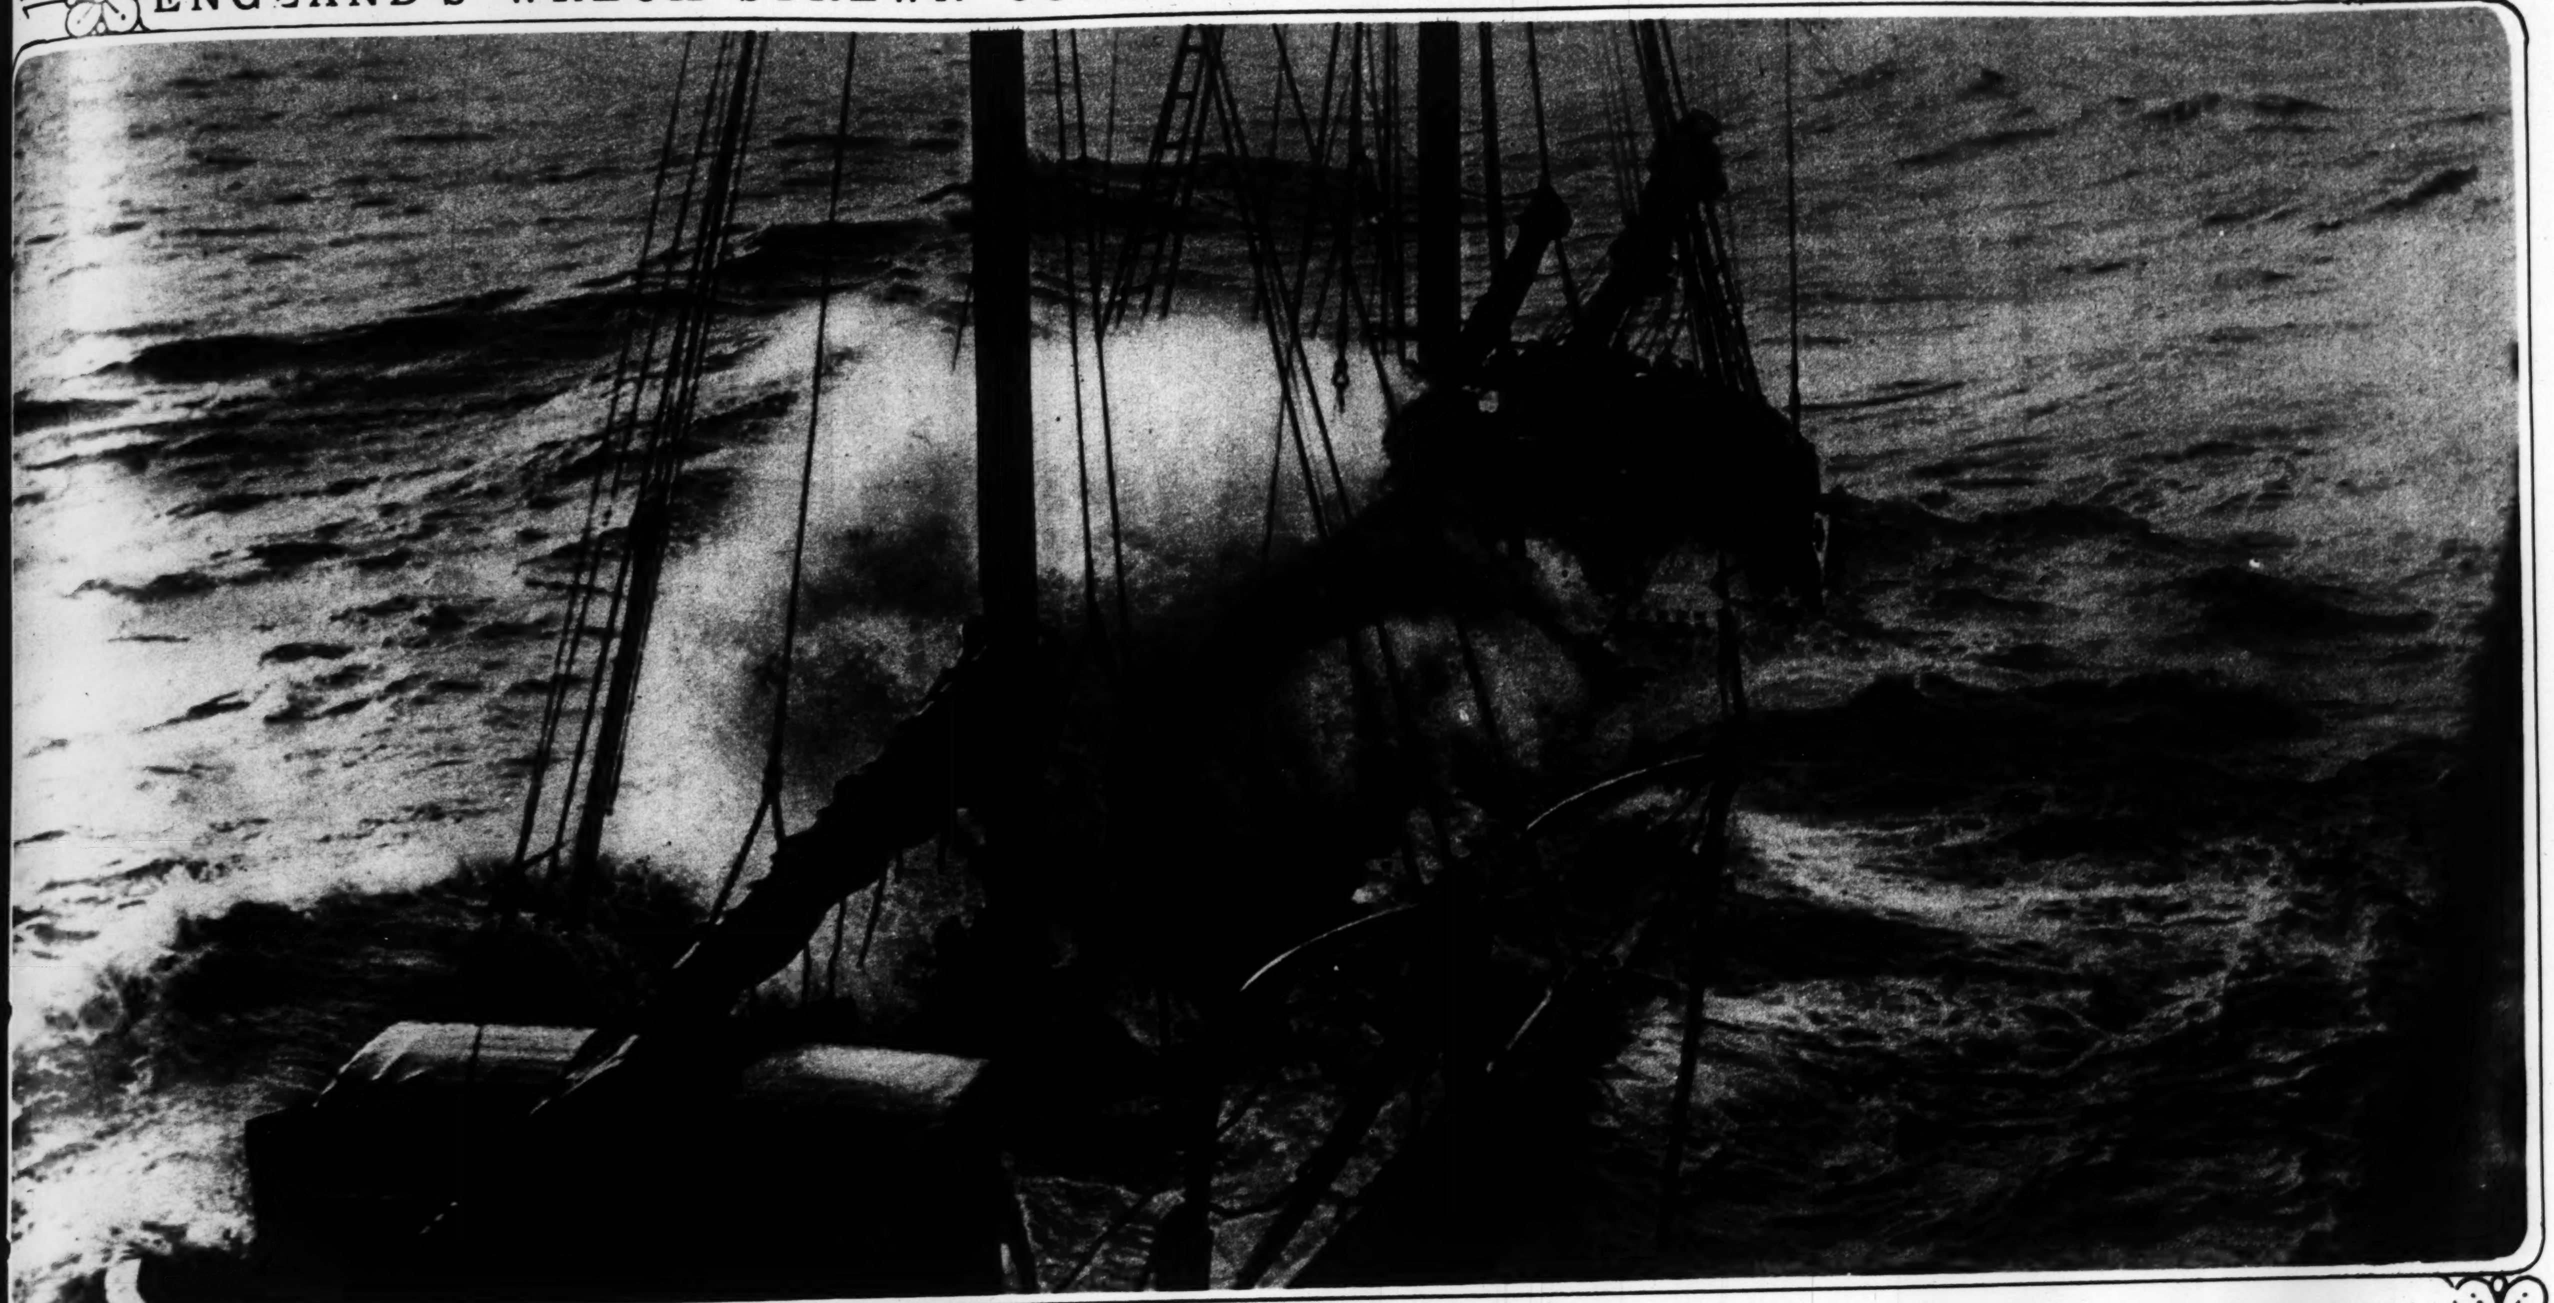
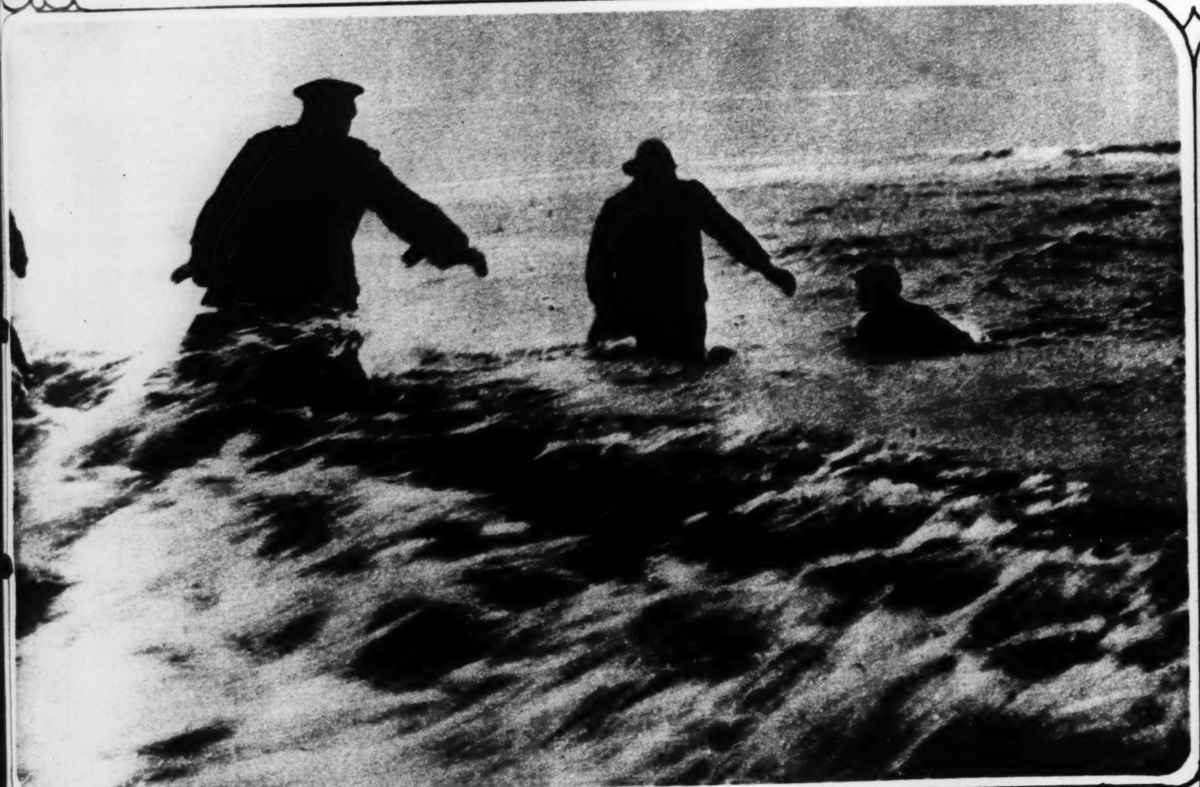
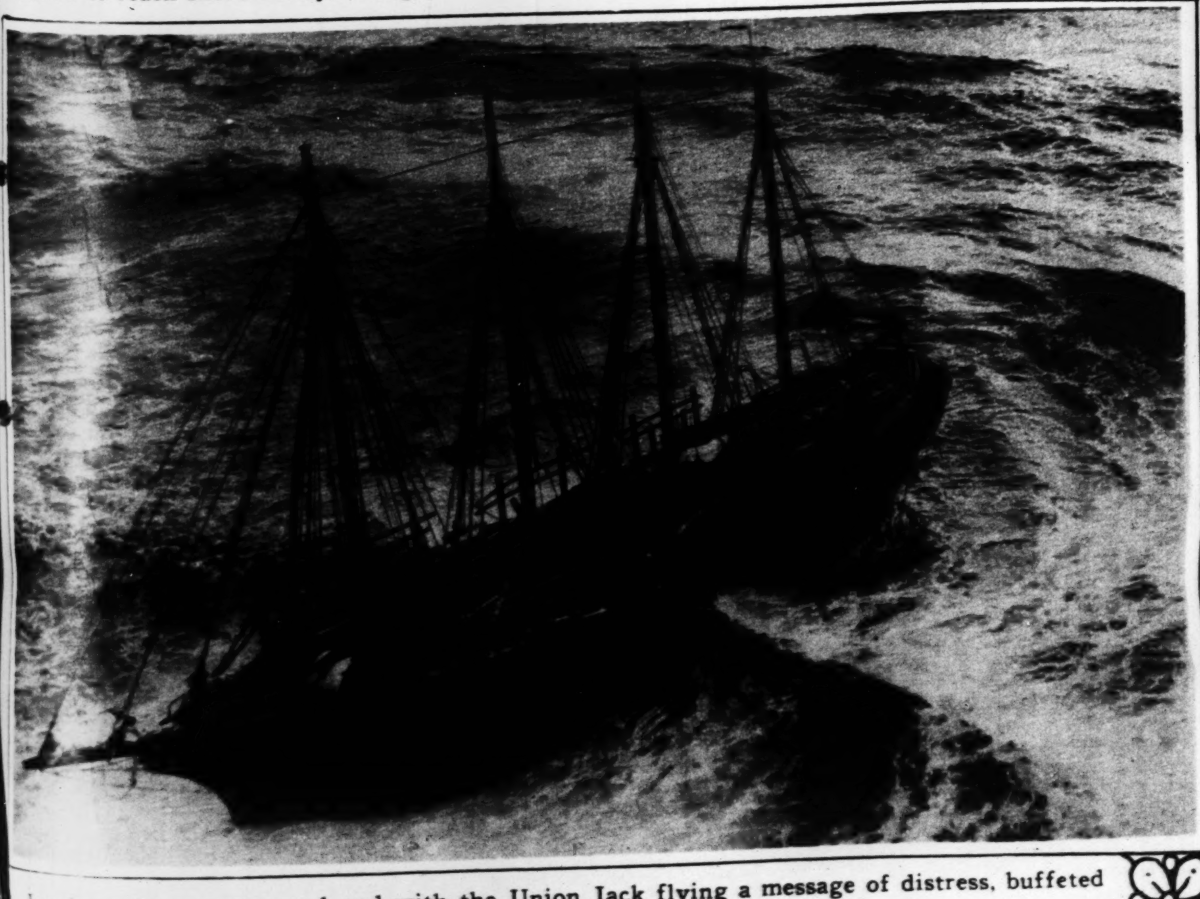
ENGLAND'S WRECK-STREWN COAST AFTER WORST GALES IN FIFTY YEARS



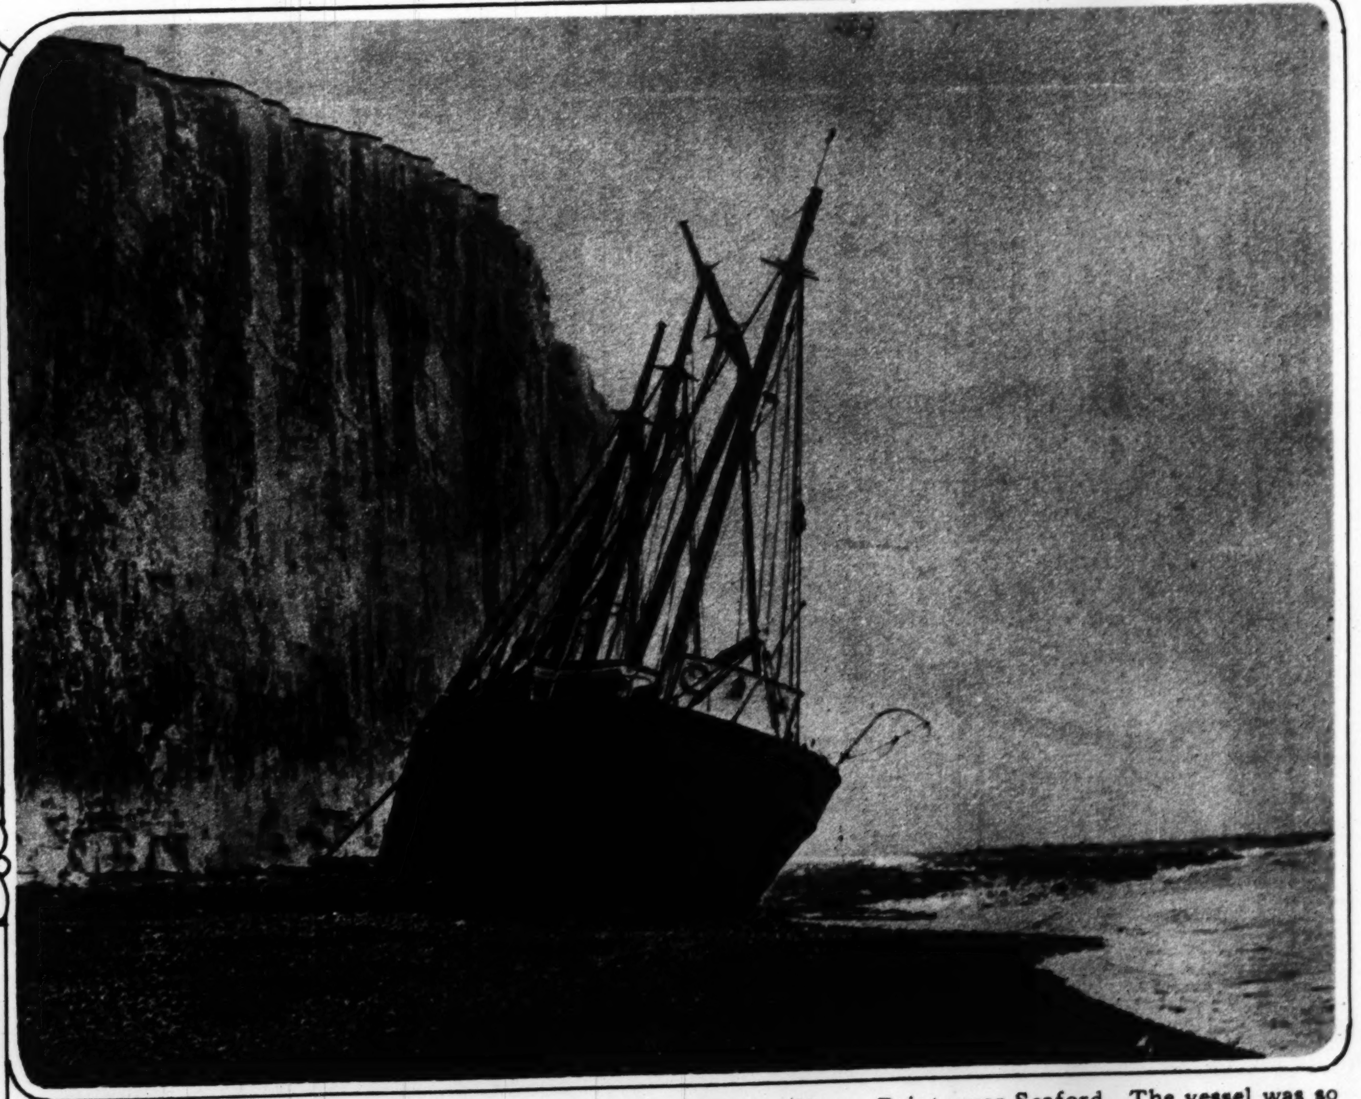
Ketch driven ashore near Dover and battered by the surf during the December storm which brought more than 150 wireless calls for help, in a single day, from vessels in and around the British Isles. The toll of life was over the hundred mark in that week of storm and stress. Scenes like the above were common along the coast.



Coast guardsmen wading out to help ashore a member of the crew of a vessel which had been beached in the storm. A life line shot to the distressed ship enabled the sailors aboard to reach shore safely, though in a benumbed, exhausted condition.



Lumber schooner, aground and with the Union Jack flying a message of distress, buffeted by the waves off Burling Gap. Later the ship was completely broken apart.



A large sailing vessel blown high and dry upon the beach at Haven Point, near Seaford. The vessel was so badly damaged that no effort will be made to float it again.

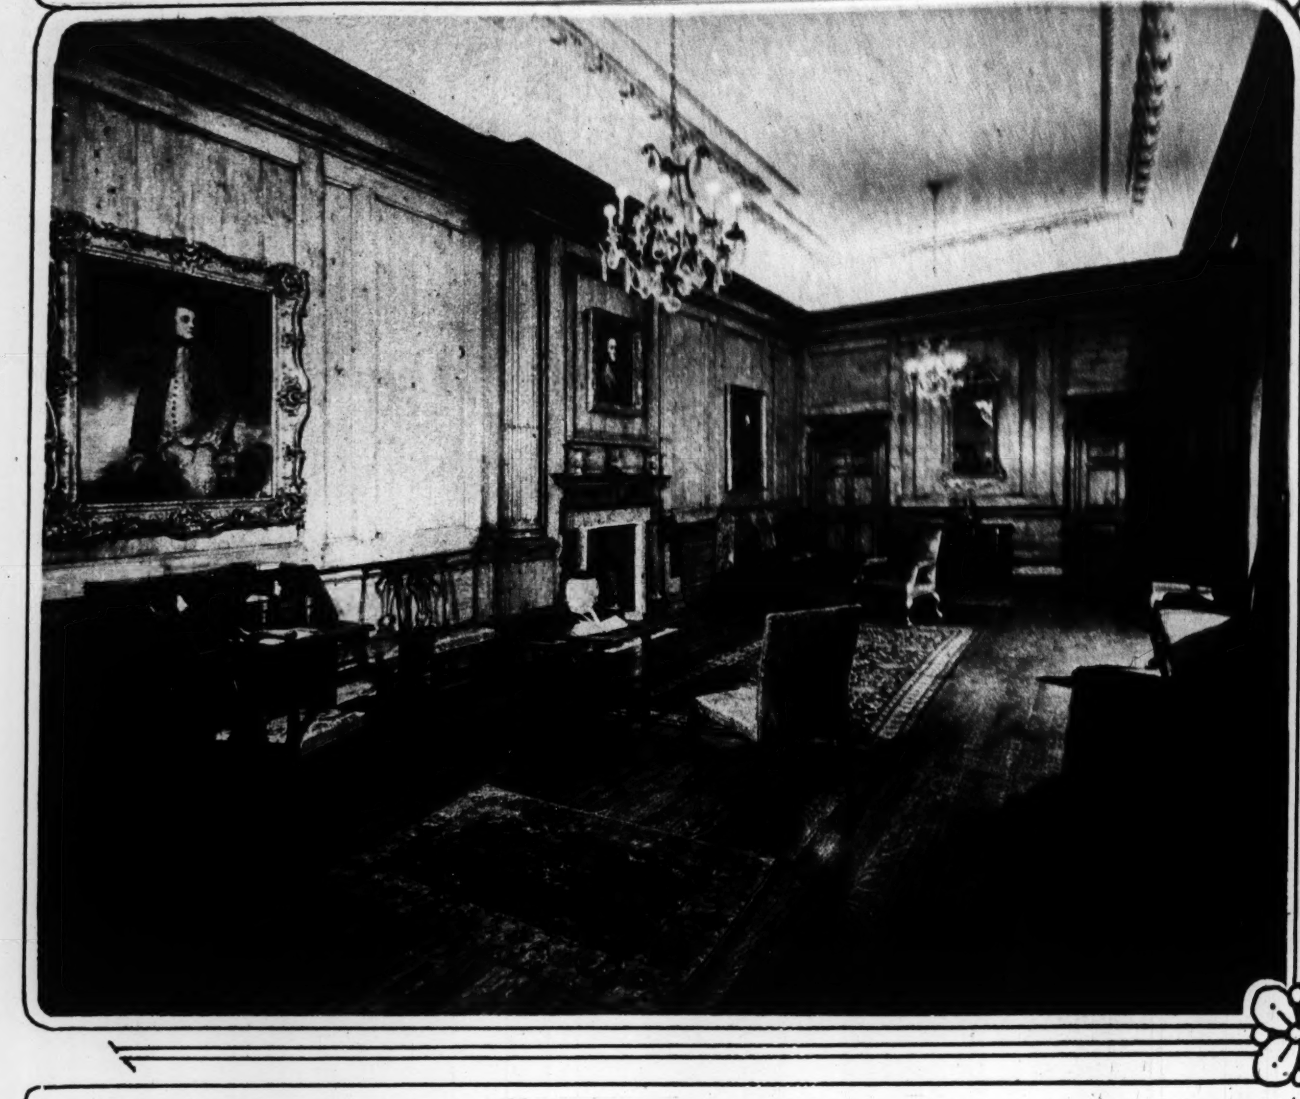
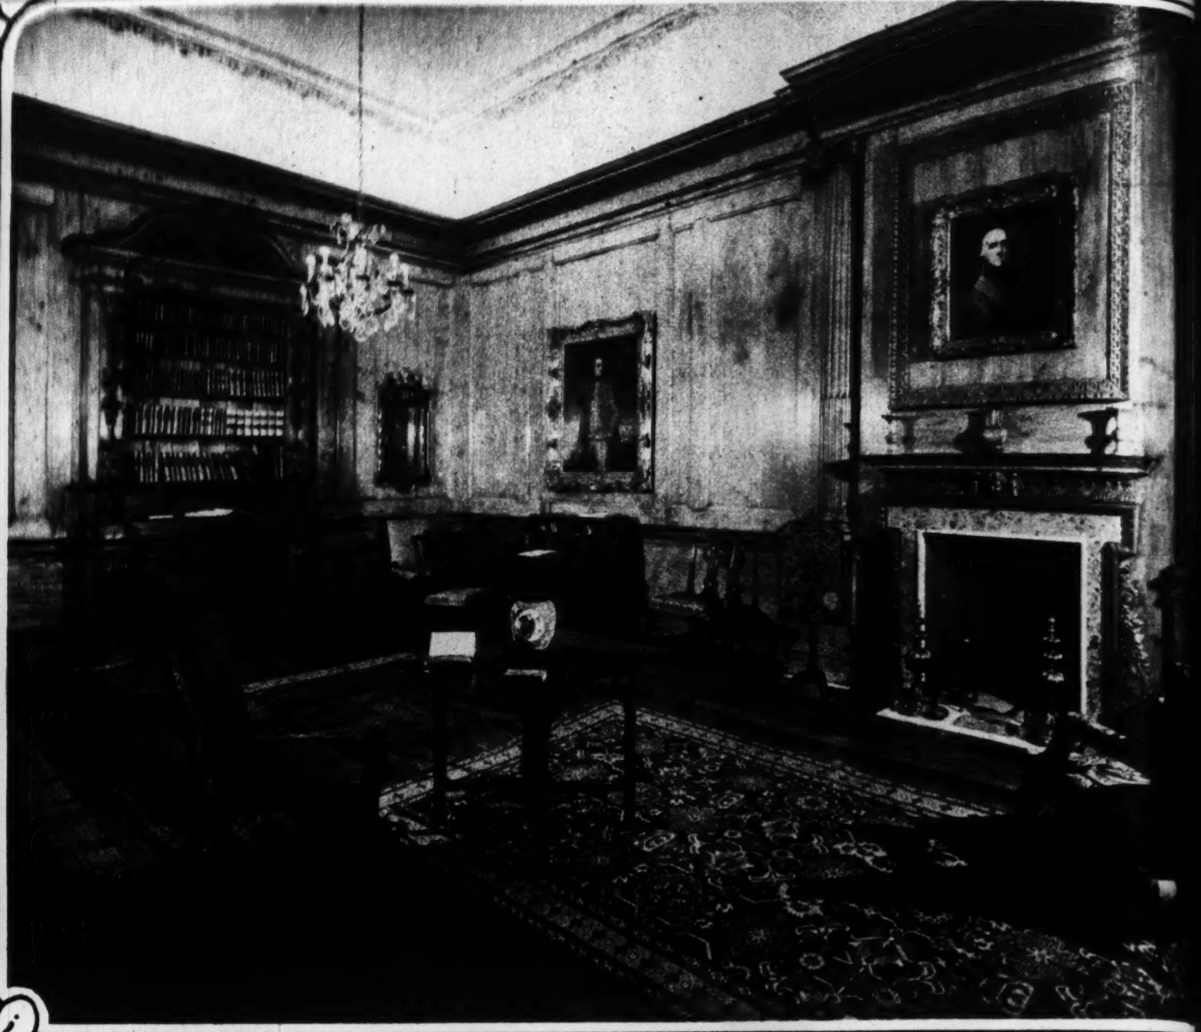
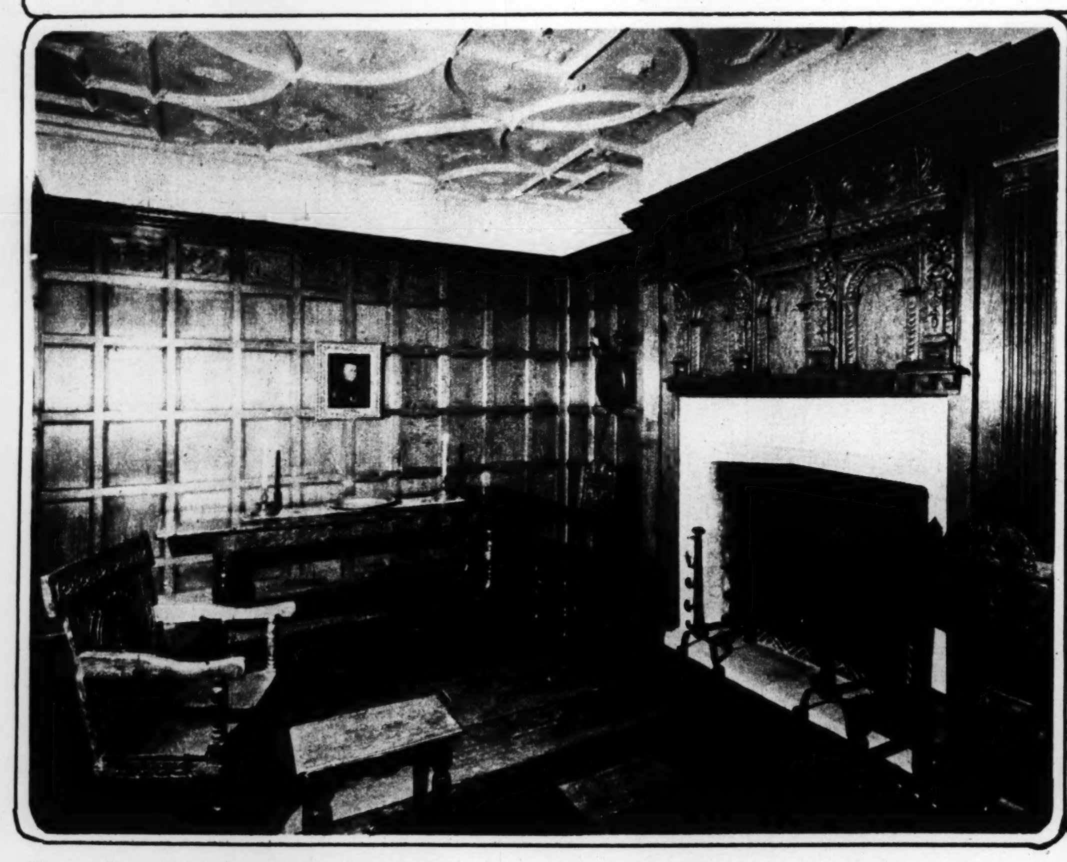
"PERIOD" ROOMS JUST COMPLETED AT THE ST. LOUIS ART MUSEUM

Five rooms, built in dwellings which existed in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries in France and England, having been dismantled in the last year, have been put together again in the St. Louis Art and furnished in the manner of their period so that visitors can see how homes were made, decorated and furnished in the days of James I, Queen Anne, George I, George III and Louis XV, two and three ago. These rooms will be open to the public next Saturday. Four of them are pictured below.

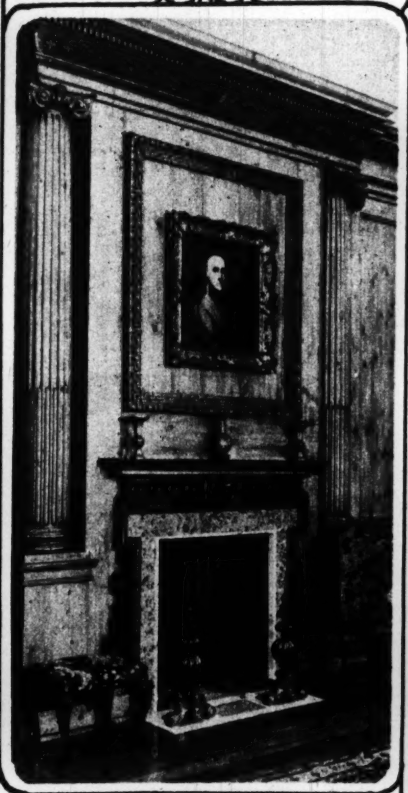




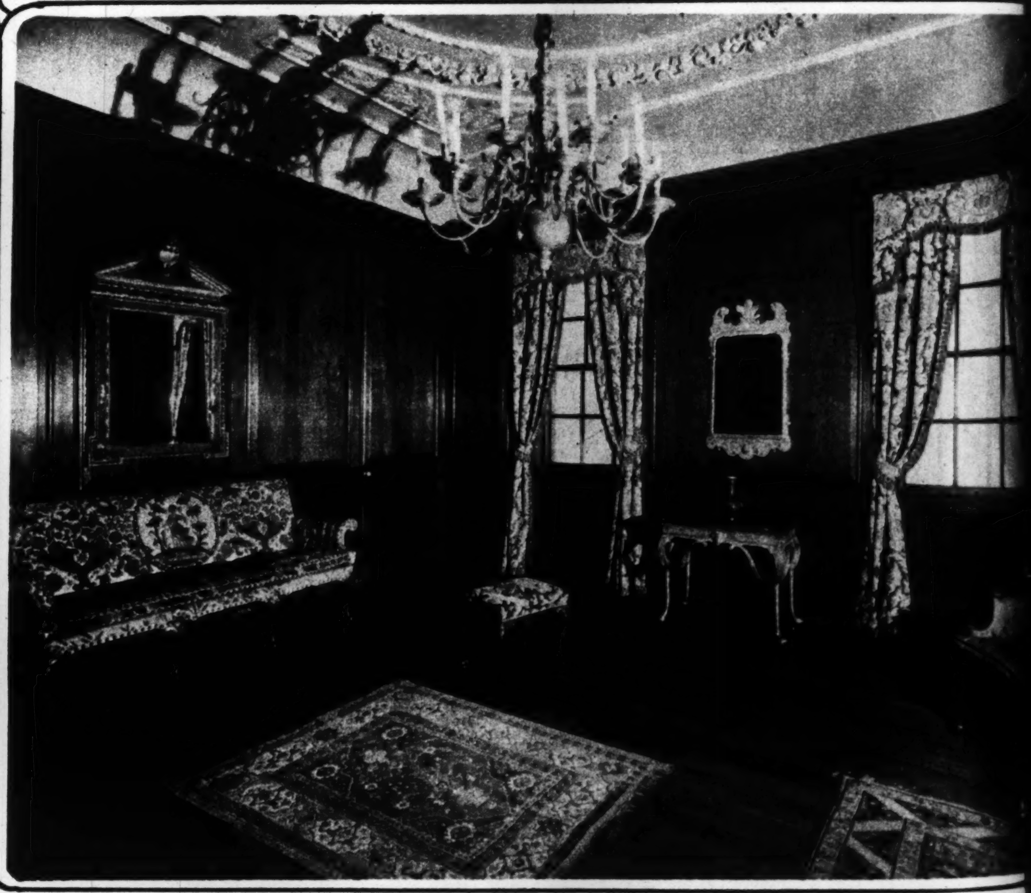
Room from Charlton House, near Greenwich, Kent—period of George I, about 1725. Presented by Joseph Pulitzer as a memorial to his first wife, Elinor Wickham Pulitzer. This interior is rated by experts a example of the early eighteenth century, when design was largely under the influence of the architects William Kent and James Gibbs, the latter a pupil of Christopher Wren. The paneling is of fine pine, as the built-in bookcase and the mantel. Marble is used for the fireplace. The furniture is original with the period. The portraits are by Romney, Raeburn and Reynolds, from the Parsons collection.



Room from Prinknash Park, near Gloucester—Jacobean, early seventeenth century: The paneling is of oak and typically Elizabethan. The stone fireplace has a Tudor arch, surmounted by the mantelpiece of arcaded panels which are separated by terminal figures. The table, with bulbous legs; the two side chairs and the joint stool in the foreground are typical Jacobean pieces, with carved ornamentation. The portrait is by Moro and the hanging armor is a typical decoration.



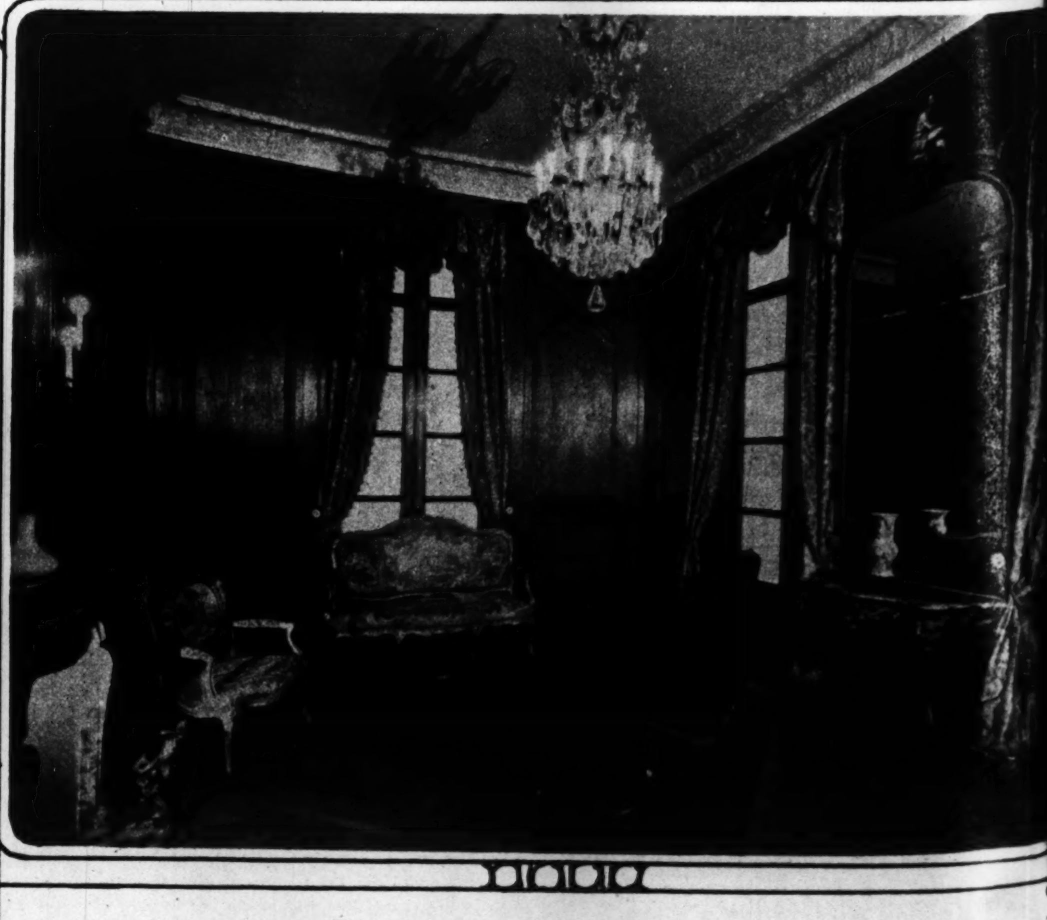
A detail of the fireplace and mantel in the Charlton House room.



Room from Wingerworth Hall, Derbyshire, period of Queen Anne, about 1700: settee, covered with the original petit point, is regarded as a remarkable example. other furnishings correspond with those in the rest of the room. The chandelier, brass, was made in Holland.

French room, from residence called Hotel de Pomponne, Paris—period of Louis XV, about 1725. Here the panel style is distinctively French. The overdoor paintings, of classical subjects, set in the paneling, are said to be by Charles Antoine Coypel. The woodwork may have been painted originally. The fireplace has fire dogs and scones of ormolu. A few pieces of Oriental porcelain are used for ornaments and the furnishings are typical of the period.

Rock crystal chandelier in the Louis XV room. It is about five feet high and three feet in diameter and consists of hundreds of pieces varying in size from that of an earring to a large pear, like the pendant.



Another view of the Louis XV period room. The settee and armchair are in their ori inal state, covered with authentic Beauvais tapestry. Beneath the mirror is an usu ally well carved table.

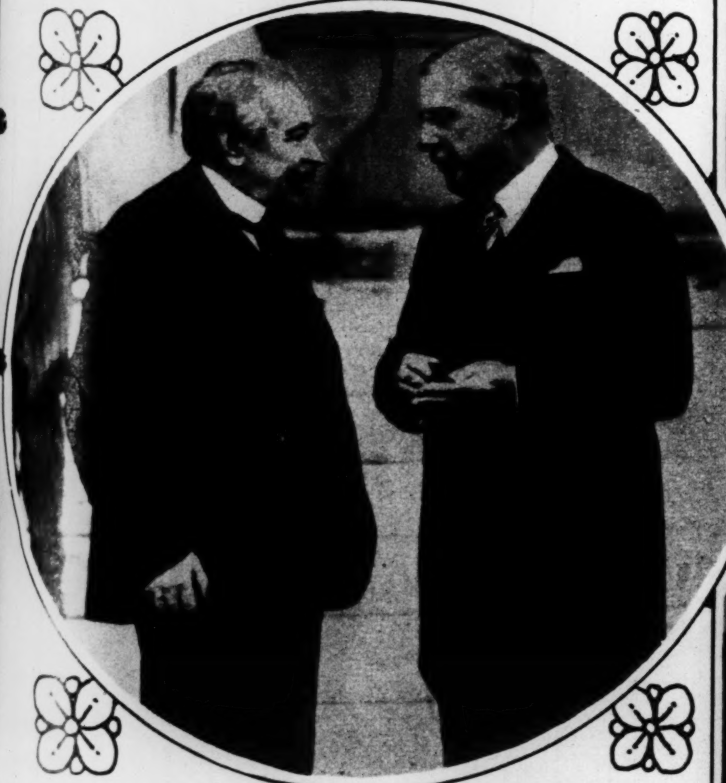
PINNACLES ABOVE THE FOG—An unusual photograph, taken in the closing days of December, in New York City. The camera was atop the Woolworth Building on a day of heavy fog. Only a few skyscrapers of lower Manhattan towered above the bank of mist which enveloped those below.

THE REAL MRS. LINDBERGH—Snapshot of the wife of the famous aviator taken when she was unaware of the presence of a camera. Like many another individual, Mrs. Lindbergh is "camera shy," as photographers call those who are unable to face the lens entirely unconcerned.

MODEST WEDDING OF TENNIS CHAMPION—The former Helen Wills leaving St. Clement's Chapel, Berkeley, Cal., with her husband, Frederick S. Moody Jr., after simple ceremony attended by only a few friends.

ITALY'S FUTURE QUEEN—Princess Marie Jose arriving at a ball in Brussels. Her marriage to the Crown Prince of Italy will soon take place.

ATTENTION, CHILDREN!—Little sons and daughters of Northern families who are spending the winter in and around Miami, Fla., study their lessons in outdoor classes.



A WELCOME FOR THE NEW AMBASSADOR—Foreign Minister Briand greeting Walter E. Edge in Paris when the former New Jersey Senator called to present his credentials as representative of the United States.

A STATESMAN GOING FOR A RIDE, BUT NOT A SINSTER ONE—Winston Churchill, upon taking the office of Chancellor of Bristol University, was promptly indicted by the students for acquiring a new hat and a new title, and with failure to provide cakes and coffee. PILGRIM'S PROGRESS IN THE HIMALAYAS

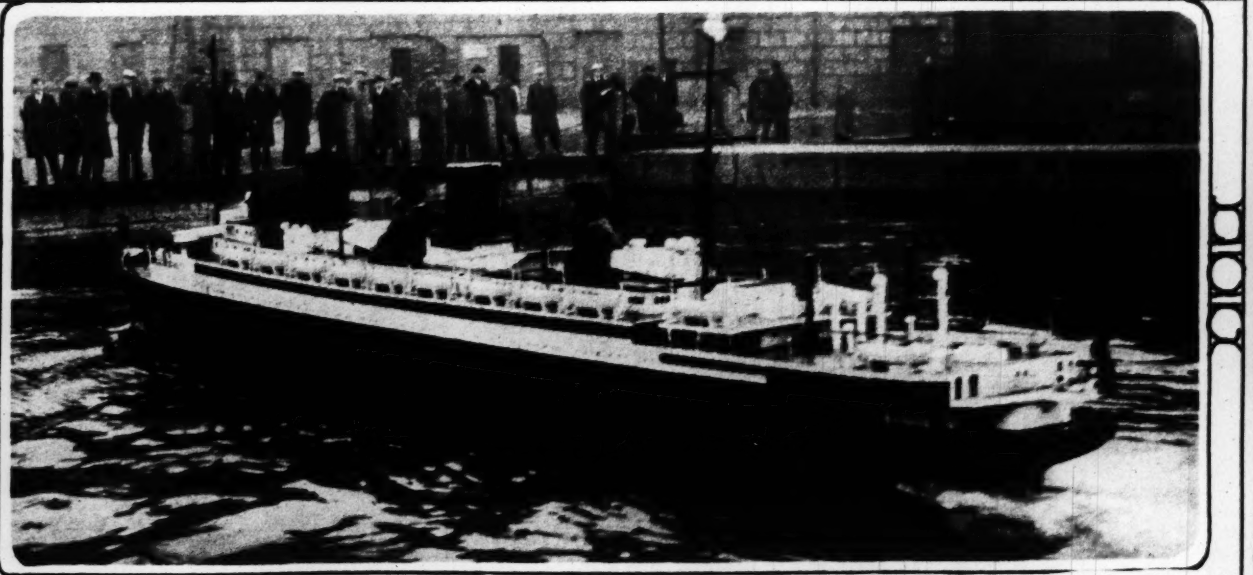
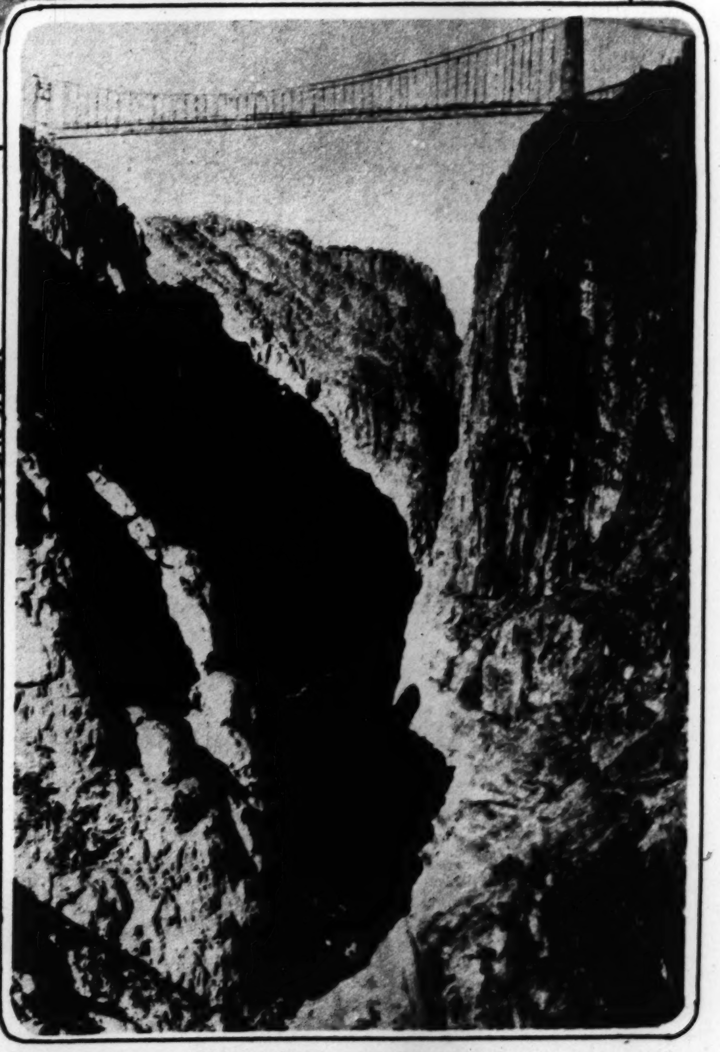
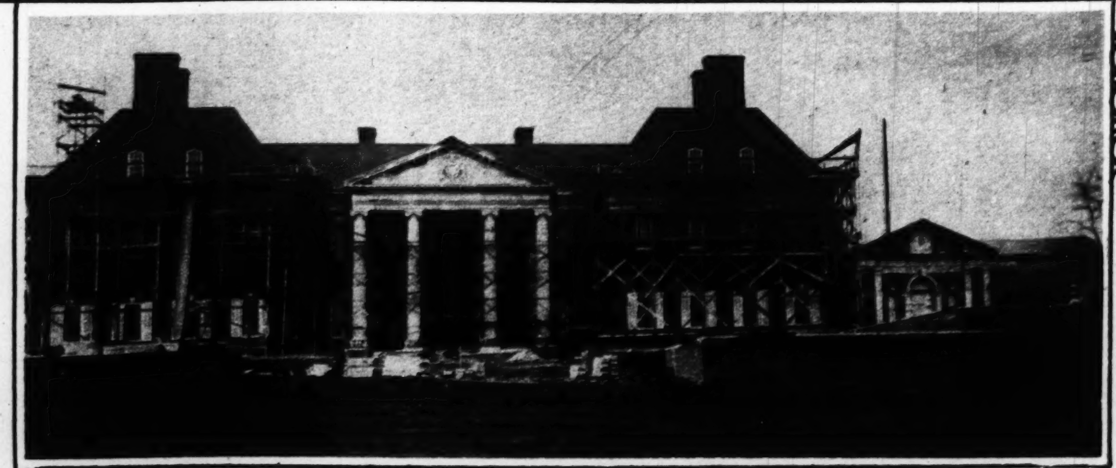
GENERAL LYON AS HE WAS—In view of the controversy over the statue recently placed at Grand and Pine, this old photograph of the Civil War hero, owned by William Bleyer, St. Louis attorney, is of unusual interest.



BIGGEST OF MODEL STEAMSHIPS—Here is an exact miniature, 39 feet long, of the North German Lloyd liner Columbus, off the Battery in New York. It has two engines, each of five horsepower.

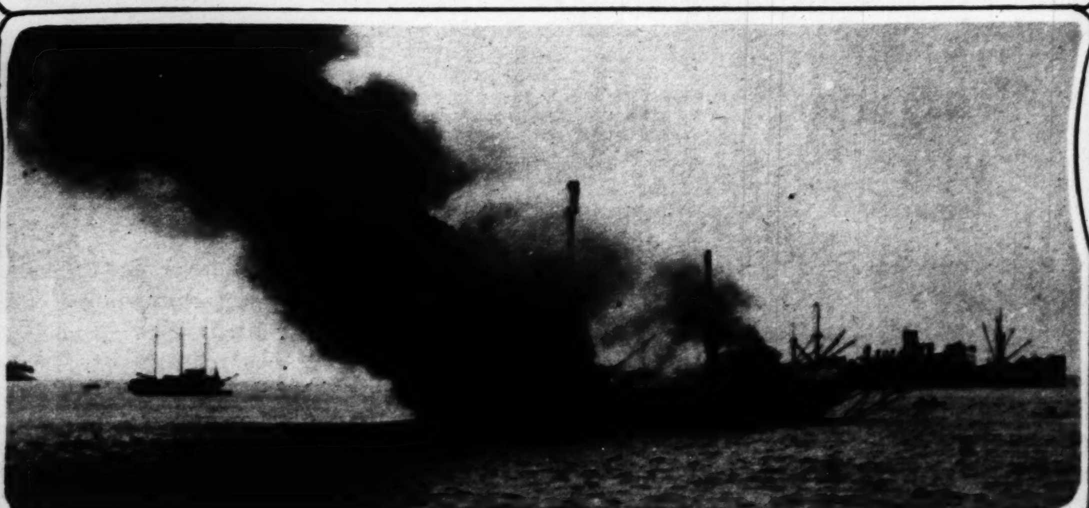


SPANNING THE ROYAL GORGE—Bridge recently completed near Canon City, Colo., with the waters of the Arkansas River 1054 feet below.



NEW BRITISH EMBASSY IN WASHINGTON—Costliest building of its kind in the world now nearing completion on Massachusetts avenue. In rear will be a large garden with seats for almost 1000 guests.

BRIDE OF PRINCE OF INDIA—The former Mlle. Carron, Paris shop girl, who was wedded recently in Paris to Aga Khan, millionaire Mohammedan leader.



FAMOUS SHIP DESTROYED—The burning of the non-magnetic yacht Carnegie in the harbor of Apia, Samoa. This ship had sailed all over the world studying magnetic currents of the earth.

Rudy VALLEE says . . .

"PUT YOURSELF ACROSS"

America has lost her heart to him—this charming youth who thrills millions with his crooning voice so full of magnetism, pathos, life. What has he that others envy? Is it merely added energy, added physical "drive"?

"For that subtle 'added ounce' of energy I follow the simple advice of great physicians"

"How you feel has a lot to do with how people feel about you," says Rudy Vallée.

"Lots of folks handicap themselves by getting run-down—sluggish and out of order physically. Naturally they can't 'put themselves across.' They are half sick.

"When I was rehearsing for the Fleischmann Radio Hour I heard so much about yeast that I decided to try it. I was under a terrific strain—playing, singing, rehearsing, planning my talking-singing picture, 'The Vagabond Lover.' Well, what the famous physicians say about yeast certainly worked out in my case. It gave me just that 'added ounce' of energy I needed to keep fresh and 'on my toes'."

A remarkable food, Fleischmann's Yeast brings you quick new energy by purifying and stimulating your whole digestive tract. Elimination becomes regular, complete. Appetite and digestion improve. Complexion troubles disappear.

Start today! You can get Fleischmann's Yeast at grocers, restaurants, soda fountains.

EAT THREE CAKES of Fleischmann's fresh Yeast daily, one before each meal or between meals, just plain or dissolved in water. Every cake is rich in two vitamins indispensable to health—vitamin B and the "sunshine" vitamin D.

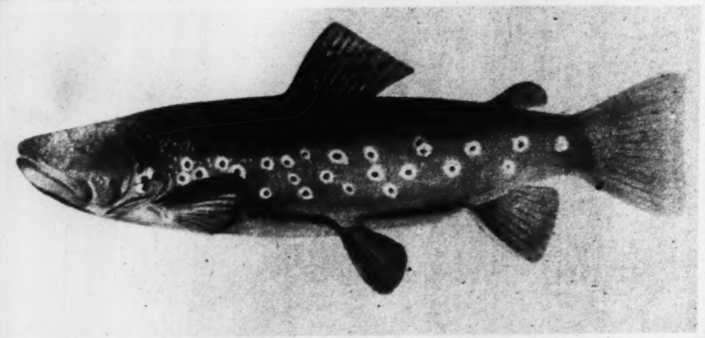
BIGGEST TREE IN MISSOURI—A burr oak in the heart of the Three States' Tract, in Mississippi County, is perhaps the largest tree in the entire Mississippi Valley. It is 29 feet 6 inches in circumference and more than 125 feet in height. The first limb is 50 feet from the ground. It is a 15-mile hike to reach this tree, through swamp, bayou and forest.



A NEW RESIDENT OF MISSOURI, THE BROWN TROUT—A hundred thousand eggs of this fine game fish have been received from Wisconsin by the Missouri Game and Fish Department, and are being incubated at two State fish hatcheries.

TURPO
PROMPT SOOTHING & HEALING
MEDIUM SIZE
ELECTRIC VAPORIZER
PAT. PENDING

for COLDS-

quick relief from your light socket

Doctors have long recognized that a true vapor treatment would break a cold. But it remained for Turpo to provide a true, healing vapor at the mere turn of an electric switch and at a trifling cost well within the reach of all.

No rash claims—no over-rated theories—are needed to bolster the quiet, convincing performance of this new Turpo Electric Vaporizer.

It is so simple, so amazingly effective that it has instantly replaced old-fashioned haphazard cold treatments in thousands of homes.

Common-sense Help in Modern Form

Stop bothering with nasty-tasting cough mixtures, harsh-acting cold tablets or old-fashioned double purpose salves. Just plug the cord into a light socket. In a few moments you have a warm, healing vapor that spells quick relief to head and chest colds, congestions, and similar complaints.

You can feel this Turpo vapor reach the spot. The first breath will convince you that finally you have found real help for colds. You will inhale a vapor so potent, so profuse, so ideally adapted to its purpose that each breath carries the true essence of Turpentine, Menthol and Camphor direct to the sore, inflamed, congested membranes of the nose, throat and chest.

Improvement is immediate. Your head clears, congestion is relieved, breathing becomes free, and shortly the cold breaks up.

Easy—Quick—Sure

Consider the convenience of this new cold aid. No fuss or trouble. No greasy hands or soiled linen.

Here is Our Special Bargain Offer

New! AN ELECTRIC VAPORIZER
Quick relief for Colds
A $2.25 VALUE for only 95¢
75¢ Jar TURPO THE VAPORIZING OINTMENT
$1.50 TURPO ELECTRIC VAPORIZER
TURPO

As a special introductory offer and proof of results, dealers are authorized to offer a full size 75c jar of Turpo and a $1.50 Turpo Electric Vaporizer—a regular $2.25 value—for only 95c. This special bargain price is good for a short time only, so act promptly. If your favorite drug store or department store is unable to supply you, we will fill your order direct, parcel post prepaid, at the same special price, plus five cents for postage and handling. The coupon is for your convenience. Clip and mail it today.

Both for Only 95¢

Just fill the vaporizer one-third full of water. Add one teaspoonful of Turpo. Plug cord into light socket—that's all. In a few moments, quicker than you can boil water over a stove, vapor will form and continue to form for fifteen minutes.

Consider its uses—in the sickroom, at night, at office, at home. You can go to bed with a bad cold. Place the vaporizer at the bedside. Connect it at any time during the night should coughing disturb sleep.

No need even to leave the covers,—a big point when exposure to cold and draughts in insufficient clothing may mean heightened infection and serious danger. And should you drop off to sleep and forget to turn it off—no need to fear, as it automatically ceases to use current when contents have been completely vaporized!

For Adults and Children too

The Turpo Vapor Treatment is not only ideal for adults but mothers find it invaluable for children's colds. Children think it fun to inhale the beneficial Turpo vapor instead of working themselves into tantrums at being forced to take evil-tasting mixtures of doubtful merit.

The Turpo Vaporizer is a thoroughly tested electric appliance. It comes complete with five feet of high quality cord and standard connection ready to plug into socket. The vaporizer jar itself is interchangeable with any regular Turpo jar of the same size. It is so staunchly made that it should last for years.

Bargain Offer Good for Short Time Only

Snow and sleet are coming. Danger months are ahead. Another dreaded FLU epidemic may be just around the corner.

This special offer is good for a short time only. Get your Turpo Vaporizer now at the special bargain price. Your druggist is able to buy only a limited quantity at this bargain figure and if you wait you will be forced to pay $2.25 instead of only 95c. Go to your leading drug or department store now, or fill out and mail the coupon. This is a real opportunity—don't delay!

NATIONAL CANDY CO'S

New Plant

The new plant of the National Candy Company at Gravois and Bingham, St. Louis, is one of the largest, most modern and sanitary candy factories in the world, having a daily capacity of 150,000 pounds.

Erected for the manufacture of candy, this new building is designed and adapted for that purpose. It is constructed of reinforced concrete with exterior brick walls ornamented with terra cotta, and provides a manufacturing space of 240,000 square feet.

The building is air regulated throughout; the labor-saving machinery and equipment is of the most modern type.

Sanitary conditions in the manufacture and handling have been given most careful consideration, every precaution being taken to assure results desired. Interior partitions are of glass and steel, while an air of wholesome spaciousness pervades every department of the plant.

Railroad tracks run directly into the building with the conveniences this affords on either inbound or outbound freight.

Products of this factory are now going to all parts of the United States and to foreign countries, its products including all kinds and types of candies. With more modernized production methods, National Candy Company service will meet the demands of its widening fields and growing sales.

MUTT, WHY ARE YOU READING BEDTIME STORIES OUT HERE IN THE COAL SHED?
I'M TEACHING THEM TO THE PARROT! HE CAN TAKE MY PLACE WHEN IT COMES TO READING LITTLE CICERO TO SLEEP!
"GOOD MORNING!" SAID SALLY DUCK TO MISTER RED ROBIN.
"GOOD MORNING!" SAID SALLY DUCK TO MISTER RED ROBBIN: URK!
I'LL FOOL THE OLD GIRL WITH THIS PARROT! WHEN I TAKE CICERO TO HIS ROOM I'LL CRAWL OUT OF THE WINDOW AND JOIN YOU AT THE CLUB. THE VOICE SHE'LL HEAR WILL BE THE PARROT'S!
O.K. MUTT!
NOW ALL YOU GOTTA DO IS ACT DUMB UNTIL IT'S BEDTIME FOR MY SON! GET ME?

O.K. MUTT!
MUTT, I'M SO HAPPY SINCE YOU TOLD ME YOU RESIGNED FROM THE LION TAMERS' CLUB! WHAT A HAPPY FAMILY WE ARE NOW!
POP'S A GOOD SCOUT!
YES, M'LOVE! A MAN'S PLACE IS AT HOME WITH HIS FAMILY AND NOT AT A CLUB! I'M A CHANGED MAN AND I DON'T MEAN PERHAPS!
FINE, MUTT!

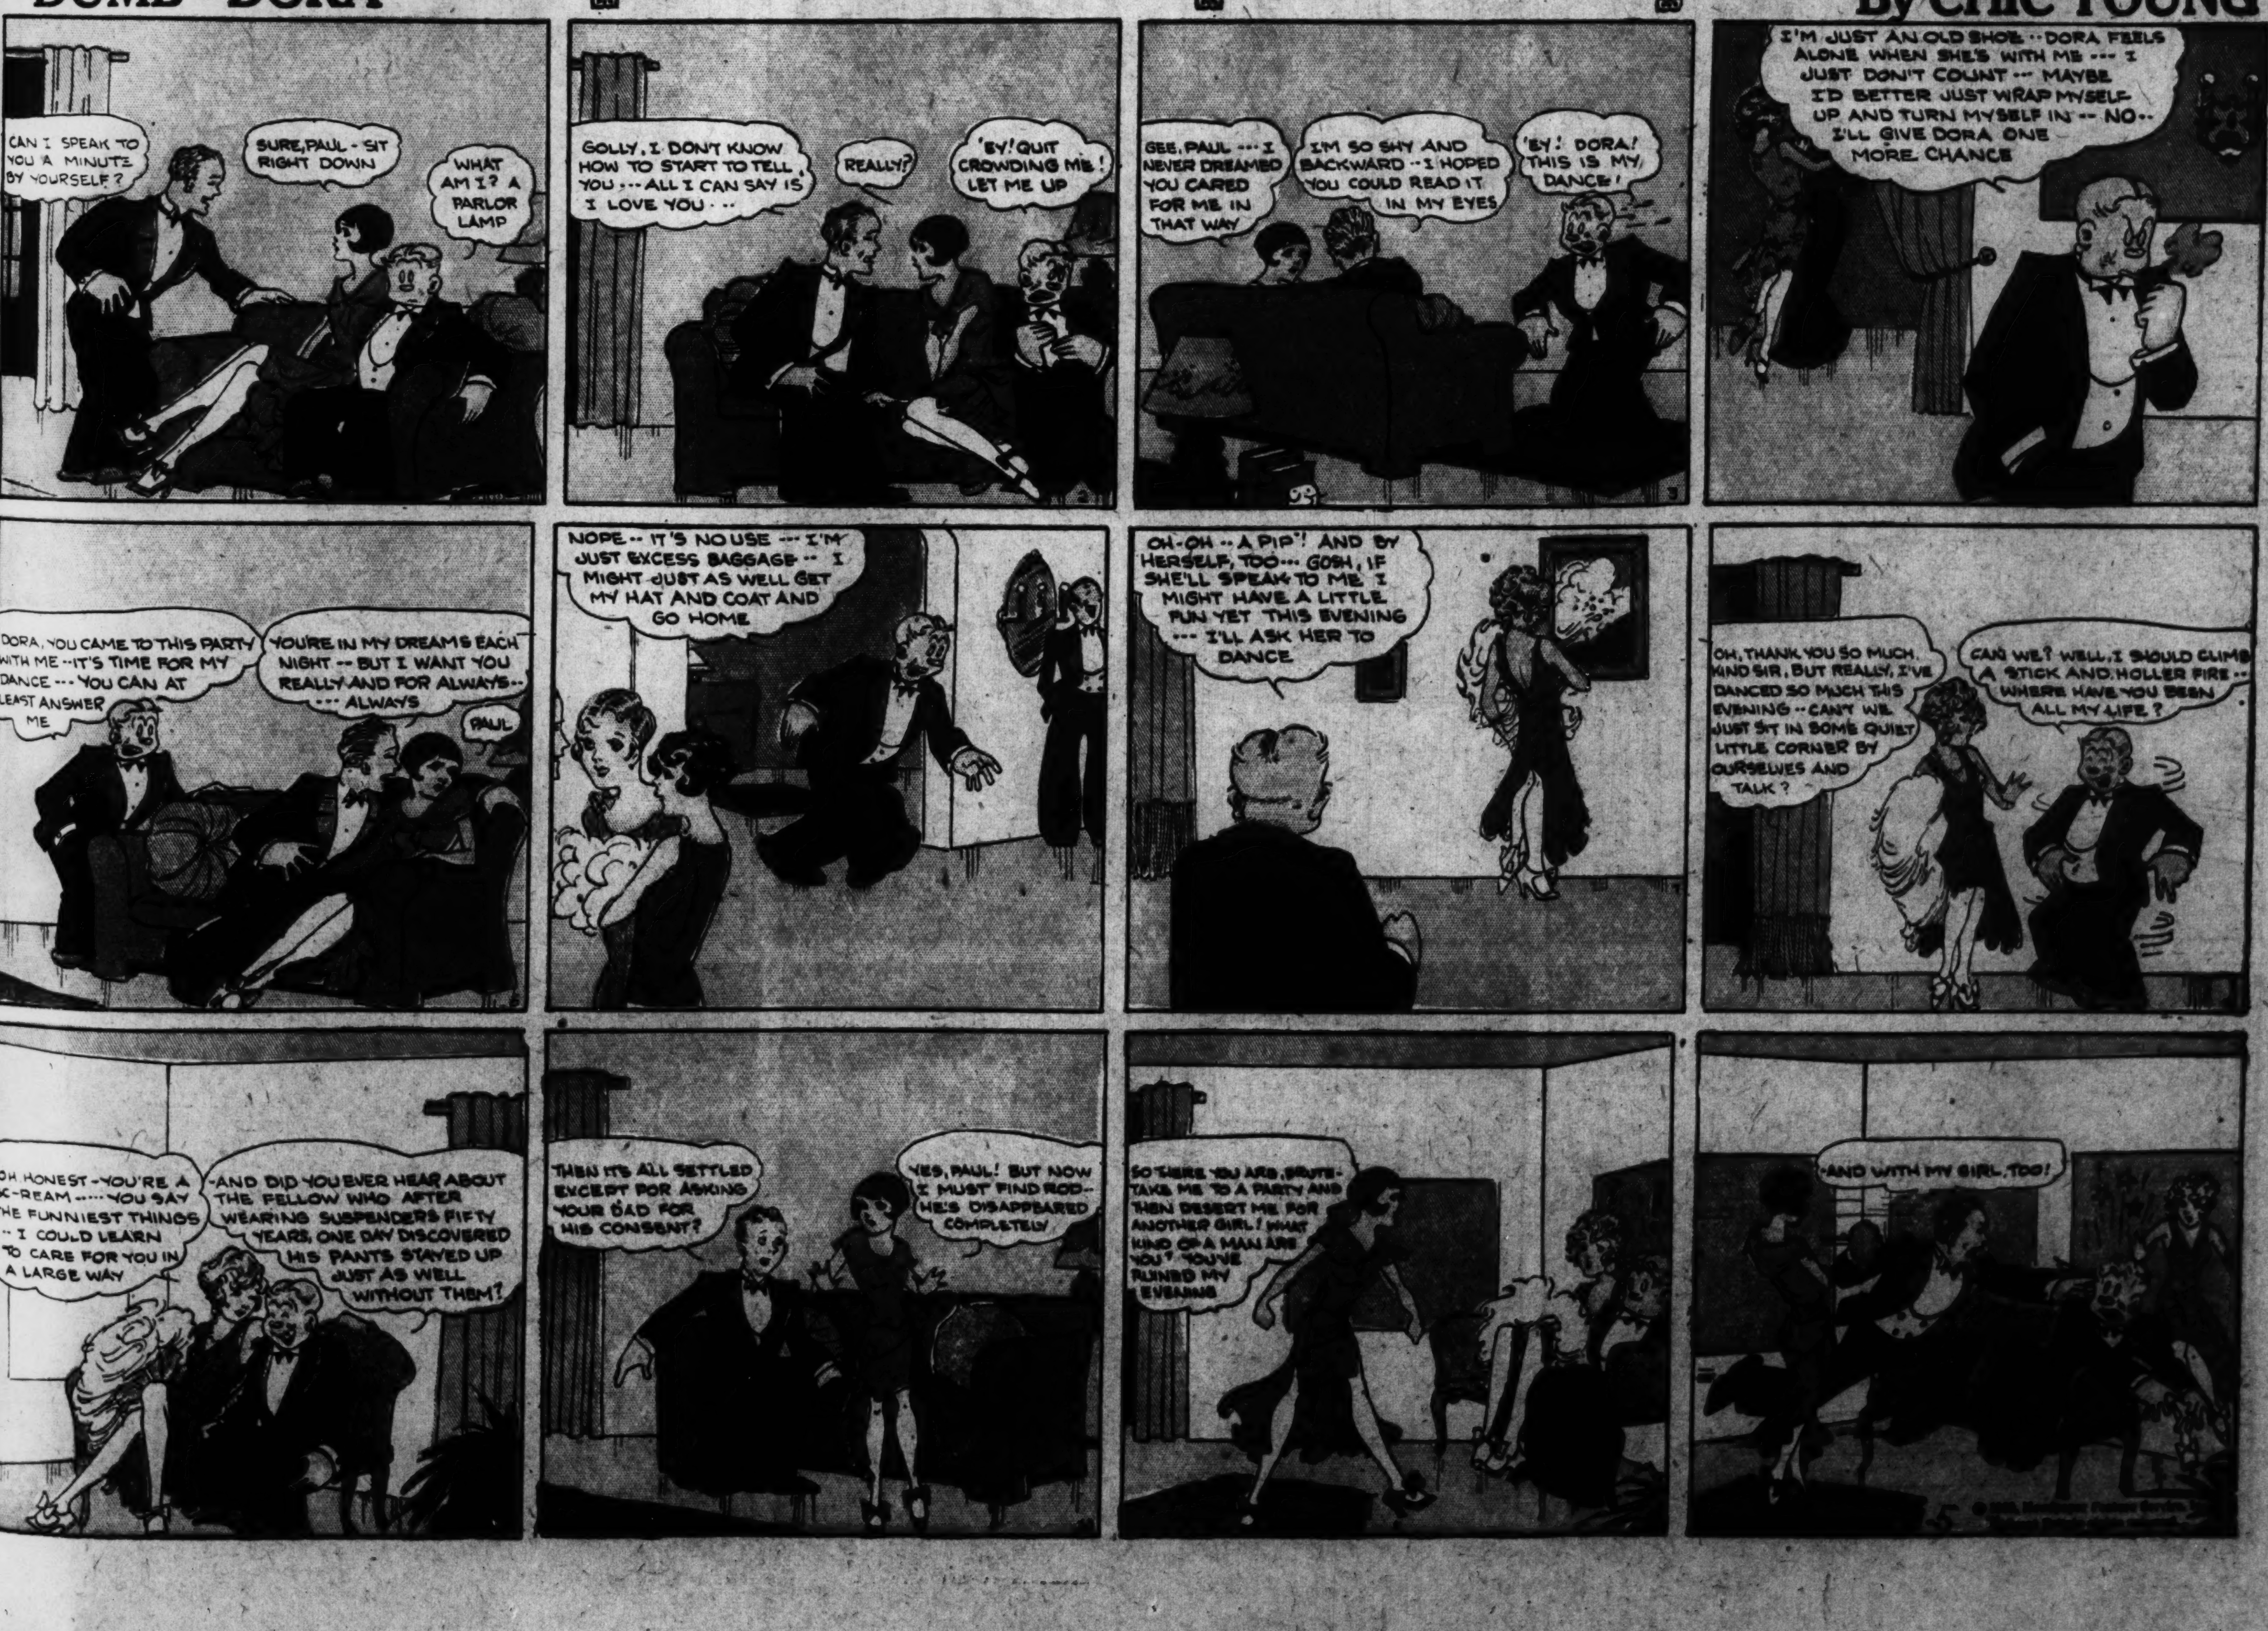
DUMB DORA

By CHIC YOUNG



CAN I SPEAK TO YOU A MINUTE BY YOURSELF?
SURE, PAUL - SIT RIGHT DOWN
WHAT AM I? A PARLOR LAMP
GOLLY, I DON'T KNOW HOW TO START TO TELL YOU ... ALL I CAN SAY IS I LOVE YOU ...
REALLY?
'EY! QUIT CROWDING ME! LET ME UP
GEE, PAUL ... I NEVER DREAMED YOU CARED FOR ME IN THAT WAY
I'M SO SHY AND BACKWARD -- I HOPED YOU COULD READ IT IN MY EYES
'EY! DORA! THIS IS MY DANCE!
I'M JUST AN OLD SHOE -- DORA FEELS ALONE WHEN SHE'S WITH ME --- I JUST DON'T COUNT --- MAYBE I'D BETTER JUST WRAP MYSELF UP AND TURN MYSELF IN -- NO -- I'LL GIVE DORA ONE MORE CHANCE
DORA, YOU CAME TO THIS PARTY WITH ME -- IT'S TIME FOR MY DANCE --- YOU CAN AT LEAST ANSWER ME
YOU'RE IN MY DREAMS EACH NIGHT -- BUT I WANT YOU REALLY AND FOR ALWAYS -- --- ALWAYS PAUL
NOPE -- IT'S NO USE --- I'M JUST EXCESS BAGGAGE -- I MIGHT JUST AS WELL GET MY HAT AND COAT AND GO HOME
OH-OH -- A PIP! AND BY HERSELF, TOO --- GOSH, IF SHE'LL SPEAK TO ME I MIGHT HAVE A LITTLE FUN YET THIS EVENING --- I'LL ASK HER TO DANCE
OH, THANK YOU SO MUCH, KIND SIR, BUT REALLY, I'VE DANCED SO MUCH THIS EVENING -- CAN'T WE JUST SIT IN SOME QUIET LITTLE CORNER BY OURSELVES AND TALK?
CAN WE? WELL, I SHOULD CLIMB A STICK AND HOLLER FIRE -- WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN ALL MY LIFE?
OH HONEST - YOU'RE A SC-REAM ----- YOU SAY THE FUNNIEST THINGS -- I COULD LEARN TO CARE FOR YOU IN A LARGE WAY
-AND DID YOU EVER HEAR ABOUT THE FELLOW WHO AFTER WEARING SUSPENDERS FIFTY YEARS ONE DAY DISCOVERED HIS PANTS STAYED UP JUST AS WELL WITHOUT THEM?
THEN IT'S ALL SETTLED EXCEPT FOR ASKING YOUR DAD FOR HIS CONSENT?
YES, PAUL! BUT NOW I MUST FIND ROD-- HE'S DISAPPEARED COMPLETELY!
SO THERE YOU ARE, BRUTE - TAKE ME TO A PARTY AND THEN DESERT ME FOR ANOTHER GIRL! WHAT KIND OF A MAN ARE YOU? YOU'VE RUINED MY EVENING
-AND WITH MY GIRL, TOO!
